

Carolina Forum Draws Celebrities To Campus

Names make news.
It's an old saying but the Carolina Forum is proving it anew. It is through the efforts of this famous non-partisan student organization that such national and international figures as General Omar Bradley, news analyst Edward R. Murrow, Senator Leverett Saltonstall and General Mark Clark are being brought to the University campus.

With little more than the name and reputation of the school at Chapel Hill to work with, Carolina Forum President Bob Evans of Durham went to Washington, after conferences with University President Gordon Gray and Chancellor Robert B. House, and came back with acceptances from such celebrities as these for speaking engagements at Carolina, and he didn't offer them fees or even an honorarium by way of persuasion.

"We just tell those invited that we are members of a student organization which doesn't have any money but we promise them a good audience and wide publicity on their addresses," Evans explained.

General Mark Clark was the first of the group that came to Chapel Hill this year on a Carolina Forum invitation. Given the initial lead to General Clark by former Senator Frank Graham's office, the Forum presented the man who today is the Chief of the Army Field Forces in charge of all military training in the United States.

The four-star General created quite a stir in Chapel Hill. With a famous World War II record of near legendary fame, he spoke to a packed auditorium of almost 2,000 people, and made statements that were subsequently quoted in many newspaper columns and national magazines.

Edward R. Murrow came to Chapel Hill for a double purpose. He was to be the featured guest at the North Carolina Radio Newscasters convention, and he was to make a public address for the Carolina Forum.

Noted for his World War II news coverage from London and famed today for his "Hear It Now" weekly program, the celebrated commentator had people standing in the aisles and overflowing onto the stage behind him as he delivered a forceful address on American foreign policy.

Senator Saltonstall came to the University late in March. Long one of the best known and most respected leaders in the U. S. Senate, the three-time Governor of Massachusetts was entertained at a banquet given by the Chapel Hill Junior Chamber of Commerce and spoke to a gathering in Memorial Hall.

General Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, closed out the Forum program for the year on a note of triumph. He came to North Carolina on the very day that General Douglas MacArthur gave his famous "old soldiers never die" speech to Congress.

General Bradley was feted at a banquet in the Morehead building, and the guest list included Lt. Gov. H. P. Taylor, Assistant Secretary of Defense and former Mayor of Durham Dan Edwards, members of the University Board of Trustees Executive Committee, the Advisory Budget Commission, and members of the University administration and faculty.

GM Tourney Registration Starts Tues.

Registration for the second session GM tournament series began today and will continue through next Tuesday at noon. The tournaments being sponsored this session are table tennis, chess, and checkers.

Rules for the conduct of the tournaments will be posted at the time of the first pairings, but the sponsor reserves the right to cancel or modify the conduct of the tourneys. All decisions of the tournament director will be final.

The events are open to all students registered in the University this session. The awards for the winners will be similar to those given for the first session tournaments.

Play in all branches will begin one week from today and will continue according to the schedule which will be posted in the GM office at that time.

Winners in the first session tournaments were: Skip Hoyle, table tennis; and Kit Crittenden, chess.

Secretary

A young lady in her late twenties, Ardith Johnson left Colorado in the early part of World War II to take a Civil Service post in Washington. Later she enlisted in the WAC's but had become attached enough to Washington to return there at the war's end.

"I became Mr. Gray's secretary some four years ago," she said, "when he became assistant Secretary of the Army."

Although a native of Colorado, she admitted that the tar has already begun to cling to her heels.

Once I thought I would never like any place as well as Washington, but that was before Chapel Hill. That's my home now," she said.

Mrs. Johnson's husband is practicing law in Chapel Hill.
