Kelso — Majors — Lacrosse

Looks like Carolina's swimming team might get another shot in the arm in the near future. Coach Dick Jamerson has been worried over the vacancy at the diving position since the graduation of Norm Sper and Jack Wichard. His troubles may be over, for if a transfer from an Ohio college enters Carolina next Fall, the position will be more than filled. Two weeks ago, students in the outdoor pool got a glimpse of Joe Kelso going through his board program in Kessing pool. Coach Don Draper also seemed interested in Kelso and gave him a few pointers. The Tar Heel mermen could prove very troublesome if this position is capably filled.

With the American and National leagues past half way mark, the leaders and pennant winners are still in doubt. In the junior loop, Detroit holds the edge at present while New York and Cleveland are right on their heels. The Yankees seem to be having replacement trouble which means that the Indians with the aid of rookies Al Rosen and Luke Easter may again bring the flag to the Ohio city. In the senior circuit, five clubs are clawing at each other. St. Louis, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Boston, and New (Lippy) York are having a tight race which might not be decided until the final week. We're hoping the subway boys don't win again.

The lacrosse team which made a definite improvement this past season, will probably add another Yankee stick club to its 1951 sked. Report say that MIT will make a sortie into the South to meet the Tar Heels. Williams, Western Maryland, Virginia, Washington College, VPI, VMI, Baltimore University, Washington and Lee, and William and Mary complete the slate. The MIT date may be set as the season's opener on May 26.

Football — Haircuts

When you spy a Woollen Gym football flying through the air on Fetzer field during the afternoon, don't get up from your favorite sun tan position. Carl Snavelly hasn't issued a call for Summer practice. Besides being against the NCAA code, the Grey Fox usually accomplishes what he wants during the Fall, Winter, and Spring sessions. But if the sun is broiling you on both sides, you might get up and view some of the talent that will grace the '50 squad. A few of the Tar Heel footballers are in summer school and feel that a little pre-season workout might do them some good; especially when the Notre Dame game is the second contest. They could be either Irv Holdash, Bob Gart, Fred Sherman or even Art Weiner who is probably working out for the All-Star game on August 11.

The first hair cut that received publicity in Chapel Hill came when little Ronnie Justice had his locks sheared. But now it seems that the Indians have hit the Hill with their own brand. It's not Cleveland, nor Hosea Rodgers, nor the lacrosse team, but specialist in the aerial football wars, Billy Hayes. We haven't asked him why but it could be that the Indians of William and Mary got revenge for the pass he tossed to Art Weiner at Williamsburg with less than 30 seconds to go to give Carolina a 20-14 victory. Let's hope he uses it to scare a few of the opponents this Fall.

From All-Stars To Future Ones

Just over one month ago, two representatives of Carolina's lacrosse members were featured on the South squad in the annual North-South Lacrosse contest. Coach Bill Darden was chosen as an assistant coach while Grant Lynch, Blue and White defenseman, was picked to represent the Rebel team at his regular post. Recently, Lynch was named to the second string on the All-South squad.

While grid seasons roll on, coach Carl Snavelly is keeping his scouts on the alert in order to find new prospects for his future teams. He and several other mentors don't have to look any farther than Charlotte to find a better than average player. In fact, the people from Charlotte will talk you blue in the face about him. He's Larry Parker, sensational tailback from Central High. Parker is big enough almost to make you think a little of Jack Fitch, former star at Carolina. Besides being great at the grid game, he shoots in the low 70's in golf, plays well at first base in baseball, and won many honors as a center on the basketball squad. He's only a junior now, but in which direction is he headed?

New Coaches — Still Vacancies

Carolina's fashion plate swimming team is leaving very little undone. Upon the announcement that coach Ralph Casey would take a leave-of-absence for one year to get his doctorate at Columbia University, the Athletic Department has engaged another young coach to replace him. Ervin Straub, formerly of Iowa who is now completing work on his Masters' here in Chapel Hill, will aid in the coaching of the varsity and freshmen next year. Straub was a member of Iowa's freestyle and medley relay teams. He became very interested in coming to Carolina last year when the indoor Nationals were held here.

Although one position has been filled and another unofficially, Athletic Director Bob Fetzer has not made any statement on the vacant lacrosse job. Of course, careful consideration is the best policy, but too long in waiting may hamper the team's chances during the coming year. The new coach, whoever he may be, might want to bring a few new players into the Tar Heel state. We may not want another Everett Case, but the Bureau of Admissions is open only so long.

Thomas Leaves For Seattle

Enters AAU's; May Travel To Japan For Exhibitions

Jim Thomas and coach Ralph Casey will depart from Chapel Hill on Saturday for Seattle, Wash., where the former will enter the National Senior Outdoor AAU's scheduled for the 21st and 22nd of July.

Casey stated that Thomas will swim three events including the 110-meter backstroke, 200 freestyle, and the 300 individual medley. The best men in each event will make up a squad which will travel to Japan in August for exhibition meets.

During the past few weeks, Thomas has been on a record-breaking spree which saw approximately 10 marks fall before the splashing efforts of the Baltimore senior. Most of his standards were set in outdoor Kessing pool in long course backstroke events.

