

Salaries higher for men grads

by Johanna Grimes
Special to the Tar Heel

Although UNC graduates found the job market slightly improved this year, the median salary for men who got jobs was nearly $100 per month than the median for women.

A median salary of $717 monthly for men taking jobs in business, industry and government is listed in the 1973-74 annual report of the UNC Career Planning and Placement Office. This is a 17 per cent increase over last year.

The median salary for women is listed as $625, the same as last year.

UNC Placement Director Joe M. Galloway said 3,623 students and alumni seeking fulltime employment registered with his office during the 1973-74 period. The 1972-73 total was 3,239. Thirty-eight percent of this year's registrants reported employment by April 25, cutoff date for the annual report.

The salary differences for men and women are partly because many women limit themselves geographically to areas where the supply of college graduates far exceeds the demand, Galloway said.

The median salary for female graduates of the College of Arts and Sciences, for example, was $526 monthly—nearly $170 less than the $694 median for men. However, about 34 per cent of the women took jobs in Chapel Hill, while only 7 per cent of the men did so.

Galloway said more interest is being shown by employers for female employees and the situation is therefore improving.

The median salary for men who took employment in North Carolina was $700 per month while the N.C. median for women was $625. Out-of-state medians were: Men—$750, Women—$660.

More of this year's male registrants took positions in banking and finance (16.9 per cent) and public accounting (12.8 per cent) than in other fields. Nearly 32 per cent of the women took hospital positions. Educational institutions and state and local government ranked second for female applicants, with 13.4 per cent choosing each of these fields.

Galloway also reported a slight improvement in the market for college teachers. Registration of college teacher candidates decreased about seven per cent but vacancies listed with the office increased 16.6 per cent.

The average monthly salaries for men and women who took jobs in the same general fields were shown in the annual report as follows.

Public Accounting: 40 men—$938, 7 women—$890.
Banking and Finance: 37 men—$650, 10 women—$475.
Advertising/Public Relations: 5 men—$625, 9 women—$475.

Electronic Data Processing: 9 men—$775, 5 women—$600.

General Administration: 46 men—$728, 16 women—$500.

Sales Marketing: 40 men—$743, 8 women—$400.

Sciences: 14 men—$679, 4 women—$611.

Social Services: 6 men—$648, 12 women—$627.

Clerical: 4 men—$526, Secretarial Work: 27 women—$450.

Classified by major rather than field the differences were listed as follows:

English: 5 men, $500, 15 women—$450.

Psychology: 16 men—$649, 17 women—$526.

Sociology: 5 men—$700, 12 women $526.

Journalism: 9 men—$666, 8 women—$470.

History: 11 men—$671, 7 women—$456.

Accounting: 46 men—$921, 6 women—$900.

Business Administration: 97 men—$700, 9 women—$500.

Political Science: 18 men—$650, 6 women—$488.

Marriage a cause

Marriage and family may be bigger factors in the wage gap between men and women than many people realize, according to UNC Assistant Professor of Economics Solomon W. Polachek.

Married men earn the highest wages, followed by single men, single women and married women in that order. Married men earn up to 60 per cent more than married women. Single men, however, earn only about 15 per cent more than a single woman. Women with children earn less than women with none.

Polachek wants to determine to what extent the wage gaps are caused by direct employer discrimination and to what extent they result from social patterns encouraging women to specialize in home activities.

He has been awarded one of the Ford Foundation's 15 Faculty Fellowships to research the role of women in society, a study he intends to conduct next year.

Polachek's study will focus on the relationship between women's wages and their lifetime employment patterns to determine what effect interruptions to raise children have on life-time earnings.

Polachek thinks women's expectations of raising families and of having shorter working careers influence their decisions about occupational choices, fields of college study and investment in education and on-the-job training.

By relating the "human capital investments" women make to improve their earning power to the wages they actually earn, he hopes to measure how much each of these factors contributes to the concentration of women in low paying, low-skill jobs.

Polachek will be on leave from his teaching duties at UNC next year to work full-time on the project.

UNC student dies at camp

A 19-year-old UNC student, Steven Paul McSorley, drowned July 16 in a pond near a Methodist church camp at Hope Mills where he worked as a counselor.

McSorley, a UNC freshman last year, reportedly drowned when he fell into the pond from a rope tied to a tree. Witnesses at Camp Rockfish, in Cumberland County near Hope Mills, said he had tied a towel around his neck as a cape, pretending he was Superman.

They said he appeared to be kidding around after he fell in and bobbed under the surface several times. Friends said he was a good swimmer.

McSorley was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. McSorley of Cary.

In an era of changing times, some things around this university never change. Staff Photographer Gary Lobraico captured this sequence of events Monday afternoon in the Student Union Parking Lot.

Committees finalized

by Laura Toler
Staff Writer

Students chosen to serve on Chancellor's Committees in the 1974-5 academic year are being notified of their appointment in letters from Student Body President Marcus W. Williams mailed Thursday.

"These people were chosen according to their competence, interest, and ability to vocalize," Williams said. Chancellor Ferebee Taylor announced the appointments last week from Williams' nominations.

Each committee, which consists of one to three undergraduates, one to three graduates, and two faculty members, advises the Chancellor concerning policy in particular areas.

In an attempt to maximize student input into these committees, Williams intends to distribute complaint sheets which may be returned to the Campus Governing Council (CGC) to provide suggestions for committee discussion. Williams also hopes to make the student committee members more accountable than they have previously been by requiring semi-annual reports to CGC.

The committee on Status of Minorities and the Disadvantaged has been completed to consist of undergraduates Leonard Lee and Henry Molden and graduates Humphrey Cummings and Joseph High. This committee is the only one whose members are nominated by the Student Body President and approved of by the CGC rather than appointed by the Chancellor.

Also complete are the Student Health Service and Calendar committees. Student Health Service will consist of undergraduates Jane Ellis, Steve Charles Dennis, and Charles Barrier, graduates Claire Lockhart Follin and Student Government Intern Martha Diefendorf. Undergraduates Carol Jane Clark and Israel Hy Shapiro, and graduate and Professional Student Foundation (GPSF) President Harvey Zelton will serve on the Calendar committee.

Undergraduates only were chosen for the following committees: Established Lectures, Karl Coleman and Lois Patricia Hauser; Buildings and Grounds, Stephen Cole Worsley and Stephen M. Gibson; Scholarships, Awards, and Student Aid, Andromeda Monroe, T.W. King, and Elizabeth L. Gilchrist; Space, Charlie Coy Barnes; Facilities Use, James A. Wynn, Mae Helen Israel, and Daniel Joseph Connelly; Student Stores Advisory, Ted Claghorn and Amy Jorgensen; and Traffic and Safety, William Scott Brannon and Lewis Handley Warren.

Hemmens appointed new chairman of city-regional planning department

George C. Hemmens has been appointed chairman of the UNC Department of City and Regional Planning. He succeeds John A. Parker who established the department and served as its chairman until his retirement in June.

Hemmens is currently chairman of UNC's Urban and Regional Systems program and is participating in the joint program of City and Regional Planning with the Departments of Information Science and Statistics to conduct research on urban systems, funded by the National Science Foundation.

He is also a research associate with UNC's Institute for Research in Social Science and is the principal investigator for the Integrated Municipal Information Systems Project, a cooperative program with the city of Charlotte and the Systems Development Corporation.

The new chairman is the author of numerous articles published in professional journals.

An economics graduate of the University of Illinois, Hemmens received his master's degree in City and Regional Planning at UNC and his Ph.D. in planning from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
