700 Artists Will Appear In Festival

With a record number of more than 700 participants, the fourth annual Carolina Folk Festival will move into its second evening of performances in Kenan Stadium tonight at 8 p.m., with a program of square and clog dances, old-time ballads, folk songs, and string music.

Festival Director Bascom Lamar Lunsford, the "Minstrel of the Appalachians," has announced that a number of additional singers and dancers have arrived here and will take part in the program.

Among them are ballad singer Forrest Covington from Ocracoke who graduated from the University in 1950; the Pilot Mountain banjoist and singer, George Pegram, who has captivated audiences in the past with his "Good Ole Mountain Dew"; and "Little Johnny" Strickland and his sister of Halifax, who will sing ballads and play a variety of string instruments.

Final session of the Festival will be held tomorrow night in Kenan Stadium. In the event of rain the performances will move to Memorial Hall.

Phillips Goes To Meeting

Dean Guy B. Phillips of the University School of Education and Director of the University Summer Session is attending the closing sessions of the Southern States Work Conference now being held in Daytona Beach, Fla. He left Chapel Hill by plane on Wednesday night and will return this afternoon.

Dean Phillips is the Chairman of the special North Carolina State Committee of the Work Conference recently set up to study the work of school boards in the South. A bulletin will be issued one year from now which will include principles and best practices.

The North Carolina School Board Association which was organized in 1937 by Mr. Phillips is to be one of the participating units of the study. He has been the Executive Secretary of the State Association.

The Southern States Work Conference is a southwide organization of public school personnel, State Department of Public Instruction and lay leaders who have been working on southern problems in education for a number of years.

Inauguration

The inauguration of the Summer President of the Dialectic Senate, John Schnorrenberg, will take place Tuesday, June 18, in the Di Hall, third floor, New West. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Senate will move into debate on the question of the ouster of Dean Acheson. Visitors are invited to participate in the debate which will be governed by rules similar to those of the U. S. Senate. All interested persons are cordially invited to attend the inauguration ceremonies and the debate.

The Senate will meet regularly at 8 o'clock on Wednesday nights.

2 Students 3 Instructors Get Awards

Two University of North Carolina students and three instructors have been awarded Fulbright Scholarships for foreign study during the coming year, it has been announced.

It was also announced at the same time that three former students, Redding Sugg, who graduated in 1943; Arthur Fullerton of the class of '48, and Carlyle Markham, graduate of 1950, also have been awarded Fulbright Scholarships.

The students, who received their degrees last week, are Olinde Dragone, Pittsfield, Mass., whose major is comparative literature; and John Ager, Jr., who took his M.A. degree in chemistry. Dragone will study in Perugia and Naples, Italy, and Ager in Holland.

The instructors, all in the Department of Romance Languages, are Edward B. Hamer, who took his A.B. at Wofford College in 1947; William H. Baskin, graduate of UNC in 1949; and John Patty, who received his A.B. here in 1945 and his M.A. in 1947. Hamer will study in Dijon, France; Baskin, in Paris and Poitiers, and Patty at the University of Toulouse.

Approximately 700 grants for study abroad are being made for the academic year 1951-52 under the Fulbright Act, which provides that funds from the sale abroad of U. S. surplus war property be made available to qualified scholars.

Parking

All parking areas on the University campus are reserved for faculty, full-time staff members and physically handicapped students. Those eligible for parking permits may secure them at the Dean of Students office, 206 South Building, the University Traffic Committee announced yesterday.

'We Just Thought That' Metasequoia Likes Climate

By Allan Inglesby

Did you know that the Coker Arboretum contains several trees that were thought to be extinct until 1946? Botanists had found many fossils over all the country of what were believed to be ancestors of the giant California Sequoia trees. In 1946 some Chinese botanists discovered these same "fossils" on a living tree in Central China. It was of course no fossil at all, just a lost tree.

For further study, seeds were sent to this country and several were planted in the Coker Arboretum. It has proven itself to be well adapted to our climate, as the Metasequoia tree at the Eastern end of the greenhouse is now taller than the greenhouse. The Metasequoia is rapidly becoming known in this country and is now no longer considered extremely rare. All in five years, too.

Now that summer is upon us, most of us are drinking one of the favorite hot weather drinks, iced tea. When you feel the need for a nice, fresh glass of tea, run down to the Arboretum. You

Research Plan Is Announced By R. B. House

A major research project on the social and political institutions of Latin America was announced this week by Chancellor R. B. House of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Financed by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, Dr. John Gillin, research professor of anthropology in the Institute for Research in Social Science, is beginning an inquiry which seeks to analyze the culture and social organization of certain Latin American countries in relation to their compatibility with democratic ideals.

Dr. Gillin will leave for Latin America the middle of this month where he will remain for approximately eight months conducting field research. The countries to be initially included in the study will be Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Guatemala. It is hoped that Dean W. W. Pierson, political scientist and an authority on Latin America, can join Dr. Gillin in field research later in the year.

"We at the University are interested in the problems of exporting democracy to foreign countries," Chancellor House said. "This involves problems of communication, education and international relations. Our present approach to the problem is through tested social science research techniques. We are convinced that the findings of this study will prove helpful to the United States Department of State and to other groups concerned with international relations."

