THE STORY OF ELECTRA

Once there was a gal name of Electra Finn, and she had everything. Brains too.

And she was unhappy.

Whenever she was out with some guy and she referred to the Dark Lady of the Sonnets, he'd think she was talking about Harlem, and when she tried to get frisky with a mention of the Canterbury Tales he said he hadn't ever been to Canterbury but he was doing all right.

Poor Electra. She began to fear that Brains and Life wouldn't mix. She developed Complexes.

and then one day Electra, lucky creature, happened to drop in at an establishment whose name can be discovered at the bottom of this advertisement.

Imagine her surprise to find it filled with Men with Brains, and practically all of them understood English. She even got off a couple of mentally adult wisecracks that didn't fall flat on their faces for want of an audience.

Electra's doing all right, now. She's decided that life and Brains are a pretty darn swell combination.

And what's more, she's learned what so many students before her discovered. The finest all-round people on the Campus are customers of

Players Told About Tennis Regulations

Forty-one players are entered in the intramural tennis program which goes into its second day today.

Both doubles and singles matches are already being played.

Match results should be recorded on the draw sheet posted on the varsity court bulletin board. This responsibility goes to the winner of each match and matches not completed by the deadline set for the various rounds will be recorded as a double forfeit.

The Intramural Department suggests that each contestant, or doubles team, bring three new balls to each first match. Use only three balls for the match with the winner receiving the three unused balls and the loser getting the used balls. By this plan, the Intramural Department notes, no one need furnish more than three new balls for the entire tourney.

Players are responsible for reserving their own courts. This may be done by calling the basket room, 9-1426. Reservation cards may be picked up at the basket room at the gym.

Players entered are Wallace Ashley, Sam Barnard, Frank Bowman, Bill Beckman, Bob Bryan Cowden, Jim Crews, Leslie Da-Henry T. Clark, Jack Cole, D. J. meron, B. W. Dantzler, N. J. Demerath, Bob Fountain.
