

TAR HEELS WIN DEBATE CONTEST OVER GAMECOCKS

North Carolina Returned Winner Over South Carolina in Annual Debate

DECISION IS UNANIMOUS

The University of North Carolina was victorious over the University of South Carolina in the first intercollegiate debate of the year, which was held in Gerrard Hall Saturday night. The subject was Resolved, That a Constitutional Amendment be Adopted Giving Congress the Power to Pass a Federal Divorce Act. The affirmative was upheld by South Carolina the speakers being K. M. Smith, Colhoun Thomas and Geo. H. Wittcocky, while the negative was championed by North Carolina, whose speakers were Earle H. Hartsell, J. W. Deyton and Geo. C. Hampton. The judges were Mr. Gilbert Stephenson of Raleigh, Prof. G. R. Johnson of Greensboro and Prof. Quinton Holton of Durham. The presiding officers were Dr. H. H. Williams and Prof. Geo. McKie.

The speakers on both sides were forceful and convincing and the arguments presented were interesting. The argument presented by the affirmative pointed out that the causes for divorces are too loose and that divorces are increasing. The home is the foundation of government and anything that tends to dispute the government is a national issue. It is necessary that some form of divorce law exist. The only way to remedy present conditions is through uniform divorce law. Several legal illustrations were cited showing the evils resulting from a lack of uniform divorce laws, pointing out that men were married in one state and not married in another, that children were legitimate in one state and illegitimate in another. This causes a great social and moral evil. If forty seven states in the Union succeeded in working out uniform divorce law, there will always be one that will remain obstinate and will furnish a mecca for divorce and divorce seekers.

Mr. Wittcocky presented the solution that not every state would be forced to have a uniform system of causes but Congress would pass a maximum law stating the lowest number of causes that could be had, jurisdiction and administration being in the federal courts, but providing that these causes would not be recognized and in this way South Carolina would not be forced to grant divorces if they did not want to.

The arguments presented by the negative were that the Federal Government should not further infringe upon local self government; that a workable amendment is impossible since public opinion is opposed, and that the result would be only fruitless debates in Congress. That the number of causes a state may have for granting divorces does not govern the number of causes it grants and the results of the compromise is not a workable one. The basic evil is not the divorce, but the social and economic conditions that bring about (Continued on Page 4)

PEELER ELECTED PRESIDENT OF DI

Elections Characterized by the Lack of Usual Electioneering

"Them days is gone forever." This expresses the mildness and lack of fire which characterized the election of officers of the Di Society as compared with former times. A Di member of former years, when literary society elections were the biggest thing of the season, would have enjoyed his nap at the Di Hall last Saturday night. With one exception there was no political speeches and little heat to warm things up.

The following officers were elected to serve during the Winter quarter: President, C. A. Peeler; vice-President, E. D. Apple; Secretary, George Stephens, Jr.; First Censor, Morum, W. E. Crissman; Second Censor, Morum, Harold Lineberger; First Corrector, Spencer Murphey; Second Corrector, C. F. McRae.

Mr. Kemp B. Nixon, of Lincoln, of the class of 1905, and a former Di member, was at the meeting and gave a short talk.

EDDY CONCLUDES POWERFUL SERIES

Noted Religious Worker Concluded Series of Lectures Here Saturday

"In my travels around the world I have always observed that the gambling nations are backward nations, and the backward nations are always great gambling nations," declared Sherwood Eddy Friday morning in his address on Personal and Campus Problems, the third in his series of five addresses. "You students think that you are playing with chips or coins, but in reality you are playing with the issues of life, with character."

"There are three great principles, three tests of character," he said. "Ask yourself if you are truthful? If you are right, right in your relationships? If you are in earnest?" Basing his address on these three questions, Mr. Eddy spoke for an hour and a half on the problems of personal and campus life, speaking frankly and straight from the shoulder.

Mr. Eddy's subject Friday night was Honest Doubt, or a Rational Religion for a College Student. "Doubt," he declared, "is often a healthful sign. Every great scientific, philosophical, and religious discovery in the history of the world has been made by some doubter. Doubt often merely shows that the mind is working, and unsatisfied with the old is seeking a new basis of faith."

In the first part of the hour Mr. Eddy gave his own basis of faith in God, Christ and the Bible, declaring that he saw no conflict between science and the real religion, and telling why. The meeting was then given over to the answering of any questions which were collected from the audience by the ushers. Many questions were asked on religious, social and political questions, the far greater share being on religion and the relation between religion and science. Evolution and the Bible inspiration of the Bible, deity of Jesus, prayer, all were subjects of numerous questions.

"If Jesus had been living in America during the Great War, and had been included in the draft, would he have taken a gun and gone out to kill the Germans?" So ran one question. Mr. Eddy replied, "No I don't believe that he would. Neither hate, nor bullets, nor bayonets, nor poisonous gas, nor organized murder, were parts of Jesus' program."

At nine o'clock many questions were left unanswered. Mr. Eddy declared the meeting closed, but asked all who cared to do so to remain until he had answered the remaining questions. He was kept until 10:15 answering written and verbal questions.

