Gerrard Oratory Opens Vigorous Campaigns

Leatherman CAA President; Hight, Woodhouse On PU Board

Student Group To Recognize New President

Hight, Woodhouse To Fill Temporary PU Board Vacancies

At the first meeting of the summer session, the student legislature voted to recognize Del Leatherman as permanent president of the Carolina Athletic Association and to hold an election for the office of vice-president of Carolina Athletic Association. Bill Hight and Margaret Woodhouse were elected to fill the temporary vacancies on the Publications Union Board. Election of new members of Publications Union Board was necessary in order that the Publications Union Board might have a quorum for some business that is coming up before the end of this term.

Leatherman, acting president of the Carolina Athletic Association, and Brinkley, chairman of Legislature Elections Committee, presented their interpretations of the controversy as to whether or not a vacancy existed in the presidency of Carolina Athletic Association.

Leatherman Made President

Leatherman, who was vice-president of the Carolina Athletic Association and took Bill Ward's position as president when Ward left, maintained that there had never been a vacancy in the presidency. Writing incidences in which the Vice-President of the United States had taken over upon the death or absence of the President, Leatherman stated that he had been acting as president of the Carolina Athletic Association during the three months of Ward's absence and that his name was registered with Coach Fletcher. After saying that he would like to remain as president of the Carolina Athletic Association, he stated that there is a vacancy in the vice-presidency which should be filled.

Brinkley, chairman of the Legislature Elections Committee, stated that in his opinion an election for president of the Carolina Athletic Association should be held. A bill was passed by the legislature last semester stating that a vacancy occurring in any office should be filled by a special election. He said that when the bill was considered by the legislature, he had considered the clause inadequate and had proposed an amendment saying that an election should not be held every time a vacancy occurred. The amendment was defeated, however, because of the prevalent sentiment for frequent popular elections. Concluding, Brinkley stated that the legislature has the power to pass a bill requiring an election for president and he disliked a change in legislative policy.

Party Chairmen Announce Line-Up For The Elections; Candidates Give Promises

Carolina campus politics got underway in earnest on Wednesday night as each candidate made a three-minute speech in Gerrard Hall. Both party chairmen have promised vigorous campaigns until the elections on Tuesday.

Walt Brinkley, member of the legislature and chairman of the board of elections, announced last night that voting booths will be open in the YMCA and Kenan Dorm from 9 o'clock until 5 on Tuesday. Swain Hall will have booths for voting between 12:30 and 1:30 and 6:30 and 7:30.

Frosh Council Outlines Plans For New Year

The Freshman Friendship Council held its second meeting of the year last Monday night, July 16, at 7:30 in Graham Memorial.

Woodson Broughton, president of the Council, outlined his plans for the formal organization of the Council and appointed committee chairmen and personnel. The committee chairmen are as follows: Vance Anderson and Tommy Lockhart, social committee; Bobby Burgess, publicity committee; Dodge Geoghegan, program committee.

At the next meeting, Monday, July 23, Coca-Colas and doughnuts will be served. The purpose of this meeting will be mainly for the freshmen to meet and get to know their fellow classmates. Entertainment, such as several piano solos and a short skit, is being arranged.

Due to the slight attendance at the last meeting, a membership drive is now underway. An attempt is being made to increase and ascertain the number of freshmen who desire to be regular members of the Council.

Regular meetings of the Council are held every Monday night at 7:30 in the Parker Lounge in Graham Memorial.

Department Issues Commissions Plans For Foreign Officers

For Foreign Officers

For Foreign Officers

The department of State has issued plans for commissions as foreign officers for both men and women. Information can be obtained from the Bureau of Military and Vocational Information. This branch of service has just been opened and is recommended by Stettinius.

The Tar Heel election party will be held Tuesday night in the lounge of Graham Memorial, beginning at 9:30 in the evening.

Printed in this story are statements from the party chairmen and statements from the candidates, giving their qualifications.

Student Party

Bill McCarthy, civilian town candidate for Legislature:

If elected to the Legislature, I shall strive at all times to:

Orientate new and former students in the Carolina way of life, present and future.

Bring the students together to work united as one student body.

Keep the work of the Legislature before the students in order that both may profit and a better student government may be developed.

Present, in a non-partisan fashion, the ideas and problems of town students to the Legislature for prompt action.

Frank Ross, candidate for student council:

The main points of my platform are a more extensive orientation program for new students, both freshmen and veterans, who are now coming to the campus in ever-increasing numbers and a closer cooperation between the various student organizations in order that a more concerted line of action may be taken.

I believe that this cooperation is essential if Carolina is to maintain its place as one of the few schools in the nation where students enjoy so much freedom of thought and self-government. There is no surer way of losing our present position than by ignorance or half-hearted action.

Les Cooke, Marine candidate for Debate Council:

If I am elected to serve on the Debate Council, I shall do everything within my power to promote increased interest in campus forensics. Debating, at the present time, has reached one of the lowest points in our history. I believe that Carolina

Dorm Council Meets; Fills New Offices

The Inderdormitory Council had its second meeting of the term on Wednesday afternoon, July 18, at 4:00 o'clock. The meeting, which was held in Alumni, was called in order to acquaint the new members with the duties and functions of the Council, and to elect officers.

