Is That Nice, Girls?

The debate on Co-education between the women of the British Student's Union and the men of the University of North Carolina brought out some interesting points. The boys illustrated one of their arguments by their method of debate. They claimed that girls handicapped boys because of the chivalry which is expected, or rather demanded. Then the girls proceeded to prove the statement by walking all over the poor boys with sarcasm and invective, while the gents continued to refer to the adversary as "my fair opponent." There ain't no justice! The high point of the evening, however, was the statement by one of the Britishers that the girls don't want the boys in their colleges, and not vice versa. This is a new construction of an idea with which all good Carolinians are carefully nurtured. We always thought we were conceding a place to the girls, and now the girls, or rather the debaters for them, turn around and say they are allowing us to stay, and are not particularly enthusiastic about it. Now we are mad. And all you gals can go buy your own chocolate shakes, and take your own notes on class. As for dates—well, that's a different matter.

For Better or Verse

A contributor this week supplies a reply to a poem by "Peter Gray," which appeared in these columns not long ago. We reprint it in case you have overlooked it.

TANTRUM

When people annoy me
By giving advice
And planning my future,
I'm not very nice.
My brow wears a wrinkle,
My heart a chill,
I swear I'll be naughty,
And some day I will!
I want to be managed,
I want a strong man
To love me and boss me—
For no one else can.
So make up your mind
If you want me to stay,
Or I'll go to the devil
By running away.

—Peter Gray.

RETORT

They say you are easy to look at,
A blonde with blue that entrance;
They say you are gay and delightful
And stand on your own when you dance;
And too—that your form is proportioned,
A gift from the gods up above;
And its whispered about as a secret,
You know all there is about love!
They say you are poised and so graceful,
That you're dainty and chic and small;
They say you can drink without thinking
You were made to carry it all;
And so, when you're next in tantrum,
Provided I've heard what is true;
I ask, you allow me the pleasure
Of going to the devil with you!
L'Envoi
I'll smoothe from your brow the deep wrinkle,
And bring to your heart a warm glow,
Just give me a ring—I'll be ready,
Aye!—Ready and rearing to go!

—Newt.

This Is a System

A gentleman of our acquaintance who is taking courses at this University is married. His wife is charming, and the gentleman is busy. So busy, in fact, that he found he could not attend all his courses (he was taking more than four) all the time. So he sent his wife to one of his classes with instructions to take notes for him which she did. He did the outside reading and took the exams—and she did the rest, which meant attending classes. It all worked out fine, and the Professional Ogre gave the Studios Prince a nice fat A. We find we are taking too many courses this quarter for complete freedom, and besides we never did like eight-thirties. Does anyone know of a wife who will work the above system with us?

WARNING

Listen, kid, you can do
Just exactly as you please,
Run your fingers through my hair
Sit upon my bending knees.
Wrinkle up my brand new suit,
Drop on me a scalding tear.
This you can—but kid, you've got
To quit biting at my ear.

And that's all for today.
Thank God.

TAR BABIES MEET MARYLAND NEXT

Will Be First Chance for Student Body to See Frosh in Action.

After a long layoff the Tar Babies will return to action this Saturday when they meet the University of Maryland freshmen in Kenan Stadium. While the varsity is playing Davidson at Davidson, the student body here will have its first chance to see Coach Belding's team play. So far this season the freshmen have played only two games and won both of them. Their first encounter was with Duke. In this game the playing of Shorty Branch was outstanding and mainly through his efforts the Tar Babies scored their touchdown which gave them a six to nothing victory. The second game on their schedule was with the freshmen of Princeton at Princeton on October 13, the week that Carolina played Harvard. The strength of the Princeton team was unknown but the Carolina freshmen entered the game determined to win and after holding their opponents scoreless were able to push over a touchdown and win another six to nothing victory. Slusser was the outstanding Tar Baby and led the offensive.

It has been a month since their last game and most of this time the coaches have been running the squad against the varsity in scrimmages. In carrying out the Notre Dame system of having the varsity run against the plays of their opponents and thus learn to break them up, the freshmen have been very useful to Coach Collins. The freshman coaches divided their squad into four teams of practically equal strength and proceeded to teach each of them a different system of play. Due to this procedure no regular team has been picked which can be called the regular freshman team. However, on the basis of their showings in the first two games of the season, quite a few men can be picked who are almost certain to see service Saturday. The ends who have shown up exceptionally well this season are Morrison, Reid, Rannels and Johnson. Buchan and Alexander have been the tackles to start the two previous games. Dunovant and Hutcheson are due to see action at guard and Red Gilbreath will probably start at center. In the backfield Coach Belding has a world of good material. Shorty Branch, who has starred in each of the games so far, will run the team and probably give the fans quite a few thrills with his broken field running. Bill Suggs, a Chapel Hill boy, has been running at fullback most of the time and, if he is not troubled too much by a broken finger sustained in scrimmage a few days ago, will most likely start at fullback. The halves seem to be the uncertain positions in the backfield. Quite a few men have shown up well and the ones who will be picked to start will probably be doubtful till just before the game. Slusser, former Augusta Military star, has been the outstanding ball carrier this fall and at present seems to be the surest of starting at half. The other half has been filled at various times by a number of men. Houston has seen quite a bit of service in this position and will probably play Saturday. Chetty, all-state quarterback last year when he starred for Lexington High, has been shifted to half by Belding and has proved to be a threat against the varsity. Other halves who have been doing well and are likely to get in the fray are Yost and Frazier.

