

Educators End Meet At Carolina

Meet Is Attended By 300 Teachers

The 1950 Conference on Elementary Education, attended by some 300 teachers, supervisors, principals, and superintendents of North Carolina schools, held its three-day annual sessions at the University this week.

Dr. Bess Goodykoontz, associate U. S. Commissioner of Education, was the principle speaker at the opening meeting held in the Naval Armory Monday morning.

A "great revolution is taking place in our elementary schools, with emphasis now being on the interest, value and use of what is being learned, rather than on generalities, definitions and principles which were formerly being stressed," Dr. Goodykoontz stated in her talk on the problems facing elementary education today.

"It used to be that obedience was stressed and now we stress teaching the child to plan and think for himself. We must know each child as an individual and help him create a wider range of interests," she continued.

Playmakers Announce Cast For Opening Of New Show

The cast of "Born Yesterday," a play by Garson Kanin which will be presented here by the Carolina Playmakers July 13, 14, 15, and 16, was announced here this week by Director William MacIlwain.

The feminine lead of Billie Dawn will be played by Robin Stockdale of Kalamazoo, Mich., and the male lead of Harry Brock will be taken by Edward L. Grady of Kinston.

Miss Stockdale has had quite a bit of previous experience in the theatre both in her home town and in Richland, Mich., where she took part in three plays.

In "Born Yesterday" she will play the part of the New Jersey girl friend of Harry Brock. As a gum-chewing, unpolished middle class girl she manages to get her boy friend into plenty of trouble with the government.

Grady is well known for his role as Father Rafferty in the Playmaker production "Angels Full Front," the fourth major presentation last season. Ed served with the Army Air Force and studied at Columbia University before coming here.

The play, a romantic comedy with a political theme, concerns a nouveau riche junk dealer, Harry Brock, who comes to Washington in an effort to bribe senators for the contract of removing the remains of the war from Germany.

The situation that his not-too-bright mistress manages to get him into in the capitol city is a risqué story well worth seeing.

The play was produced in New York by Max Gordon in 1946. It was a hit and ran successfully for more than three years on Broadway. Paul Douglas and Judy Holliday became widely known for the first time for their performances in the lead roles of the play.

Miss Holliday will also play the female lead in the Hollywood version now being produced by Columbia Studios and which is expected to be released this fall. Broderick Crawford will take the male lead in the movie.

Ed Fitzpatrick, on the Playmaker staff for the summer, is directing the staging of the production.

Other roles will be portrayed by James Ginther of Durham as Senator Hedges; Mary Belle Teague as Mrs. Hedges; Donald Vincent as the assistant manager; Glenn Martin as the waiter; Marx Deal, bellhop; Claude Garren, the barber; and Frances Greene as the manacurist.

FRED H. WEAVER

Fred Weaver Will Assume Dean Duties

Back After Work On Grad Degree

Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver will return to his South Building post this weekend—returning from a year's leave of absence.

Weaver has been working toward a master's degree in American Civilization at Yale since the spring of 1949. During his absence, Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday has been filling in at the job.

Dr. Claiborne S. Jones of the Zoology Department has been assisting Friday during Weaver's absence. He will return to his regular position.

Friday is expected to continue his service as assistant, working mainly in the field of student government and its problems.

Students Counted In CH Population

According to the 1950 census, the population of the town of Chapel Hill is 9,169. This is an increase of 5,515, or 150 per cent, over the 1940 census figure, 3,654.

However, this does not mean that the population of the town has increased that much, because for the first time in the history of the census, University students were counted as part of the population.

A special order from the Census Bureau in Washington, issued shortly before the census was taken three months ago, directed the inclusion of students in the population of all university and college towns, though of course the great majority of students are only temporary residents—as ordinarily understood, non-residents.

Council Case

The Men's Honor Council announced its decision in a case this week, and pointed out that the Honor and Campus Codes are still in operation during the summer sessions.

The Council approved a student's application for removal of probation upon study of his record. He had been put on probation during the winter quarter.

The Council also warned that it was not allowing any laxity in its enforcement of the Honor and Campus Codes. The Council is the court of original jurisdiction in cases under the two codes.

Strict Parking Cutback Is Expected Next Week

The Safety Committee's axe on student parking space in restricted areas will fall within the next week, if construction work on the New Commerce Building goes as scheduled, the Committee announced this week.

University Gives Bids

During the past week the University has let contracts for about $2,200,000 of building construction and for $825,000 for the installation of an electric generator at the power plant.

J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte was awarded the contract for the three buildings for the school of business administration. The bid for this work was $963,000.

The contract for the new dormitory was let to T. W. Poe and Sons of Durham for $757,000.

Two contracts covering the installation at the power plant were let to the Worthington Pump and Machinery Company and the Westinghouse company.

The architect for the three school of business administration building is H. Raymond Weeks, and for the dormitory, Watts Carr.

President Gray May Bring 'Homework' To New Position

Greater University President-elect Gordon Gray may have to bring some "homework" to the campus with him when he arrives to take over his duties on Sept. 1.

According to a report from Washington, News and Observer correspondent James Free said this week that Gray—now working as a Special Assistant to the President setting up procedure to aid this country's export-import balance—will probably not finish the assignment in time to take a much-desired vacation before coming to Chapel Hill.

In fact, asserts Free, the former Army Secretary will probably not end his part of the job in time for his Sept. 1 deadline, and will have to prepare last-stage reports after arriving here to take over his academic duties.

GM To Have Art Exhibit On Sunday

An exhibit of paintings by Professor George Kachergis of the University Art Department will go on display in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial at 4:30 this coming Sunday afternoon.

Professor Kachergis joined the staff of the Art Department last fall, coming here from Bradley University in Peoria, Illinois.

A native of Waterbury, Conn., Kachergis has spent much of his life in the Mid-West and considers that his home. He studied at the Art Institute in Chicago before the war and on his tour of duty overseas also studied at the University of Besancon in France.

At the war's end he finished his work at the Art Institute, getting Bachelor and Masters degrees in fine arts. He taught at the Francis Parker School in Chicago.

Professor Kachergis has forsaken the conventional forms of representational art to experiment and test new media and new techniques. The artist works in abstract idiom, attempting to make contemporary art speak by means of contemporary media. He has achieved fascinating results by exploiting the possibilities of various and mixed media such as oil, enamel, lacquer, casein, wax and scratchboard.

Varied textural effects, vibrancy and luminosity are gained by this technique. The same technique is employed to achieve expression rather than illusionistic effects.

Mr. Kachergis has received wide recognition in art circles, having held several one-man shows, including one last fall in Person Hall. He has exhibited his work in New York, Chicago, Denver, Oakland, Omaha, and other cities, winning a number of awards and high acclaim.
