

Tar Heels Invade Tennessee For Game Today

CAROLINA CHATTER

By
CARROLL POPLIN

Allen Replaces James As Mural Head

It seems as if Carolina will be knocking helmets with Tennessee for four more years, since Coach Bob Fetzer, director of athletics has announced that the Tar Heels and the Vols have arranged a four year football agreement.

The way the contract is arranged is that Carolina will play in Knoxville in 1946 and 1948, while the Vols will invade Kenan Stadium for games in 1947 and 1949. The Tennessee-Carolina rivalry dates back to 1893 when the Tar Heels thrashed the Volunteers 60-0. The series at date gives Tennessee an edge 7-6 and one contest ended in a deadlock. The teams last met in 1936 with Carolina emerging with a 14-6 victory.

Today might be a different story. The Vols, star-studded with Rose Bowl veterans, have lost only to Alabama this season and are rated as decided favorites against the Blue and White club this afternoon. But nevertheless you can depend on Coach Carl Snavely's gridmen to put up a stubborn fight even though the chips are down. With a week of idleness behind them and a few breaks today, the Tar Heels stand a chance to pull one out of the bag. Let's hope so.

Walter James, popular outgoing intramural director, has certainly done a splendid job at this post since he took over the position after Coach John Kenfield left last spring. Walt is stepping out as intramural head to work on his physical education thesis. Incoming director Marvin Allen is a well selected man for the job. Marvin was at Carolina before he entered the service and is back with a discharge, ready to take over where James left off.

Fall basketball practice is in full swing and Coaches Ben Carnevale, Pete Mullis and Doc Seward are pushing drills in preparation for the Tar Heels' December engagements which includes games at Madison Square Garden and other northern spots. Jim Jordan, still ailing from a shoulder injury is working out daily and the sparkplug of last year's Southern Conference champs is expected to be ready to go within a week.

Coach Carnevale welcomed several new additions to his cage crew this week, when some new players reported here in the NROTC program. Jim White, second string center on Carolina's '42 club is back in harness after serving in the armed forces.

Claude Crocker, one-time hurling ace for Carolina and more recent of the Brooklyn Dodger mound staff is attending the Oak Ridge Military Academy as a student and assistant coach in basketball and baseball. Crocker pitched for Burlington last season and was sent to the Dodgers at the latter part of the year. Clyde "Fireball" King, also a member of Brooklyn's hurling corps and former Tar Heel twirler is back in school and is out for Jayvee basketball. King is of varsity calibre, but his baseball contract prohibits him from playing varsity sports.

ODDS AND ENDS: As has been the custom at Carolina, freshmen are asked not to wear their high school monogram sweaters. . . . Bill Wall, member of the Baby Phantoms last season, has entered Duke in the V-12 program and the Mt. Airy lad might see some action on the hardwood for the Blue Devils. . . . Thanks to the Physical Education Department on their wise ruling that students who have had PT for six terms are excused from the program.

FOOTBALL PREDICTIONS: The top game in the nation today will be the Notre Dame-Navy scrap, which pits two unbeaten teams together. This columnist thinks the "Fighting Irish" will be too much for the Middles and on that assumption we pick Notre Dame by a touchdown. . . . Georgia Tech is voted to take Duke, not because of prejudice, but due to the fact that the game is being played in Atlanta. The score should be close though. . . . The N. C. State-V. P. I. game is expected to be a thriller and we tend to lean toward our brethren in Raleigh, but don't give any points. . . . Glancing over a few of the other football games throughout the country we favor Michigan over Minnesota; Maryland over William and Mary; Alabama over Kentucky, well who wouldn't?; Army over Villanova, that's a sure bet; Ohio State over Northwestern; Penn over Princeton; Rice over Texas Tech; Auburn over Florida; Texas A&M over Arkansas; Washington State over California and Appalachian over Guilford. Don't let these predictions stump you, because your guess is as good as ours.

Tag Football Tourney Starts Monday

Grid Activity To Last Until December 7

Wrestling Event Is Next on Slate

Under the guidance of Marvin Allen, newly appointed intramural director, the fall mural program will be launched on Monday afternoon with tag football being the activity.

Allen, succeeding Walt James as head of the department met with the intramural managers last Wednesday night and mapped plans for the fall term.

Twelve Teams

Approximately twelve teams were represented at the meeting, but a larger number of participants are expected to enter the tag football event which starts anew the race for the intramural cup which is given each year for the team compiling the most mural points.

The tag football will be divided into a fraternity and dormitory league and each team will play five games before the activity will draw to a close on December 7. The play-offs are slated from December 10-14.

Starts at 4:30

The opening round of the football tourney will start promptly at 4:30 on Monday afternoon and schedules will be distributed by the intramural department today to each dorm and frat house.

Nine players will compose each team and an unlimited substitution will be allowed. No blocking will be permitted and tagging will be done between the waist and shoulders with one hand. Only five players can be on the line of scrimmage and four in the backfield at all times.

