Women Selected For Duty In Fall

The coed student advisory program gram for new women students, got underway Thursday night with a mass meeting of over 50 advisers.

This meeting was the first of three scheduled to train the advisers, who were selected by the Orientation Committee from a wide list of applicants. The committee co-chairmen, Ruth Duncan and Dot Phillips, opened to $750. Since its passage three bills the session and then turned it over to Linda Cobb, head of student advisers for the coming year.

Following the election of Betty Edwards as secretary of the organization, Tommy Slayton, outgoing advisory head, made a short talk.

Outstanding among the speeches of the evening was that delivered by Bill Crisp who received loud applause as he left the rostrum. Crisp pointed out that millions of men had given their lives in suppressing Nazism, belief in which Friederich held as late as six years ago. Crisp declared that Nazism was not on trial, nor was Friederich on trial but rather the wisdom of the American people in sending a man of questionable views to re-educate the Germans.

Leading defender of Dr. Friederich was Banks Mebane who read passages from several of the professor's works, as well as quotations from letters by friends written in his behalf. Mebane admitted that Friederich's views were pro-German in 1938, but not pro-Nazi, and protested that Dr. Friederich was also a staunch believer in dimocracy and in the democratic way of Mebane was supported by Rene Bernard, who expressed the belief that the job for which Friederich was originally hired as English translator would not be one where his once held opinions would jeopardize the peace program. Bernard denounced the action which would "crucify an honest
