

ESPERANTO CLUB MEETS TODAY IN MURPHY BUILDING

At the meeting of the Esperanto club which takes place this afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock in the English assembly room in Murphy hall the foundation will be laid for the year's work. Students interested in learning the language should come to the meeting even though they did not attend the first one.

The students will soon start a correspondence with other clubs all over the world. In a very short time they will be able to write letters to members of clubs in France and Germany. Letters will also be written to people in this country.

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, who has charge of the club here, says that it is absolutely necessary that the students who wish to join come to the meeting this afternoon; and that although a large number of people showed interest in the new language by coming to the last meeting, he is anxious that the attendance increase since any number of students are permitted to participate in the activities of the club.

Meyer And Graham Away Last Week

During the past week H. D. Meyer of the University faculty has been on a speaking tour in the western part of the state.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday he attended and addressed the state parent-teachers association meeting at Hendersonville.

Frank Graham, also of the University faculty, addressed the convention in Hendersonville. Mr. Meyer, who spoke at several other places on this trip, was back in his office in Alumni building yesterday.

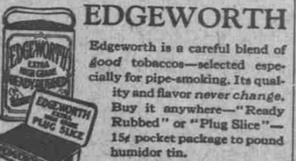

Demand a mirror... don't hesitate!

CHOOSE your pipes as you do your hats—try 'em on. See how they look.

How a pipe feels is your worry—but how a pipe looks is a matter of community concern. A bulldog pipe in a greyhound face would scar the souls of one's remotest associates. One owes one's duty...

The tobacco, now, is your personal business entirely. Take no man's preference—find your own.

Here's Edgeworth, a good old burley graduated with the Class of '04. Like to meet Edgeworth at our expense? See the coupon? Fill it out, and soon thereafter the postman will bring you—these magic mails!—a neat little glad-to-meet-you packet of the real, the genuine, the good, the unchanging Edgeworth. Don't mention it! The trick is you'll be buying Edgeworth later!

Lorus & Bro. Co., Richmond, Va. I'll try your Edgeworth. And I'll try it in a good pipe.

Now let the Edgeworth come!

Inn Filled

The expected crowds from all over the country which will be in Chapel Hill to see the Carolina-Virginia game on Thanksgiving day are increasing daily as may be seen from reports that all available space at the Carolina Inn has been reserved for that day. From the office of the graduate manager of athletics comes the statement that tickets to the game are selling fast, and that a capacity crowd is predicted.

U. S. C. GRID HEROES SUMMER ON MOVIE LOTS

Red Grange's idea of toting huge blocks of ice during the summer months, in order to prepare for the Fall football season, was all wrong. Eastern football stars who work on cement gangs and do other hard labor to condition themselves for the autumn gridiron session are making a mistake. They should enter the movies and sit around on sets playing cards with chorus girls between scenes, or just rest!

These are the views of Jeff Cravath, former All-American center, and now coach of Denver University, incidentally one of the finest football players the West ever produced.

Cravath spent the summer acting as technical adviser at the First National Studios in Burbank, where "The Forward Pass" was made with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Loretta Young in the featured roles.

Practically the entire 1929 football squad of the University of Southern California has been working all summer in football pictures. While this may sound as though they were playing football all summer, such is not the case. They worked in a few days' football scrimmage for the pictures, but the greater part of the time was spent on sets, as they played parts in the picture, as well as football.

Much of the time on the set was spent in waiting for the cameramen, the director or the Vitaphone experts to prepare a scene. The football heroes spent their time playing cards with other members of the cast, or with the beautiful chorus girls under contract to First National, for the girls rehearsed in the same stage that was used for many scenes of "The Forward Pass."

"After two or three months of picture work, these boys should be right in trim for their preliminary football training next fall. Of course, not many squads have the chance to work in pictures. If they did, I think it would be a good thing for all concerned."

"The Forward Pass," at the Carolina theatre today is a story of football and love on the campus, and is directed by Eddie Cline. The cast, in addition to Fairbanks, Miss Young and the U. S. C. football team includes Phyllis Crane, Dorothy Gulliver, Bert Rome, Lane Chandler and a host of other youngsters.

Engineers To Meet Thursday Evening

The next meeting of the University student chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, national electrical engineering society, will be held Thursday evening at 7:15 in Phillips hall.

At this meeting talks will be given by members of the senior electrical engineering class on the electric plants visited by the seniors when they attended the meetings of the North Carolina section of the A. I. E. E. held at Charlotte.

While in Charlotte on November 23 and 24 the group attended the banquet session of the North Carolina section and made an inspection of the Duke Power Company's development at River Bend and Mountain Island.

The seniors also inspected the development of the Carolina Light and Power Company at Badin.

The talks Thursday evening will be descriptions of the plants visited while on this trip.

TOBACCO CHEWER DRAWS IRE OF FEMALE; HE MISSED

(Continued from first page) tobacco in such a manner that it will land squarely and surely upon the matchbox. Certain rules are hastily drawn up, such as no bounces are to be allowed nor can the neck be craned so far forward as to obtain an unfair advantage. "Red" is first. And many are the cries of exultation that arise from the bunch as the poor target is most rudely discolored, time and time, and time again. Thus it continues for fifteen minutes.

Attracted by the jubilant noises, five girls, who had, until now, been seated in a parked car farther up the street, walk down to see the contest. Arriving at the "field," they immediately get into the spirit of the game and it is not long before each has her own "entry." The enthusiasm runs high. Finally, one of them, unable to resist the temptation that so often attacks spectators, i. e., to enter the fray as an actor, not an observer, calls out to one of the players to try and hit a spot over which she is standing and that is directly between her shoes. The slayer singled out for this subtle compliment to his skill, takes a large bite of the plug, and with determination and the desire to win written upon his face, thoroughly chews the tobacco and gets into position for his shot.

He measures, with his eye, the distance from the spot to the probable position of his mouth. He carefully holds up a wetted index finger, so as to find which way the wind is blowing. Then he sways backwards, tilting his head back little by little, until he feels that he has the right position. He aims with his right eye. A distant horn is heard, acting much like the flourish of trumpets for the climax of acrobatic feats, and then, with an almost imperceptible motion of the head, a dark brown mass flies through the air and lands—on the lower left hand side of a mauve dress. Purple and brown do not blend at all.

The girl who succumbed knows that she has "paid the piper" for her escapade, for the entry into a sport limited to men. She says nothing for a moment, unable to express all the words, expressions, phrases and clauses that clutter up her mouth in a wild desire to find release. But out they come. And many. And varied. And colorful. But none complimentary.

The others of the two groups quickly endeavor to ameliorate conditions. The maidens recommending methods of removing the odious spot, the youths iterating and reiterating that it was "all her fault."

Before any harm can come from this gregarious development, a smart lad suggests that perhaps over the clean, unblemished enamel of the tables in the University Cafeteria, an agreement, or understanding, can be attained which would aid in the continuance of the amicable relations between the sexes on the Hill. And as they wander in couples across the street, the setting sun lends a proper touch of peace and repose to the Sabbath.