Foster to Visit

Mr. John E. Foster, head of the personnel division of the W. T. Grant Co., is making a visit to the University the last of this month or the first of December to interview all students that are interested in going into retail merchandising, and in making connections with the W. T. Grant Co.

Mr. Henry Johnston, head of the bureau of vocational information, urges all those that are interested to come by 204 South and leave name and address in order that he may be able to arrange an interview for them. Mr. Foster is especially interested in seeing those that are graduating at Christmas or next spring.

Gift To Preserve Memory of Darwin

The recent presentation to the British Association for Advancement of Science of Down House in Kent, the home of Charles R. Darwin, where he wrote "Origin of Species," has brought to light hitherto comparatively unknown facts regarding the private and family life of the great scientist.

The house is given to the society for preservation as a memorial to the famous developer of the theory of evolution. The donor, Dr. George Buckstone Browne, Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons and of the Society of Antiquaries, acquired the property from Professor Charles Galton Darwin, F. R. S., grandson of the naturalist, and not only transferred it to the society of scientists but accompanied the gift with a liberal endowment amply sufficient for the maintenance and preservation of the property for all time.

Dr. Browne represents the fifth generation of a medical family in which son has succeeded father. It is said of him that in the early days of his profession he was so assiduous in his application that for twenty-seven years he had neither a free day nor a holiday. At University College he won medals in anatomy and chemistry, the gold medal for practical chemistry and the Libson gold medal in surgery. For a time he was house surgeon of the University College Hospital, taught anatomy under Professor Vines Ellis and collaborated with Sir Henry Thompson, one of the most distinguished surgeons of the Victorian era.

CAROLINA CROSS COUNTRY LOSES TO THE DUKEMEN

Heel Frosh Avenge Varsity Defeat by Licking Baby Blue Devils.

Carolina lost a bit of its prestige in cross country activities when it suffered a reverse at the hands of Duke in Durham on Saturday last. The score was 17-39, low score winning. Duke's victory broke a University record of straight victories which had extended from 1922. Carolina's defeat was the first one for a Tar Heel distance team in a dual meet in six years.

Hope for a Carolina victory lessened by last-minute handicaps of injury and sickness. Cox, second ranking man on the University team, sustained an injury in his knee during the last days of practice which kept him out of the race. Captain Henderson, Carolina's best bet, was sick with a cold at the time of the meet and was thrown from his usual winning stride. Bausom and Wrenn, together with Fisher, star of last year's championship team, have been more or less on the injured list this year, and evidently had not rounded into shape in time for the long run. When these handicaps are taken into consideration, it is unfair to judge that Carolina's 1928 representatives in cross country are below the standards set by completely victorious distance teams of former years. It is expected that Coach Dale Ranson will have his proteges in a condition by which they can be justly judged when they enter the Southern Conference meet here in a few weeks.

Duke's victory marked its fourth win of the season, having previously beaten Guilford, Navy, and Washington and Lee. The Blue Devils were boasted as a strong team, and, indeed, they made a creditable showing. Four of the first five places went to the Duke runners. Captain Doxey, Ashworth, and Woodard, all of Duke, finished first with hands joined together. Their time for the four-mile run was 21:29 3-5. Barkley, Carolina, followed them across the line, with Simon, Duke, scoring fifth.

The defeat of Carolina's varsity by Duke was partially avenged by the decisive victory of the University freshmen over their rivals from Duke's first year class. The Tar Babies outdistanced the Blue Imps, defeating them by the score of 20-38. Phoenix and Pierce, Carolina, tied for first place in the two and one-half mile run in a time of 14:35 3-5.

PRE-SEASON LOOP ARTISTS SHOWING EXCELLENT FORM

Hackney and Satterfield, Running Mates, Look Good for Another Season.

Basketball practice has got under way with the zest that has always characterized pre-season workouts in University athletics. About forty men have responded to the early call for training, and each afternoon Coach Jim Ashmore is running them through intensive drills. Only four lettermen are returning this year, and around these, University coaches are faced with the problem of rounding out a squad which might creditably uphold Tar Heel records in basketball circles. Captain Rufus Hackney and Henry Satterfield, running mates at the forward positions, look good for another excellent season, their last under Carolina colors. Price and Cately, veterans at guard and center, should prove mainstays on this year's varsity. There are a large number of inexperienced contenders for berths on the team who give promise of developing into good basketeers.

Due to the lack of experienced candidates for the team this year, pre-season prospects do not seem so favorable. However, there are weeks of practice to precede the first basketball game, and in that time, it is expected that talent will be discovered and developed. North Carolina is the holder of enviable records in Southern Conference circles, and the campus is anxiously anticipating another victorious season in basketball.

DANGEROUS ADMISSION

(Greensboro News)

Fielding Yost in denying a report that he is leaving the University of Michigan admits that he is a member of the faculty. He can afford to do that now, but he never would have confessed while he was on the make as a football coach.
