Thoughts To Grow On

"WE NEVER FEEL so free from blame as when we expatiate on our own faults in other people."—Goethe

"ALL TYPES OF CONFLICTS feed on fear. Freedom from fear is the best way to cure race prejudice. This means freedom from fear of war, from fear of economic insecurity, from the fear of personal loneliness, from the fear of loss of individual prestige."—Clyde Kluckhohn

"ON THE FARM and on the frontier there was comparatively little demand for those forms of learning associated with the traditional school. The young . . . received a most rigorous education, an education superior in many ways to that which they receive today. Certainly it was far more closely linked with life than anything to be found in even the most modern school."—George S. Counts

HE THAT HIDETH hatred with lying lips and he that uttereth a slander, is a fool.—Proverbs of Solomon

"TAKE NO THOUGHT for the morrow. Live neither in the future or in the past, but let each day's work absorb your entire energies, and satisfy your widest ambition.

Cromwell said to Bellivere—"No one rises so high as he who knows not whither he is going," and there is much truth in it. The student who is worrying about his future, anxious over examinations, doubting his fitness for the profession, is certain not to do so well as the man who cares for nothing but the matter in hand, and who knows not whither he is going!"—Pavlov.

WITHOUT GOING out of the door

One can know the whole world; Without peeping out of the window One can see the Tao of heaven. The further one travels The less one knows.—Lao-tse

"SOCIETY IS A JOINT-STOCK company, in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater."—Ralph Waldo Emerson

"THE PSYCHE is the object of psychology, and—fatally enough—its subject at the same time, and there is no getting away from this fact."—Jung

THROUGH DESIRE a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.—Proverbs of Solomon

Luxon Stresses Needs Of School

Norval Neil Luxon, dean of UNC's School of Journalism, has issued a "progress report" in the form of a letter to all North Carolina newspapermen.

After eight months on his new job, Dean Luxon noted several changes which have been made.

Most important are the new courses and rulings which go into effect this September. Journalism requirements are to be upped from six to eight courses, with four being mandatory; three courses will be offered for the first time; and a graduate minor in journalism has been approved.

Continuing, Dean Luxon stressed the need of the School for books, equipment, and housing. He underlined the fact that "no school of journalism in a major university in the United States is as inadequately housed and as ill-equipped as is the School of Journalism of the University of North Carolina. My immediate goal is to remedy this situation."

Luxon concluded by asking for the aid, ideas, and criticism of all North Carolina newspapermen in planning for the future.

Dean of Nursing Named By Board To Grad Program

Dean Elizabeth Kemble, University of North Carolina School of Nursing, has been named to a seven-member Regional Committee on Graduate Education and Research in Nursing, to operate under the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB).

Designed to advise on a $750,000 development of cooperatively planned master's degree programs in nursing, the committee is headed by Dean Marjorie Bartholf of the University of Texas School of Nursing.

The other schools of nursing at Southern universities represented on the committee are Emory University, University of Maryland, Vanderbilt University, and University of Alabama.

The University of North Carolina, along with Emory, Vanderbilt and Texas, has been given a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation and the Commonwealth Fund to start a graduate nursing program during the 1954-55 school year. The Universities of Alabama and Maryland will share in the $750,000 in grants when their