Saturday morning the speaker gave the last of his series of addresses, speaking on the solution of all the problems which he raised. He briefly reviewed the world condition in Asia, in Russia and in France and Germany, with a million more men under arms in Europe than in 1913. He reviewed the strife, the greed and injustice in the industrial world. He spoke of the great personal problems of conduct and of faith. All these, he declared, had but one solution, and that was in the surrender of life to service and Jesus Christ. He that would save his life must fling it away in some great cause. Jesus was the only solution.

The Yackety Yack Managers Want Pay

The business management of the Yackety Yack has definitely set a date for the final payment for space in the Yackety Yack. All space must be paid for by February 15th or material will not be published. This is in accordance with the rule made by the Publication's Union at the first of the year.

The photographer will be in Chapel Hill on January 15th for the clean up trip at which time he will take all group pictures and finish up the individual pictures. All fraternity men who have not had their pictures taken are being urged by the Yackety Yack to have this done at once. Only men who have been duly initiated into a fraternity will have pictures published. The pledges will not have their pictures until after initiation.

THE ACTIVITIES BUILDING TO BE WELL ARRANGED

Rooms For All County Club Meetings and the Like Will Be Useful

TO HAVE LARGE LOBBY

The student of the fall of 1924 will very possibly get out of his bus in front of the Post Office, start toward the center of the campus, and stop before the present site of the old Inn to admire the magnificent Graham Memorial Building. The new structure will be of imposing size, at least 130 feet long. The general plan will harmonize well with the architectural scheme which has been worked out for all university buildings. Eighty feet of the front will be taken up by a large portico, fifteen feet broad, and beautified by slim Doric columns.

On entering through one of the three doors leading in from the portico, the returning student will find himself in a cool hall, parallel to the length of the building. He can turn to his right and walk to the end of this hall where he will find a large coat room and leave his coat and bag. Just behind the coat room is the office of the manor of the building. After retracing his steps to the center of the building, large doors invite him to step into the social room directly opposite the portico. Seven arched colonial windows on the far side of the room will meet his first glance. Looking toward either the right or left and of the eighty foot room, he will see immense fireplaces holding crackling four foot logs.

The walls will be oak panelled and the beamed ceiling low hanging in appearance. The floor will be of polished oak. Every detail of the room goes toward an impression of simplicity and comfort. Some of the boys already back from the recess will be gathered around the many tables or the fireplaces and reading magazines or smoking. This room can be used for many purposes on special occasions. It is suitable for large banquets, smokers, mass singing, or dances. At night it will be lighted by soft overhead lights and lights from wall plugs.

The next rooms to be visited will probably be those at the left end of the long hall. At this end is a large serving room, connected with the kitchen in the basement by a system of dumb waiters. This room will be used when banquets or smokers are served in the great social room. Just beyond this room is a rest room for women visitors.

Near the center of the hall are two staircases leading down to the basement and up to the second story. Turning down to the basement, the student will find a cafeteria in the same position and of the same size as the social room above. The usual cafeteria equipment will take up one end and a fireplace will heat the other. (Continued on Page 4)

CAROLINA IS PAID A GREAT TRIBUTE

Dr. S. C. Mitchell Calls Carolina Most Creative School in South.

At the dedication of the Walter H. Page Memorial Library at Randolph-Macon College at Ashland, Va., a most remarkable and well-deserved tribute was paid to the University by one of the two leading speakers on the program. This man was Dr. S. C. Mitchell, who at different times has been president of Richmond College, the University of South Carolina, and Delaware State College. In the course of his address he discussed North Carolina University: "The most creative institution today south of the Mason Dixon line is located at Chapel Hill, N. C." Dr. Mitchell is a historian of note and has had wide experience with the institutions of the Southern states. Knowing the institutions of the South as he does, he is probably the best qualified man in the country to make such a statement.

The library at Randolph-Macon College was dedicated to that famous North Carolinian who was the ambassador to the Court of St. James as he was one of the famous alumni of that institution.

STATE PROGRESS FEATURES ISSUE

Commerce Publication Deals With Progress in Highways and Fisheries

The last issue of the "North Carolina Commerce and Industry," a monthly publication of the department of Commerce, deals principally with state progress in highway construction and development of the finishing industries.

Mr. H. K. Witherspoon in an article entitled "North Carolina Builds Network of Highways" surveys the advancement of road building in the state from 1915 when the Legislature appropriated $10,000 and appointed a commission of seven men with the Governor as chairman to supervise highway construction and maintenance. After telling of the growth of highways up to the present time, this article concludes by saying that in a few years North Carolina will have a system of roads unsurpassed anywhere.

Mr. Walter J. Matherly is the writer of an article, "North Carolina Ranks High in Fishing Industries," in which he deals with the state's leading position in fisheries and of its rise to its present position in this industry. North Carolina is compared with the other coastal states of the nation in regard to production and value of its fish products. The state is now giving more attention to its fisheries than heretofore, and the future of North Carolina in that industry is bright.

