Historical Society To Meet in Raleigh

The annual session of the Literary and Historical Association of North Carolina will be held in Raleigh during October 31 and November 1, the program this year to be headlined with an address by Dr. H. M. Wagstaff, president of the association and professor of history at the University, and author of several works of history.

The Historical Association has been functioning for more than a quarter of a century, and the sessions each year are featured with addresses by notable historians and literary men, to which meetings the public is invited. Many eminent men have addressed the sessions in the past, including such figures as William Howard Taft, Claude Bowers, Walter Hines Page and others.

The presidents of the association are chosen each year in recognition of their literary, historical, or other cultural contributions to North Carolina. The object of the organization has been toward the cultural life of the state, and its efforts have gone for the furthering of rural school libraries, realization and recognition of state achievements from a cultural standpoint, and many such accomplishments as the marking of the Civil War battlefields and establishing the Valley Forge Memorial.

STUDENT WORKED WAY THROUGH HARVARD 1657

The practice of earning one's way through college is just about as old in America as are colleges themselves. Someone who has been poring over Harvard college records has discovered that Zachariah Bridgen, who entered as a freshman in 1657, when but fourteen years old earned his way at least in part by "ringing the bell and waytinge," says The Columbia Dispatch.

The bureau of education at Washington refers to this as the first instance on record of a student working his way; but Harvard was twenty-one years old when Bridgen entered, and as students were not as a rule wealthy in those days, the chances are altogether in favor of the presumption that in every one of these twenty-one years there were students working to pay their way, whether the work was done for the college itself, as in Bridgen's case, or for some private employer.

During the period when the University was closed following the Civil War $2,394.19 was paid for repairs.

In the 15 years from 1897 to 1912 the University won 25 intercollegiate debates and lost 10.

sized the need for the present building.

Gifts to the University were announced by Dr. Louis R. Wilson, Librarian. Among them was $1,000,000 given by the Carnegie Foundation for the establishment of a School of Librarians. There were many other gifts ranging from $500 to $30,000.

Following the address of Dr.

Keogh, the audience sung the University hymn, and Rev. W. D. Moss pronounced the benediction.

At 5 o'clock the new Library held an open house and reception. Last night the Home-Coming folks were invited to attend a guest performance of the Carolina Playmakers.

The Home-Coming program is continued today with Shailer Mathews, Dean of the School of Divinity, University of Chicago, conducting union services in Memorial hall, and a musical program by the University's Department of Music at four o'clock.

In 1869 the executive committee of the University recommended to the legislature that the expenses of one student for every member of the legislature be paid by the state if the student would agree to teach in the public schools.

complained bitterly just after Georgia evened the score. He was so nervous, he said, that he missed a perfectly good picture.

One of the busiest men on the Hill before the game was the Dean of the Smoke Shop. The center of an interested but wary crowd, he had some difficulty in disposing of large blocks of Georgia money. Many a careful man counted his money and then mentioned Dean Paulsen in his prayers last night.

Our sympathy goes out to the Governor's chauffeur. He had one of the toughest breaks of anyone at the game. The Governor's car was parked as near as possible to the stadium, just near enough for everything to be heard and nothing to be seen. And there the chauffeur stayed throughout the game, embellishing his private stock of cuss-words.

A remarkably good job was done by the Durham cops sent over here to direct traffic. And right natty they looked, too, in their Sam Browne belts and blue uniforms. Officer Blake of the local force saw the game from an excellent seat on the sidelines, apparently unperturbed by the drunks just behind him and engrossed in the game.

The men who clean up the stadium after the game will have a tough job on their hands. When the score was lifted to 18 and then 19, we saw innumerable faces fall. And several bottles.

There are other games on the schedule this year, and other victories to be won. Which is the main thing. One game doesn't make or break a team. So we'll see what happens next Saturday.

Regular Sunday Tea

The regular Sunday afternoon teas, sponsored by the student vestry of the Episcopal church will be held from 4:30 to 6 o'clock this Sunday afternoon at the parish house of the Episcopal church.

All students of the University are invited by the church to attend regardless of their church preference. Visitors are also invited to the tea.

German Scholar on Visit Here

Friederich Brie, professor of English in the University of Freiburg, Baden, was in Chapel Hill from Friday to Sunday. He is to introduce American literature courses at Freiburg, and in preparation he is visiting American institutions to consult with their professors and to see their libraries. He came here from Vanderbilt and left for the University of Virginia.
