MERGER

from the same source. The great saving to be achieved from combined research programs as well as the elimination of the duplicating courses offered by the two schools would, in a few years more than offset the original cost of transfer.

Opportune Time
With the current tremendous increase in the attendance at State and Carolina it becomes apparent that if consolidation is to be ever achieved, now is the last opportune time. It will soon be necessary for the state to increase the facilities of the components of the University. If much more money is put into the plant at State College, it will not be economically feasible to transfer State to Carolina.

Perhaps the two strongest arguments of all those in favor of consolidation were expressed very well by a certain freshman who, when confronted with the suggested merger, stated "Gee we wouldn't have to go all the way to Greensboro every weekend — and gosh what a football team we could have." been a great friend of the University as well as of the state he served. Many members of the University administration and faculty including President Frank Graham, Chancellor R. B. House, and J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association, attended the funeral services.

MURPHY

Murphy had been confined to his bed ever since July 4, 1945, when he suffered a critical heart attack. Murphy was born in 1872, the youngest of 10 children. He is survived by his widow, the former Maude M. Horney of Guilford County, a son, Spencer Murphy, editor of the Salisbury Post, a daughter, Mrs. Peter Leland Henderson, of Haworth, N. J., and a brother, Captain Edgar Murphy of Columbia, S. C.

University Press Director Experiences Colorful Career

By Sam Summerlin
Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, III, who recently assumed his new post as director of the University Press, has had a colorful career since leaving Carolina for Oxford University as a Rhodes scholar. He has, in turn, been professor, editor, and commander in the U. S. Navy.

Born and brought up in Chapel Hill, Dr. Wilson attended the University and graduated in 1921. He became an instructor in French and took his master's degree in 1924.

As a Rhodes scholar, he studied at Oxford University and took his Ph.D. there. Personally, he liked the British people very much and thinks that the Rhodes scholarships are proving their worth by giving Americans a close association with the English and an insight into their ways and customs.

After leaving Oxford, Dr. Wilson returned to Carolina and served as an assistant professor of French and secretary of the Department of Romance Languages.

In 1930 he began his career in publishing with Henry Holt and Company, first as foreign language editor and then as manager of the college department and vice-president.

From there he went to Reynal and Hitchcock. He served as director of the college book department and vice-president of that firm for two years until, in 1942, he entered the Navy.

Although his career in the Navy was far removed from the book world, Dr. Wilson considered it one of the most interesting experiences he ever had. Soon after he entered the Navy, he was sent to the Pacific and attached to the carrier "Enterprise," one of the world's most renowned fighting ships. Asked if he were ever scared during any of the "Enterprise's" numerous engagements, he replied that he was a bit "shaky in the knees" during the fury of the Battle of Santa Cruz, the fight in which the carrier

"Hornet" was sunk. In particular, he remembered the time when he lost all of his clothes, due to a bomb which passed through the top deck into the hangar deck (where he was stationed) and blew the officers' quarters to smithereens.

After nearly 11 months at sea, during which he won four battle stars and the "Enterprise" was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation, with star, Dr. Wilson returned to the United States. For a short while he taught in a school for naval officers, but in the summer of 1944 he was assigned to the carrier desk in the Bureau of Aeronautics in Washington.

Navy Releases New V-5 Regulations

The Office of Naval Officer Procurement has announced that candidates who are between 18 and 23 years of age and who will successfully complete two full academic years at an accredited college by March 1, 1946, may now enter the Navy's V-5 flight training program. Special requirements are listed for the 18-21 year age group. Young men interested in becoming aviation cadets may contact the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, 1320 G Street, N.W., Washington, 25, D. C.

"I'm so sorry, it was all my fault."

"Not at all, Madam. I was to blame myself."

"But I insist the fault was mine. I was on your side of the street."

"That may be true, but, my dear madam, I am responsible for the collision. I saw you coming blocks away and had ample opportunity to dart down a side street."

"Lost Colony" Drama Resumes Production In Manteo This Year

A North Carolina tradition, interrupted by the war, will be restored in July, 1946, with the resumption of perpetual performances of Paul Green's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "The Lost Colony."

Mr. Green's epic, which deals with the poignant tragedy of the earliest settlers of Roanoke Island, who were literally swallowed up by the New World, will be given a spectacular production in its renewed version. The sea itself will be used as part of the setting and a device has been perfected to push aside the palisades which serve as a backdrop to the stage. In this new magnificent version, the original plans which Mr. Green had in mind when he wrote the play in 1936 to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the original settling, will finally be realized.

"Lost Colony" is staged by Mr. Samuel Selden of the Dramatic Arts department and calls for a cast of two hundred. It utilizes the music and dances of the original Elizabethans as well as the dancing of the American Indians who inhabited the place. Casting will begin in June, as the native Roanoke Islanders are assigned to relive the parts of their ancestors.

By a special act of the North Carolina Legislature the "Lost Colony" will be played forever on the tiny, historical island.

Cornelius O. Cathey Returns To Carolina

Lt. Col. Cornelius O. Cathey, who has just returned to his teaching duties in the History department, was promoted to the rank of Colonel in the Adjutant General's Department of the Army just before he began his terminal leave, it was learned today.

Colonel Cathey, who is still on terminal leave, has completed more than five years in the Army including 37 months overseas in the Caribbean Defense Command and European Theaters where he served as Adjutant General of the Antilles Department and Assistant Adjutant General of the Headquarters XXIII Corps, respectively.

Always Chasing Rainbows," an oldie which is making its comeback via the musical "Dolly Sisters." It may pass for the James fans but there is nothing exceptional here for others. There are and will be better versions. "Baby, What You Do to Me" is typical James stuff with a so-so vocal by Kitty Kallen.

Xavier Cugat will make more than just "South-of-the-border music hounds happy with his "Walter Winchell Rumba." The tune is not only catchy and cute but the arrangement is definitely top-drawer. You won't have to be fond of the Latin American rhythm in order to enjoy this one. "Oye Negra" on the other side is just like hundreds of other Cugat pieces, however.

RECORD - OF - THE - WEEK:
"Slowly" is a cinch to hit the Hit Parade high and soon, too. It is a pleasant fox-trot ballad to which Kay Kyser has given special treatment. Michael Douglas and a group called the Campus Kids handle the words ably. You might as well make up your mind to like this one because you'll soon be hearing it on every juke in town. Reserve side is "I Don't Want to Do It Alone" in which vocalist Lucynn Polk asks politely for a little lovin'. (Columbia).

He gazed admiringly at the beautiful dress of the leading chorine. "Who made her dress?" he asked his companion. "I'm not sure, but I think it was the police."
