TAR HEELS DROP GAME TO STATE BY 8 TO 6 SCORE

the game and collected a total of four safe swats off Beal and Green, all of them of the one base variety. Besides featuring at the bat, Young gave the spectators a few thrills in the field by his running catches of high and hard hit balls off the bats of the Techmen. His snag of Wade's long liner in the second stanza started the stellar work for him. which he ably concluded by robbing Wade and Kidd in the final frame.

"Hat" Hatley collected his usual fourbagger of the afternoon in the fifth stanza, scoring "Moose" Tenney and Bob Sides and sending Beal to the showers. The little Tar Heel centerfielder hits the homers with a regularity which is nearly like clockwork. In every game he generally connects for at least one swat of the extra base kind, and the majority of them go for four bases. His fielding is brilliant at all times, although his fleetness makes hard chances seem Mackie and Jones were the only other Tar Heels to get more than one safe swat off the Tech pitchers, while Bill Dodderer connected for a two-bagger, the third extra base hit of the contest. Shuford, Mathewson, Wade, and Austin each collected two safe bingles for the Techmen, while one of Mathewson's went for three sacks.

The State College infield combination was one of the smoothest working affairs that has been seen on the home lot this season. They contributed two fast double killings to the feature column of the game. In the fourth stanza Mathewson the Tech second sacker, grabbed Westmoreland's fast roller and doubled Sharpe at second, throwing to first to cut off Westmoreland. In the seventh inning, Gilbert grabbed "Touchdown" Jones's fast grounder, crossed second to cut off Tom Young, and threw to first to eatch Jones for the double play. The Tech boys roamed far and wide over the infield grass, making only one bobble during the game, and pulling down drives that seemed labeled for safe swats while the Tar Heel infield played brilliant and poor in spots. Moose Tenney contributed one error to the miscue column when he let Westmoreland's throw to the sack ge taway from him in the fourth frame, while Tom Young, Bob Sides, and Bill Poyner each contributed bobbles to the column.

"Kike" Kyser came up to expectations and kept the spectators at the game continually laughing at his comical and unusual cheer-leading antics. "Kike" has instilled a pep and variety into the "vocal art" that promises to improve Carolina's cheering tremendously in the fu-

The University band was also on hand to help the Carolina squad win the game. They presented several new and popular selections during the afternoon and helped the spirit of the game won-

ORDER OF THE GOLDEN FLEECE TAPS ONLY FOUR MEN

Qualifications

"Men are considered for what they are and what they have done irrespective of personal likes or friendships," Fordham declared in part. "Party or groups allignments are not taken into consideration." Men are usually chosen who have excelled in the fields of scholarship, athletics, debating, religion or student government and any other outstanding chievement which deserves recognition It must not necessarily tap men at the top in each field, for only men of outstanding ability and achievement are taken in, it was pointed out.

At the conclusion of his explanation of the criteria for membership and ideals of the order a large crowd of spectators wedged into the hall and filled the gallery and rear benches to overflowing. The massive doors guarding the entrance of the ancient building swung slowly open to admit the two black-robed and hooded figures, bearing a fleece of golden wool across their shoulders, and they marched in with impresive demeanor. They paused in the rear of the hall, but soon began stalking through and around the aisles amid an atmosphere of tense excitement.

These two representatives of the highest honor to which Carolina studens may aspire performed their work with deliberate slowness, conveying to the whispering and craning audience the impresiveness of the ceremony. They circled the hall several times, holding at irregular intervals conferences with Bill Cocke and others in the rear.

Hackney Tapped First

Finally, with excitement at its peak and after prolonged waiting, one of the robed figures jerked Bunn Hackney, a junior, out of his seat and pinned the gold and white ribbons of the order upon him amid the roaring applaus.

Before the next man was tapped the argonauts again circled the audience and held another whispered conference in the rear. This time Beverly Raney, Junior who is graduating this year and who has thus been classed both as junior and senior, received the prolonged applause of the students when the colors were pinned upon him.

In more rapid succession, but in length of time which nevertheless seemed interminable, Walter Crissman, a senior and Ad Warren, junior, were tapped.

As the two figures met in the back, walked straight to the platform and passed on out of the hall after the tapping of the fourth man, an appaling silence settled on the audience. Surely more than four would be tapped, for wasn't it the usual custom to get at least ten men? But no, that was all, and thus ended the hopes and anxiety of a small group on the campus, the fullfillment of the aspirations of four others, and the speculation of the greater part of the student

"A man enters upon a course of mathematics, Latin, science or evenphilosophy and he may do but one or two things In his pursuit of knowledge he may de velop technical dexterity which in science approaches near perfection and he may easily do this and nothing more." But he may also develop discipline, Dr. Rondthaler stated, and to his technic will be added accuracy of thought from mathematics, vision and interpretation of literature from languages, and he will not be thes ame man he was.

"This curricula then is the new found Ichemy of college life; this is that which takes men with their frailties and weaknesses and makes of them men of character and achievement."