DuBose Heyward's Lecture Postponed

The lecture by DuBose Heyward on "The Poetry Revival in the South," arranged for the evening of December tenth, has been postponed until next quarter. He will appear at Gerrard Hall on the night of January twenty-eighth. The committee on Lectures felt that it was necessary to ask for the new date because of the appearance of Louise Homer in Durham on the night of the tenth.

Mr. Heyward is one of the South's most prominent poets. His verse has appeared in some of the leading literary magazines of the country, and he and Mr. Allen, another outstanding Southern poet, brought out a book of their verse last Spring entitled "Carolina Chanson," published by MacMillan Company.

Mr. Walter J. Matherly of the Economics Department will leave next Friday for Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., on business. From there he will go to Furman University at Greenville, S. C. On Tuesday night, December eighteenth, Mr. Matherly will make an address in Rutherfordton, N. C., to the County Club. While in Rutherfordton County he intends to advise with the cotton mills at Spindale concerning their records and problems of labor turnover.

Those in the Infirmary this week are as follows: Ben Shepard, J. W. Barron, C. M. Pritchett, E. M. Anderson, and William Way.

CAROLINA MAN IS APPOINTED

T. J. Wilson 111 Receives Appointment for a Rhodes Scholarship

Thos. J. Wilson 111, instructor of French in the University has been recommended for a scholarship by the state committee on the awarding Rhodes Scholarships, according to an announcement by Frank Aydlotte, president of Swarthmore College, and secretary of the Rhodes trustees. Elections of the holders of these coveted scholarships were held Saturday in 32 states. There are 32 scholarships available each year, each state electing two years out of three. For the 32 appointments there were 357 candidates representing 145 colleges and universities.

Mr. Wilson received a wire Saturday night announcing his appointment, after he, together with the other candidates of this state, had interviewed the committee at Raleigh. He was graduated here several years ago, studied abroad for a while and returned here to take up an instructorship in French, which he has held for two years. While in college he made Phi Beta Kappa and was active along other lines as well.

The scholarship holders will enter Oxford in 1924. Each scholarship yields a stipend of 350 pounds per year and is tenable for three years. The purpose of Mr. Rhodes in founding the scholarships was to create a better understanding between the Americans and the English. For this reason it has been the policy of the Rhodes trustees to make the selections on the basis of (1) character and personality, (2) scholastic ability, and (3) physical vigor whether shown in participation in outdoor sports or in other ways.

Return From Meeting Of Southern Colleges

Pres H. W. Chase, Dean N. W. Walker, Registrar T. J. Wilson, Jr., and C. D. Snell, Director of the Extension Division, have just returned from the meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States at Richmond, Va.

Dr. Chase was elected to the executive committee of the Association and Dean Walker was elected chairman of the Commission on Accredited Schools of the Southern States.

The University has been a member of this association since its organization in 1895. Its purpose is to promote sound standards in education in the South. Its next meeting will be held in Memphis the first week in December in 1924.

December Issue High School Journal Out

The December number of the high School Journal is just off the press. The issue contains many very interesting articles, among these being "Some Neglected Factors Affecting Early Secondary Education in the United States," by Dr. L. A. Williams; "A New English Prose Test," by Dr. M. R. Trabue; "Simplified Method for the Calculation of the Fahrenheit Equivalents to Centigrade Temperatures," by professor A. C. Martin.

The various columns all contain quite a bit of good material. The editorial comment also contains a good amount of timely material. The December issue is a well filled-out and highly interesting issue.

The Publication Union held a meeting Monday night, the purpose of which was to go over carefully the financial status of the three publications. An approaching issue of the Tar Heel will carry a statement concerning the exact condition of the student publication fund. This report will be made quarterly that the students may know exactly how their publications fee is administered.

Dr. Zimmerman has returned from Watts Hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

The "intangible factors" in North Carolina's progress are enumerated by Mr. C. T. Murchison who tells of the remarkable balance and accord of the social and economic interests in the state.

CHARLOTTE WINS THE STATE TITLE IN HARD CONTEST

Sanford Scores First But Is Swept Off Her Feet By Charlotte Later

LARGE CROWD SAW GAME

The Gridiron Warriors of Charlotte High School emerged triumphant in their state championship fight with Sanford Saturday, for the first time in half dozen years. Winning the State high school football title 20 to 7.

Charlotte's smashing attack in the second quarter, due largely as a were used time and time again mixed with a few forward passes, turned the tide of victory. In this offense, Quarterback Eddy who scored two touchdowns, was the star.

Sanford scored her touchdown in the second quarter, due largely as a result of two fumbles by Charlotte backs. The Eastern champions held Coach Kirkpatrick's Westerners about on even ground in this first half, and took advantage of every break of the game. Charlotte was completely off color. In the second half, however, the new State champions made a brilliant comeback.

Eddy was by far the star for the winners, although E. Foard, Wilson, and Suttle, all played excellently. The punting of Suttle was one of the games outstanding features.

For the losers, Frank Oliver, full-back, played his best offensive game. He scored Sanford's lone touchdown, although the Frazier Brothers aided him with excellent work in the first half. H. Byerly tackle, was Sanford's star on the defense. He tackled several Charlotte backs behind their line of scrimmage and was by far Sanford's outstanding lineman.