Two Periods

The game will consist of two 20 minute periods and each team will be allotted three times out each half. A team has six plays in which to score. No outsiders will be able to play on the fraternity teams, but the dorms can use one player outside the dormitory.

A wrestling tournament will be staged following the completion of the tag football meet on December 10. Intramural basketball is expected to get underway in January.

Football Schedule For Rest of Season

Remaining games on Carolina's grid schedule include contests with the following:

Nov. 3—Tennessee, at Knoxville.
Nov. 10—William and Mary, at Norfolk.
Nov. 17—Wake Forest, here.
Nov. 24—Duke, at Durham.
Dec. 1—Virginia, here.

Tom Gorman, above, is expected to pace the Tar Heels against Tennessee at Knoxville this afternoon. Gorman, NROTC trainee from Philadelphia, Pa., led the touchdown drive in the last three minutes of play in the Cherry Point encounter that gave Carolina a 20-14 victory.

Cross Country Team Has Four Remaining Meets On Schedule

Coach Dale Ranson's cross country team with four meets remaining on their schedule will be minus their co-captains Doug Erath and Harry Holden when the runners tackle the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech next Saturday.

Both Erath and Holden received their commissions and departed from Carolina last week. The two runners paced the Carolina harriers all season and their loss is expected to be felt at the next track engagement.

Good Record

The Tar Heels have a record of three victories against one setback thus far this season. The impressive wins have been over Duke 20-46; Georgia Tech 18-41; and Cherry Point 20-39, while the Naval Academy outran the locals.

Those who will carry the burden of running in the coming meets include Bob Dodson, Art Lamb, Frank Hatch, John Strait, Bob Eagle, Jack Hester, George Harris, Allen, Hobkirk and Bolch.

Remaining Slate

The remaining meets for the season are with Georgia Tech, November 11; Duke, November 14; N. C. State, November 17; and Virginia, December 1.

The Carolina trackmen took a 20-39 decision from Cherry Point's cindermen and are pointing now for the Georgia Tech meet. In the event with the Leathernecks, Fenton of Cherry Point finished first with an impressive time of 18:43.5. Following behind him in order were Doug Erath, 19:23; Harry Holden, 19:45; Art Lamb, 19:49; Fred Hatch, 19:51; Bob Dodson, 20:01, all of whom aided Carolina's low score. Finishing after Dodson were Murphy and Brown, both of Cherry Point; Strait, Allen, of Carolina and Martin and Metcalfe of Cherry Point.

Running unofficially for Carolina were Eagle, Harris, Hobkirk, Hester and Bolch.

Officials Are Needed

Marvin Allen urges that all boys interested in refereeing tag football games each afternoon, drop by Room 307 in Woollen Gym either today or Monday.

Carolina Goes Into Contest As Underdog

Snavelymen Hope To Upset Vols

By Irwin Smallwood

After a two-week layoff for final exams, the Carolina Tar Heel men of the gridiron will battle the Rose Bowl Tennessee gridders in Knoxville this afternoon in the third big intersectional game of the season for the Snavelymen. Kickoff time is 3:30 E.S.T.

Two former prominent men in the lineup will be absent when the Tar Heels take the field today, Tom Colfer, sparkplug passer and backfield man, and Ed Twohey, starting guard, who have both been commissioned and assigned to duty in the Navy at Norfolk. For Colfer, it will more than likely be Tom Gorman, who paced the touchdown drive in the last three minutes of play against Cherry Point for a 20-14 win two weeks ago. Don Clayton, who has seen a lot of action right along this year, is likely to be in there plenty today, and there is a chance he may draw the starting bid at tailback.

In place of Twohey at guard will be Sid Varney, rugged little performer from Powell, Pa., who has been the fill-in man all season at the guard spot. Varney has been giving Twohey a battle for the starting position for several weeks now, and he fits into the berth well. Too, Andy Karres, who played as alternate guard with Tank Marshall in 1942, is back and is set for duty at the same position.

For the third time this season, Carolina will go into the battle as the underdog, having been in the same position against both Georgia Tech and Penn. Tech downed the Tar Heels by one lone touchdown after being outplayed, and Penn swamped the locals by seven touchdowns. It will take a surprising upset for the Tar Heels to triumph today, as they are facing one of the strongest teams in the south, one that played in the Rose Bowl last year and has nearly all its team back. Too, the Vols have had their bad day this season, and they should be in tip top form for the Tar Heels in the battle on home ground for Tennessee in Knoxville's Shields Watkins field.

Injuries will be hampering the operation of the Snavelymen somewhat this afternoon, with Chuck Ellison, starting left end, under the weather and unable to play. Too, Burl Bevers, center, is on the injured list, as is Mike Rubish, right end, with an injured hand. Rubish, however, is very likely to do a lot of playing, having a good chance to start the ball game. Bob Cox is the other end vielding for the end position.

In place of Ellison will be Bill