Dr. Gillin has made seven previous research trips to Latin America and is author of several anthropological studies including "The Culture of Security in San Carlos," which has just been published by the Tulane University Press.

Week-Long Gathering To Have 300

The American Legion's Tar Heel Boys State will open at the University of North Carolina Sunday, June 17, and continue through the following Saturday, it was announced here today by Albert Coates, Director of the Institute of Government.

Sponsored by the North Carolina Department of the American Legion and conducted by the Institute, the Boys' State will be directed by Basil Sherrill, Assistant Director of the Institute.

Some 300 high school boys from throughout the State will attend the sessions that get underway with registration at the Institute building at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Director Coates will preside over the opening session in Gerard Hall Sunday night at 7 when J. Gordon Bush, Lenoir, Chairman of the Boys' State Commission; Col. Wiley M. Pickens, Raleigh, Executive Vice-Commander of the State Legion, and Louis Parker, Elizabethtown, Commander, will greet the boys.

Monday morning the boys will begin a jam-packed schedule of instruction in local, state and federal government procedures, with a number of speakers from various state departments appearing on the program. They will also have time for athletics and other recreation and entertainment.

Calisthenics will begin at 6:15 each morning on Emerson Field, and following breakfast at 7:15 in Lenoir Hall, the morning schedule will be devoted to speakers and movies.

Movies, counselors' meetings with the boys and athletics and swimming comprise the afternoon programs, and by Tuesday night, (See BOYS STATE, page 2)

Playmakers Preparing Productions

The summer production schedule of The Carolina Playmakers was announced today by John W. Parker, Business Manager of this organization.

The first show will be Lawrence Langner's American comedy of Revolutionary War days, "Pursuit of Happiness." When produced in New York in 1933 it rapidly became known as the "bundling" play (bundling being the custom of courting in bed without undressing). Tryouts for the cast of eleven will be held in the Playmakers Theatre on Tuesday, June 19, at 4:00 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. The production dates are July 12, 13, 14 and 15. Parker will be the director.

The second major production will be Agatha Christie's mystery play, "Ten Little Indians." It is scheduled to play August 17, 18, and 19. Thomas Patterson will direct.

August 23 will see the production of three new student-written and directed one-act plays.

As is their custom the Playmakers invite everyone interested in participating in theatre activity—students, faculty and townspeople—to attend the tryouts. Scripts for "Pursuit of Happiness" are now available in the Reserve Room in the library.

Classroom Orientation Plans Set

Orientation Chairman Ken Barton released plans today for a classroom course in Orientation to be set up this summer for incoming freshmen as a follow up to the regular Orientation program that finished yesterday.

The course will begin next week and last for about two weeks with the purpose of presenting to freshmen a clearer picture of the philosophy and meaning of Carolina Life. The course will be a one hour course and will be taught by regular members of the University faculty.

The course is in its experimental stage and the Orientation Committee hopes that it will be successful enough to be used again in the fall in place of Freshman Assembly.

Freshmen Assemblies have long been a great subject for debate and the Orientation Committee has set up this new approach to the problem of giving the freshmen more to orientation than just the short introduction they receive during Orientation Week.

Activities for the week just concluded called for a Chancellors Reception, a meeting of student government, a meeting conducted by the Honor Council, a YMCA picnic, an open house at the Morehead Planetarium, plus all the usual registering procedure and introduction to the physical plant here in Chapel Hill.

Counselors who served to carry out the program were: Julian Mason, Robert Lingerfeldt, James Cowan, John Lievsay, William McLendon, Allan Milledge, Edward Ferrell, James Lindley, Nick Miller, Mike Carver, Frank Driscoll, David Darr, Fletcher Green and James Neely.

The members of the Committee who served under Barton were: Baxter Miller and Bill Walker.

Barton announced that all freshmen who have not signed a card for the Committee with their free hours must do so immediately in order that the registration for the course can be completed.

Fall Orientation is the next problem according to Chairman Barton who expects that another 700 will be added to the class of 1954. "Having Orientation in two shifts this year has made the task more complicated than usual, but on the other hand has made more people aware of the fact that it is a year round proposition."

Barton also expressed his appreciation to all the people who had anything to do with the program for their cooperation and assistance.

250 CCCs

More than 250 Chamber of Commerce representatives from 11 southeastern states will gather on the campus Sunday for the eighth annual Institute for Commercial Organization Executives.

The 7-day educational meeting, sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, is being held at the University for the sixth successive year. Delegates will attend a concentrated program of lectures, forums, and classes. Those who have attended the Institute for two previous years and satisfactorily pass a written examination will be given a certificate upon completion of the course.

The Tar Heel

Due to printing difficulties The Tar Heel will be published on Tuesdays and Fridays instead of Tuesdays and Thursdays as was originally planned. In most cases the paper on Tuesday will have four pages and the Thursday edition eight.

A larger staff is needed and all who are interested are requested to report to The Tar Heel office on the second floor of Graham Memorial between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon.