Both Casey and Dick Jamerson feel that Thomas will have a better chance of making the exhibition traveling team in either the 200 freestyle or the 300 individual medley. They stated that most of his competition will come from Yale and some of the other outstanding teams, but that most of the other swimmers will be concentrating on longer distance events.

MAUREEN O'BRIEN of Chicago is the new 200-yard backstroke AAU senior women's national champion. She defeated Barbara Jensen of San Francisco in 2:29.5 at Palm Beach, Fla. She will swim in the AAU meet at High Point scheduled for August 4, 5, 6.

Harvie Ward In Amateur Tourney At Columbia

Harvie Ward, former par-busting senior at Carolina, has entered his third golf tournament of the summer and for the third time is favored to place first.

Sponsored by the Carolina Golf Association, the 36th annual Amateur Championship Tourney opened Tuesday at Columbia, S. C. Ward of Tarboro is the defending champion. A two-day warm-up or qualifying round was scheduled for Tuesday and yesterday.

The title flight finals will be a 36-hole affair on Saturday. Also entered in the tourney are the 1949 runner up and the 1949 medalist, Malcolm McLean and Rodney McKnight, respectively, both of Charlotte.

FLASH!

Vic Seixas moved into the quarter finals of the Swiss International tennis tourney by beating Henri Bergerat 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

Trainer Lutz Featured In Coach Clinic

The University's 24th annual coaching school, to be held from July 31 to August 4 will feature instruction by two of the South's finest athletic trainers, Doc White and the newly-acquired Fitz Lutz.

Lutz will devote his time to the discussion of football and track injuries, while White will discuss baseball and basketball.

Lutz, who joined the University's athletic staff several months ago, came here from Baltimore, Md., where he was head trainer for the Baltimore Colts professional football team. Previously he had been head trainer at the University of Georgia and at the Georgia Navy Pre-Flight School. Lutz is famous for his guard devices that have allowed many famous players to participate while still being injured. One of the recent cases was the nose guard for Frankie Sinkwich at Georgia.

Doc White, who has been here for some years, has long been recognized as one of the leading trainers in the region. He has specialized in basketball and baseball and has also worked extensively with football and other sports.

The school will be directed again by Tom Scott, the University's basketball coach. Other faculty members of the school will include Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb, baseball; Carl Snavelly, football; R. A. Fetzer and Dale Ranson, track; John Keller, equipment; and Oliver K. Cornwell, athletic movies.

Sara To Dive At High Point

Sara Wakefield, diving queen at Carolina, will enter her biggest tournament next month and at present is a good bet to capture the women's one-meter event in the outdoor National AAU's at High Point on August 5.

Since beginning her brilliant career on the springboard, Miss Wakefield has run up quite an impressive record. In her first encounter with champions, Sara did very well in the qualifying round only to drop to sixth place in the finals.

Soon after, she won the National Junior AAU low board championship and quickly followed this with a triumph in the Florida State meet. Her next accomplishment came in the Southeastern Championships where she again took first place.

Her latest victory came in the Senior National Championships where she annexed her fourth successive big win. Her greatest competition in the meet at High Point will probably come from Miss Juno Stover who placed second in the Olympics.

Coach Draper has put great faith in Sara and expects her to bring home the crown. Draper stated that her ability to learn quickly and her ballet dancing have been her greatest assets.

Patty Tops Seixas At Wimbledon

Budge Patty of California upset the appcart as far as Vic Seixas was concerned. The slender smooth-stroking former University of North Carolina tennis star was in the drivers seat until Wednesday when fifth-seeded Patty knocked him from the unbeaten ranks.

Although Seixas was not counted on to even reach the semifinals, he might have fared better against Patty, had he been able to recuperate after his knock-down-drag out affair with Eric Sturges of South Africa the day before.

Seixas, who almost collapsed during his victorious match with Sturges, fought back valiantly against Patty but lacked the previous zip in his service that had won him four successive matches.

After beginning his foreign tour with relatively no success, Seixas rose to great heights in his first performance at Wimbledon. The first two days saw him take into camp a Swede and a Dutchman with comparative ease.

The next day, he suffered a minor setback when he and Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary were defeated in their doubles match. The following afternoon Seixas came back with his first big victory when he upset Jack Bromwich of Australia in four sets. This marked the second time that he had beaten the Australian on his tour.

Next, he upset Sturges who was picked to meet Alex Drobni in the finals. Neither reached the final round. The Seixas-Sturges match was probably the best of the tourney as thousands of fans crowded the court to witness the spine-tingling action.

Edmundson Wins 220

Ray Edmundson, distance swimmer of the North Carolina varsity, won his first big triumph Saturday when he placed first in the 220 freestyle in the Carolina AAU junior championship meet at Raleigh.

Several members of the Carolina summer team went to Camp Butner on Tuesday evening to participate in a swimming exhibition. Those taking part were Jim Thomas, Cecil Milton, Ray Edmundson, Sara Wakefield, Bud Crone, Bruce Fountain, Art Greenbaum, Howard Greenbaum from Ohio State, and the two coaches, Ralph Casey and Dick Jamerson.