It was the first meeting attended by new members, who by virtue of their recent elections to offices in the various dormitories became members of the Council. The men were urged to become acquainted with each other and with the older members. President Jimmy Wallace explained the purpose of the Council to the men and outlined the duties and responsibilities of the members.

At the close of the talk by Wallace elections were called to fill the offices of vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and representative to the Legislature. The three men voted into these positions were all from Steele. Pete Long won the vice-presidency, Don Witter was elected secretary-treasurer, and Ray Jeffries was chosen to represent the Council in the Legislature.

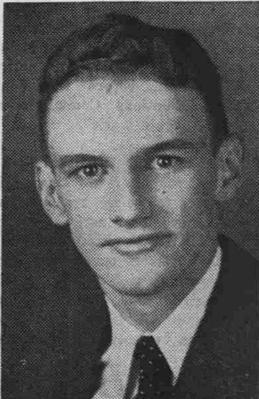

The selection of officers was the last order of business and the meeting was brought to a close after it had been completed.

University Janitors Haven't Given Up Pay Boost Fight

By Tom Corpening

"We haven't given up yet," stated Leroy Clark yesterday concerning the janitors' request that the University raise their salary to a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour. Mr. Clark, chairman of the Grievance Committee of CIO Local 403, represents the janitors employed by the University. He said that the present wage of 45 cents an hour is not enough to meet increased living costs. At the time the Tar Heel went to press the representative of the Administration could not be reached for an official statement.

Mr. J. A. Williams, Assistant to Business Manager, is carrying on the negotiations with the janitors. He was out of town and could not be reached for comment. Other officials of the University remained non-committal, since Mr. Williams is handling the case and has the facts.

Speaking further, Mr. Clark said: "We have asked for a raise because we need it. Everybody knows that living costs here are higher than in most places. They (the University Administration) claim that there'll be a bonus coming soon. We have no assurance of a bonus."

Old Base Rate

"The old base rate was 37½ cents an hour," Mr. Clark said. "Then when the U. S. went to war, we got a 'war bonus,' raising the pay to 45 cents an hour. On July 1, 1945 the 'war bonus' was consolidated with the base pay to establish a new 'base rate.' Now we want to obtain a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour. The consolidation was really a cut in salary. The 'war bonus' was not subject to deductions for Social Security."

Knight Speaks Friday At Carolina Inn On History of University

The next Sesquicentennial event at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will be a dinner session featuring the contribution of the University to public education scheduled at the Carolina Inn Friday evening, July 27, at 7 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by Dr. L. R. Wilson, Director of the Sesquicentennial. Principal speaker will be Dr. Edgar W. Knight, Kenan professor of education, who will trace the University's role in public education, in this state.

The dinner, which will be informal, will also serve as a feature of the Summer Session program.

Yack Seeks Staff; Flagler Calls Meeting For Tuesday Evening

The Yackety Yack will solicit students for positions on the publication for 1946 when Editor Flagler calls a meeting of the staff next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30.

Photographers, artists, lay-out men, and advertising and business prospects are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Editor Flagler plans to start actual work on the publication by the first of next month and he especially would like to have those people who will attend Carolina next fall to be at the meeting so that the staff organization can remain constant to a certain degree.

Five Editors Yell "Copy!" As Chiefs Descend On TH

This feature was brought about by a chance remark made the other day by a professor of journalism. The professor said "editors should never cuss their reporters because if the reporters had as much brains as the editors there wouldn't be any need of editors."

The professor should have been in the Tar Heel offices last night. Working side by side, in complete cooperation, were no less than the editors, past or present, of five college newspapers. The din that resulted from five editors, all yelling "copy!" at the same time, is something to hear.

Dick Seaver, member of the V-12, is a former editor of the Scuttlebutt, at Howard College. He is now a member of the Tar Heel sports staff.

Miss Betty Anne Ragland, down from WCUNC for the summer, is the editor-elect of the Carolinian, student newspaper at that branch of the Greater University. She is serving this summer as the assistant managing editor of the Tar Heel.

James Sanford, present managing editor of the Tar Heel is former editor of the Brevard College Clarion.

Over from Duke was Miss Ann Smoot, coed editor of the Duke Chronicle. She is in Chapel Hill this summer taking courses in journalism. She will take her knowledge back to Durham this fall and apply it to the Chronicle.

After trying to make a count of the former high school editors now on the staff of the Tar Heel, this reporter gave it up as an impossible job. He reached the number twelve and stopped.

Pros

Several students, who were professional journalists before entering Carolina are now on the staff of the Tar Heel.

Among them are Howard Merry, who used to edit the sport pages of the Augusta Chronicle and Harrison Tenney, who put in a stretch on his hometown paper in Trenton, New Jersey.

Such a college journalism gathering probably won't take place again for a long, long time—and on such friendly terms.

The fifth editor? The Tar Heel's editor, of course, Bob Morrison.
