coming book on the mandate system under the League of Nations. Under the trusteeship council, instead of a colony's being controlled by only one country for its benefit alone, as at present, the colony will be controlled by a trusteeship council, composed of United Nations representatives, for the benefit of all. Above all, there is no guarantee that any area will be placed under the Council.

In their report dated May 25, Hunt and Sgt. Clifford state that we Americans are still too suspicious of other countries for our own good. They call specific attention to the what they call "deliberately slanted, whatever the facts" articles in Time magazine with an anti-Russian attitude. They say, "Most of the newspapers fail to give the Russian viewpoint a hearing."

Attend Forum

"Tuesday afternoon we attended a forum for organizational representatives on the subject of 'Economic Planning in the Economic and Social Council.' Many worthwhile things were said, but on the whole, the panel evaded the $64 question: 'What should the Economic and Social Council do to meet some of the problems which confront it?' The panel merely suggested some of the problems.

One of the best sessions we've had an opportunity to attend came this afternoon (May 25) when Assistant Secretary of State Nelson Rockefeller spoke on Inter-American affairs. He discussed the Argentine question and the Act of Chapultepec, saying that, since the Act of Chapultepec has to do with only armed aggression, it does not conflict with the UNCIO's Security Council. He said that the UNCIO would have first place in the settlement of Inter-American-Eastern Hemisphere disputes, but the the Pan-American Union comes first in settling Inter-American disputes.

"One of the most inspiring speeches we have heard in more than a week was delivered by Dr. Sadigh Shafagh, member of the Iranian (Persian) delegation to UNCIO, be-department here delivered the after dinner speech at the banquet on the "Heritage of the University."

Wally Dinsmore acted as toastmaster and Winkie White presided in the place of Senior Class President John Waldroup who is in the Infirmary with the mumps.

Following the banquet Mary Stringfield gave the final senior piano recital of the year in Hill Hall.

After the recital Freddy Johnson played for the senior dance in the Woman's Gym from 9 to 12 p.m. Highlighting the dance was the figure in which executive heads and committee chairmen of the senior class participated and the final, candlelight dance.

Seniors gorged themselves to their stomachs' delight at the picnic Saturday which ended the festivities.

fore ordinary American (adult) citizens in the Commerce high school here in San Francisco attending a forum sponsored by the International Center.

States Iran's Beliefs

"He said that Iran believed in the ideals of freedom, democracy and Peace. It has a primarily agrarian economy and needs both industry and the effects of industry to improve her producing power and raise her standard of living.

"Speaking for the Czechs, Earnest Sture, staff member of the Czech Government Information Service, told the same audience that heard Dr. Shafagh that they want, first, political independence, second, security from aggression and third, a chance to develop economically."

Hunt and Sgt. Clifford concluded their reports by saying that the nations will have to discard the old codes of nationalism and self interest if we reach the UNCIO goal of "independence, security and economic freedom for all" because it is "impossible to build an international wall with nationalist bricks they just won't stick together."

The Tar Heel will publish summaries of these reports as they arrive.

Ullman Delivers Talk On Afterlife Of Roman Author

The after-life and times of the Roman historian Livy were the subjects of Dr. Berthold-Louis Ullman's talk which concluded the current Humanities Division lecture series in Gerrard Hall Tuesday night.

Introduced as the greatest Latinist in this country, a leading author, and a man who can use the double dative correctly, Dr. Ullman soon impressed the audience with his knowledge of facts and fancies which have surrounded Livy and his written works.

Livy died in 17 A.D. leaving behind him a 142-volume history of Rome. During the next few centuries interest in his works waned, but with the coming of the Renaissance and the discovery of certain bones reputed to be those of Livy, interest was revived. Dr. Ullman pointed out, however, that even at the time of their discovery there were certain scholars who doubted that the bones found were actually those of the great historian. These skeptics were overwhelmed by an indignant public.

Some of these bones were stolen by souvenir collectors. Others were destroyed by a religious fanatic. Those left over were placed in a mausoleum built by a group of public-spirited citizens of the town.

With the settling of disputes over the bones of Livy, however, came reports and rumors of complete sets of his bulky history. Arabic translations were reported. A set of the volumes was said to be in Ethiopia. Several were rumored in Germany. People from all over the world told about sets that were lost through fire, flood, and theft. One man reported dreaming that the long-discussed history was to be found on the moon.

Dr. Ullman gave a very comprehensive list of forgers, monks, sailors, and thieves who were in some way connected with the post-mortem adventures of Livy. An impressive though occasionally tiresome list of people, places, and dates was saved from being too dull by the wit of the speaker in their presentation.

In closing, Dr. Ullman expressed the hope that the shades of Livy would rest in eternal peace to which the audience of faculty members, townspeople, and six students added a fervent "Amen."
