

Tar Heels Renew Ancient Grid Rivalry With Wildcats

Game To Be Main Feature Of Davidson Homecoming

Collins Takes Squad of Fifty Men to Meet 'Cats.

SQUADS IN SHAPE

Officials Expect to Have Complete Sell-Out Due to Bearing of Game on State Race.

The Tar Heels and the Davidson Wildcats meet this afternoon on Richardson field to renew an ancient grid rivalry between the two institutions. The game will be the main feature of the Davidson "Home-coming" and a large crowd is expected to attend. Davidson officials have already reported a large advance sale of tickets, and because of the bearing of this game on the state race a sell-out of seats is predicted.

Coach Collins carried a squad of 50 men to meet the Cats and the majority of these will undoubtedly see action today. This is the largest squad that has been carried on a trip this year by the Tar Heels.

When the Tar Heels and the Wildcats meet at 2:30, two of the strongest Big Five teams in the state will go against each other. Davidson and Carolina now head the list of the Big Five teams. Carolina with two wins and no losses is closely followed by Davidson with one win and one loss. Wake Forest upset the Cats for a victory, but the following week the Davidsonians took the Wolfpack down under a 13 to 0 score. N. C. State trampled on the Deacons a week or so preceding this game.

Davidson has always been one of the hardest teams in the state to defeat on their home grounds and although the season scores to date indicate a Carolina victory it is by no means an impossibility for a Davidson win.

The traditional Wildcat spirit will no doubt be present when the Presbyterians meet the University this afternoon. Brock is Davidson's most outstanding star and his toe accounted for the win over Citadel earlier in the season.

Davidson took the strong Citadel team in tow at the first of the season, after Citadel had defeated Oglethorpe, the conquerors of the University of Georgia. By subduing the Citadel aggregation the Cats could, by scores on paper, claim a win over the Oglethorpe team, another win over the strong University of Georgia's Bulldogs, and would be given a 25 or 30 point margin over Carolina.

Davidson was also given about 75 points over the Wake Forest team but their plans were upset by a defeat.

There will be a grid-graph of the Carolina-Davidson game at the Pickwick Theatre at 2:30. In addition to the regular grid-graph account of the game, there will be quarter by quarter reports of all other leading games in the state.

The Tar Heels' starting lineup will probably be the veteran combine with Holt and Fenner, ends; Koenig and Adams, tackles; Captain Farris and Fysal, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarter; Ward and Nash, halves; and Spaulding, fullback.

125 ENTRIES IN ANNUAL CONTEST

Great Interest Shown in Cake Meet to Take Place Friday; Good Material Found.

The number of entries in the annual intramural Cake Race has been steadily mounting and now approximately 125 or more boys have registered for the meet next Friday. Nearly all of those that have registered have taken one or more workouts under supervision. It is still not too late to enter for the meet, and all interested are urgently requested by Coach Ransom and the intramural department to sign up at once.

There is a table at the entrance of Emerson field where all entries must check in for workouts. Coach Dale Ransom stated yesterday that some very good prospects for freshmen and varsity track have been uncovered since training began and the race next week promises even better.

Many of the frosh track candidates as well as new aspirants for the varsity in the spring are taking this opportunity to get in shape. Although no freshmen or varsity member of the cross country or track team is allowed to enter the meet, there are some entries that, although not having participated in any meets on varsity or freshman teams, have shown fine style and much promise.

The numerous and attractive prizes to be given away have enticed many former high school track men to the track and some fast times will be made over the two mile course.

Only five or six fraternities have entered teams in the race and few of the dormitories. Prizes are to be given to each team as well as individual winners, and the number of men on each team is not limited, but at least five are required.

ing the trip were Nelson, Tabb, Parsley and Brown, ends; Dortch, Thompson and Harper, tackles; Crew, McIver, Hudson, Eskew, and Hutchinson, guards; Gilbreath and Alexander, centers; Wyrick and Jackson, quarterbacks; Magner, Maus, Erickson, Slusser, and Houston, halfback; Harden and House, fullbacks.

