SP Names Flagler Choice For Editorship Of Yack

All major slate positions on the Student Party ticket were officially filled last night when Chairman Rene Bernard announced that Fred Flagler would run on the SP ticket for editorship of the 1946 Yackety Yack.

Flagler, a veteran journalist, will oppose Gene Johnstone, UP candidate for the post.

Active on campus publications for the past two years, Flagler has been sports editor and acting editor of the Tar Heel. He recently resigned his position as managing editor of the Tar Heel after having served approximately six months. A native of High Point, he has worked on the High Point Enterprise, a daily paper, and has been a contributor to the Carolina Magazine. Throughout all of last year Flagler was a member of the Publications Union Board, the group which controls finances for all the publications including the Yackety Yack. Flagler is the newly elected head of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, succeeding Fred Crider in that position. He has been a member of the campus cabinet during the past year.

In addition to the Yackety Yack post, the Student Party announced the filling of two positions now vacant on the debate council. Nina Guard and Gloria Chapman have been named as candidates to these positions which will be filled in the April 5 elections.

Miss Guard is at present the treasurer of the Dialectic senate and a member of the Debate squad. She has been a champion debater and took part in the 1944 Grand Eastern and Dixie Forensic tournaments.

Gloria Chapman, is a member of the International Relations Club and the Dialectic Senate, and was on her high school debate council. Before coming to Carolina she attended WC and while there she was a member of the IRC and a member of her house council.

Party chairman Bernard also said that the SP would announce its candidates for all the other offices to be filled in the April elections within the week. These offices are: three civilian representatives to the Student council, one V-12 representative, and two Marine representatives; all the student legislature posts with the exception of holdover posts and those which are selected by individual dormitories; and the SP selections for the Publications Union Board. Three vacancies will have to be filled on the PU Board.

Deadline for all nominations has been set by the Legislature elections committee as March 29. Thus far, the SP has nominated Bill Crisp for president of the student body, Wally Andrews for vice president, Dougald MacMillan for secretary-treasurer, Douglass Hunt for speaker of the legislature, Jimmy Wallace for editor of the Tar Heel, Stanley Colbert for Mag editor, Ed Twohey for president of the CAA, and Del Leatherman for vice president of the CAA.

Thursday Deadline For Candidates

All nominations of candidates for offices in the campus elections which are slated to be held April 5 must be handed in to some member of the elections committee before Thursday, announced Ed Gaither, chairman of the elections committee. It is absolutely necessary that these nominations be turned in before the Thursday deadline or a candidate will be ineligible to run for office.

Frenchmen Threw Wrench Into Works Of Nazi Machine

By Marjorie Ezzelle
Among the contingent of French cadets stationed here in the Pre-Flight School are about twenty who have caused the Nazis much "inconvenience" by their acts of sabotage through the underground movement of France. Names and places are necessarily restricted, but a few typical cases may illustrate the daring and heroism displayed by these cadets against Nazi rule.

Having been called up twice to work in Germany's slave labor battalions, Cadet A escaped the first call through use of counterfeit papers, and the second time, with things hotter than ever, joined the Maquis. His job was to sabotage the French railroads and German communication lines.

Dramatics Group Plans Performance for Navy

Freshmen Meet Tomorrow To Organize Class

Council Plans Frosh By-Laws

Acting upon the request of the freshmen themselves, Charlie Frank Benbow, president of the student body, has called a meeting of all freshmen, both military and civilian, for 8 o'clock tomorrow night in Gerard Hall. Purpose of the meeting is, upon approval of the freshmen, to organize the freshman class.

On the meeting's agenda is the setting up of a class constitution and nomination of class officers. A tentative constitution will be presented by the Freshman Friendship Council of the YMCA.

Feeling that freshmen were poorly orientated and were not taking part in student extra-curricular activities as they should, the council, a combination of the former YW and YMCA councils under the leadership of Bill Lloyd and Pat Kelly, started a movement to get the class organized.

First move in the drive was the appointment of a committee to investigate the legality of class organization. The report of this committee was that the class could be organized and that a class constitution should be presented to the Student Legislature in the form of a bill.

The executive committee, with the help of the entire council, then drew up a constitution and presented it to the Ways and Means committee of the Legislature.

The bill was killed in this committee since it contained a clause providing for representation in the Legislature, a violation of the campus constitution. However, it was explained by Libba Wiggins, committee chairman, that without this clause the class could be organized without Legislature approval.

German Youth Big Problem, Avers Writer

Says Status Quo In Homeland Gone

Prefacing his talk on "Postwar Germany" with the remarks that most of us here in the United States have got to quit thinking of the Germany of yesterday being the Germany of today and tomorrow, Martin Hall, German-born and German-educated journalist, said that the youth of Germany probably constituted the greatest social, economic, political, and what is probably the most important of all, the greatest psychological problem of the peacemakers.

Mr. Hall, who was presented by the Council on Religion in Life Sunday night at eight o'clock in the Graham Memorial main lounge, went on to say: "We have got to stop thinking that the status quo of Germany is still here. It is not. It is gone forever. I do not say this with any particular note of pride in my voice. As a matter of fact, many things of the lost status quo which I admired greatly have been lost or destroyed by Hitler or this war."

Commenting on conditions which are likely to prevail after the war's end, Mr. Hall said that he believed that a civil war within Germany would inevitably follow the end of the war in Europe. "According to recent reliable estimates," Mr. Hall said, "there will be some 40,000,000 persons at the end of the war who will be homeless as a result either of being prisoners-of-war or of having been in slave-labor camps."

Mr. Hall said that the transportation system of Germany has been practically destroyed due to the constant allied bombings of railroads and oil factories, consequently no trains or cars will be able to carry these homeless millions to their erstwhile homes, so they "will start walking." "Along the way," he said, "there will be thousands of guns lying idle on the ground and these disappointed millions will pick them up and start fighting with those who they think are less fortunate."

He said he was just pointing up the background of his speech to dramatize one of the most important, but at the same time one of the least thought-of and least clearly-understood See GERMAN YOUTH, page 3.

UNC Debate Team Scores Double Win At Atlanta Meet

Carolina's debate team, Fred Chamberlain and Vincent Williams, debating the negative of the resolution that the Dumbarton Oaks proposals be adopted, scored a double victory March 23 and 24 over strong Georgia Tech and Emory University teams in Atlanta. The judges favored the arguments presented against the proposals in both contests and awarded the decisions to the UNC team.

A third Carolina debate in Atlanta on March 24 featured Bill Crisp and Bob Rosen debating the affirmative of the national question of "Compulsory Labor Arbitration." This contest was a non-decision debate with Agnes Scott College.

The Debate Council will meet tonight at 7 in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial to select teams to represent the University in the Grand Eastern tournament to be held in Charlotte on April 5, 6, and 7. The topic for debate at this event will be the national question of "Compulsory Labor Arbitration."

All students are eligible and invited to participate in tryouts for the Charlotte trip. Tryouts should consist of constructive speeches of approximately five minutes demonstrating the contestant's knowledge of the subject and speaking ability.
