Fraternity Rushing Scheduled March 25

Formal rushing in the Greek letter fraternities for the spring semester will begin Friday night, March 23, and continue through Sunday night, March 25, announced Bill McKenzie, president of the Interfraternity Council.

The council decided on these dates and set the rushing hours as 7 to 10 o'clock Friday night, 2 to 6 Saturday afternoon, and 7 to 11 Sunday night.

Rush chairmen of the fraternities are required to submit their invitations and their $50 rushing bonds to Dougald McMillan not later than 3 o'clock Wednesday, March 21. Fines will be imposed on any fraternity who is late in submitting these invitations and bonds. After the formal rushing period, bids must be submitted to Dean E. L. Mackie before 2 o'clock Monday, March 26, before a rushee may be pledged.

Rush Rules

President McKenzie urges that all fraternities pay special attention to the rushing rules and abide by them strictly. He stated that recently there has been entirely too much illegal rushing because the fraternities were not fully acquainted with the rushing rules as set up by the council. Special effort has been made to post these rules on the campus and in all the fraternity houses. McKenzie suggests that all fraternities carefully read all of the rules and if there is any part which they do not understand, they should contact him.

The number of men on the campus who have not been through a rush period on this campus are now under a strict silence and no member of any

Di Senate Chamber Livens Up As Liberal Debate Is Heard

By Mildred Kresnik

Condemning South building on one side and singing the praises of an institution which measures liberal by most yardsticks, the Di Senate chamber came alive Wednesday night when senators and visitors expressed their opinions, barring none, concerning Carolina in one of the most spirited meetings this year.

Whether the University of North Carolina is liberal or not is still a debatable question depending on one's point of view. However, as far as freedom of expression is concerned, that freedom was in full glory at the Di session. The administration makes no restraint in this regard and as guest visitor Chancellor R. B. House remarked, "Every student has the right to make a damned fool of himself."

The occasion of the meeting was the inauguration of the Di's 409th president, Robert Morrison who reviewed the history of this organization which had its beginning as a debating society with twelve members in 1795.

Midst the portraits of former Di members who became great in state and national life, Morrison related the

She is a graduate of the University of Kentucky, with A.B. and M.A. degrees and is now working on her doctorate degree in personnel administration.

Tar Heel Staff Supports Wallace For Editor Post

The Tar Heel staff meeting in regular session Thursday afternoon voted for Jimmy Wallace as the staff nominee to the editorship of the Tar Heel.

It has been customary in the past for the staff to voice their opinion on the matter publicly. The staff is made up of both University and Student Party members. However, the members are asked to name their choice in consideration of the one most capable to direct them as they will have to work under the man the student body elects.

Little discussion took place on the matter and Wallace was accepted by acclamation in the staff meeting.

Flagler, Lemly Complete Job On Y Today

With this issue of the Tar Heel, Fred Flagler and J. Preston Lemly, Managing Editor and Business Manager of the Tar Heel respectively, will complete their duties and turn their posts over to new PU Board appointees who were determined too late for publication in this issue.

Flagler was a member of the Tar Heel staff last year and served as desk editor, reporter and later sports editor. Prior to entering Carolina he was sports writer and reporter for the High Point Enterprise in his home town, High Point. Elected to the PU Board last spring, Flagler left Carolina last summer to work on the Enterprise. He returned to Carolina at the start of the Indian Summer session and took over as Managing Editor, replacing Sid Bost and John Kerr, who were handling the position as co-editors. Flagler will retain his post with the PU Board until the spring elections.

Lemly joined the staff in October and took over the business department when it was in a bad state of existence and pulled it up from the bottom to the top. Hailing from Salisbury, Lemly has had considerable experience dealing with selling and buying. New to the Tar Heel this year, Lemly has, according to the PU Board, handled his job with surprising success.

Solons Approve Johnstone For Yack Editor

Group Selects Holdover Members

Smooth sailing . . . probably the calm before the storm . . . characterized the Student Legislature Thursday night when two bills were unanimously passed and two more went through with only one dissenting vote.

The office-eligibility bill which was expected to call forth quite a vigorous discussion was tabled until the next session. Following a joint meeting of the faculty extra-activity eligibility committee and 10 student body representatives, a plan was agreed upon by which the pending bill was drawn up. Since the bill was only written Tuesday night, the Legislators had not had time to consider it, so discussion and voting was held over until next Thursday night.

Gene Johnstone was unanimously approved as the acting editor of the Yackety Yack with the stipulation that he carry out the major plans of the retiring editor, since Johnstone was recommended by Cookie Maretz, outgoing editor, who was elected by a large majority of the student body.

Regular hold-over members to the Legislature for the coming year were unanimously elected as follows: Emily Aliton, Mavis Mann, A. B. Smith, Jon Tuthill, Allan Pannill and Charles Fulton.

To prevent the confusion that usually confronts a new Legislature despite the advice of the hold-over members, a parliamentary committee See SOLONS, page 4.