Today's grid slate with the exception of the Carolina-Davidson game offers very little football of major interest to fans in this section. Away out in front in importance and interest in Conference ranks is the battle at Knoxville between Tennessee and Vanderbilt, two of the three undefeated aspirants to the southern championship. Then there's the game between Tech and Alabama plus that between Duke and State and you have about all those which seem important.

The Tar Heels began the season with a good team and have been getting stronger right along. This afternoon they will be able to present their full strength with the exception of Halfback Magner. Davidson has one of the few mediocre elevens it has had under the expert coaching of Monk Younger. Accordingly there is little doubt that Carolina will win. The fighting spirit of the Wildcats will be their chief strength for as far as football goes the Tar Heels have all the advantage.

Now to consider the Vandy-Tennessee battle. To begin with, Tennessee has been going like a house afire all fall. They lead the conference in scoring and have been scored on less than any other conference team that has played more than one game. Add to this that they did not lose a game last season and have yet to lose one this season and you have some idea of the strength of the Vols. Vanderbilt, under the tutelage of the veteran Dan McGugin, is also a team to be considered seriously. Only the powerful Minnesota team has humbled them this fall. Southern conference play has seen them preserve a clean slate and run up victories over Georgia Tech and Alabama in successive weekends. The Vols have a well-rounded team and undoubtedly a strong one, but we believe that the touchdown twins, Hack and Mack, will carry Tennessee to victory.

Duke after going out of its class for four games was given a chance to show its real power last Saturday and ran roughshod over Louisiana State. They should have no trouble in piling up the score on State.

Georgia Tech has had many ups and downs this fall. We believe that Alabama, led by Holm at fullback, will be successful in keeping them down this afternoon.

Tulane, outstanding candidate for the conference crown, should experience little trouble in keeping its slate clean when it meets Sewanee today.

Virginia battles Washington and Lee in a game which brings together two teams of about equal strength. Neither has had a very successful season and neither seems to have much power. We believe from a study of comparative scores that the Cavaliers should come out on top.

Tar Babies Go To College Park For Maryland Game

Game With Old Liners Freshmen Is First Game Since Blue Imp Contest.

CLOSE CLASH IS EXPECTED

Backed by three weeks of intensive training the University of North Carolina freshman football team left last night at 7 o'clock for College Park where they meet the Maryland freshmen this afternoon in their third contest of the season.

Last year the Terrapin frosh were easy victims for the champion Tar Baby eleven, dropping the contest by three touchdowns. This year the encounter will in all probability be a close one in that the entire Maryland team for 1930 will be rebuilt on the freshman squad next year. Their victory last week over the Virginia by the score of 13-6 was the second in as many starts this season.

Little pre-season information has been received about the Maryland offense but in their game with the Cavalier cubs last week Ray Poppleman and Al Woods, fullback and quarterback, formerly of the United States Marines, were the big threats of the game scoring all of Maryland's points. These two outstanding backfield men with able assistance of the remainder of the team will more than likely prove real trouble makers for the Carolina youngsters.

Close rivalry between the first year teams of the University of North Carolina and the University of Maryland has been burning for several years. The Carolina yearlings have won the last two games, losing the first in a bitter contest. Today's schedule heaps more coals upon the fire and the Maryland frosh will put up a tough battle to even the four year series.

This afternoon the Tar Babies face the Old Liners with the disadvantage of a weak offense due to the formations of rival teams which the freshmen learned and scrimmaged the varsity with, giving them no opportunity to perfect their own plays. Their main strength lies in defensive ability and the outcome of the game depends largely on this.

Coach Enright found it rather difficult to pick a limited number of players from the crack freshman squad. The following 29 men made the trip—Hodges, Allen, Grier, Reddings, Zovesus, A. Davis, Robinson, Philpot,
