

President Green Defends Right Of Laboring Class To Organize

Head of American Federation Of Labor Gives Talk in Bingham Hall; Predicts Unionizing Of South.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, gave a 30-minute talk in Bingham hall yesterday afternoon before a large audience upon the aims and purposes of the nation-wide labor organization's southern campaign.

Characterizing the Southland as evolving from an "agricultural land into an industrial empire," the successor to Samuel Gompers continued to say that the A. F. L. "responds to the call of the great masses of people in the South." Mr. Green expressed the Federation's desire to help the laborer.

"We hope to bring the right of organizing into trade unions to the southern worker." This aim is, according to Mr. Green, the prime purpose of organized labor in its campaign in the south. Mr. Green said that capital organizes—and has the right to organize. Certainly labor should be accorded the same privilege. "There is no justification of employers discharging men because of associating themselves with trade unions!" The need of labor to organize was cited by the speaker as most urgent.

Another aim of the Federation which it hopes to accomplish is to see that greater social justice is meted out to the many women and children toiling in the mills of the south. Mr. Green said that with 3,000,000 unemployed laborers in the United States, there was no necessity of employing 25 per cent of the total number of workers from women under 18 years of age.

Other points of the American Federation of Labor's platform are to see that workmen's compensation laws are made universal; to see that children are given the opportunity to enjoy their youth and to obtain the benefits of an education; to see that the working week and day are made shorter and that the laborer is granted more leisure in which to exercise his cultural and spiritual abilities.

Mr. Green laid the present conditions of the textile industry at the doors of the managers and owners who, for the past two decades, have exercised a "perfect dictatorship."

The talker stated that another great problem directly allied with the labor situation is the plight of the agricultural worker, who, in Mr. Green's opinion, is worse off than the industrial worker. He declared that the "agricultural laborer must be lifted along with the industrial laborer."

The fact that poor, small farmers form an almost inexhaustible labor supply for the mills presents a very serious problem to the organizers and for that reason alone it will be necessary for labor to carry agriculture's cross as well as its own.

Mr. Green urged hearers to investigate and seek more knowledge of the subject.

Many listeners availed themselves of the opportunity to question the leading exponent of the American Federation of Labor. Almost the last question asked was that of Dr. Schwenning of the school of commerce.

Chapel Notice

Dean Bradshaw announces that there will be no further chapel exercises this quarter either for the sophomore or freshman classes. The next regular chapel exercise will be Monday, March 24, which is the first day of class work for the spring quarter.

Management Class to Inspect Greensboro Industrial Plants

Members of the class in industrial management will make a trip to Greensboro this afternoon to inspect the plant of the Vick Chemical company and the print works of the Proximity plant of the Cone Mills.

This trip is the fourth that the class has made this quarter to various manufacturing plants to inspect the plants and the systems on which they are managed. The class has visited the plants of the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, at Danville, the White Furniture Manufacturing Company at Mebane, and the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company in Durham. Later in the quarter it is planned to visit the Southern Railway shops at Spencer.

The course in industrial management is given by Professor G. T. Schwenning, who is planning the trips, which are an optional part of the regular work. On each of the other trips that have been taken a large group has made the inspection of the plant, and a large group will go to Greensboro today to visit the Cone Mills, the president of which spoke in Chapel Hill a few weeks ago on the textile question.

Turns Car In Middle Of Block; Pays Costs

A. H. Fillers, 40, an insurance salesman residing in Durham, will be careful in the future who he accuses of being mayor of Chapel Hill.

Fillers turned in the middle of the block near the Carolina Theatre upon seeing a friend driving by in the opposite direction. By turning he caused some inconvenience to Mrs. G. A. Braune, wife of a local alderman, who called his attention to the violation of the traffic ordinance.

"Who'd you think y'are, the mayor?" Fillers is alleged to have ejaculated, whereupon Mrs. Braune caused his arrest.

Fillers, who contritely pleaded guilty, was assessed the costs of the case.

COMMUNITY CLUB HOLDS LAST MEETING OF MONTH

The art, home and music departments of the community club held their last meeting of the month Tuesday afternoon.

The Sketch Club took advantage of the delightful weather, and made a trip beyond the country club where they made drawings of the landscape.

At the home of Mrs. F. H. Edmister, Mrs. Ralph Trimble spoke on early American china before the home department.

Miss Henrietta Smedes at the same time presented a program of Russian music before the music club assembled at Perison hall.

MADRY LAUDED AS PUBLICITY AGENT FOR UNIVERSITY

"Bob", Class Of '18, Spent Several Years As Paris Correspondent Of New York Herald Before Coming Here In 1923.

In an article appearing in the February issue of the Alumni Review, Robert W. Madry, director of the University news bureau, received due praise for his excellent work since he became director of the bureau in 1923. The article is based mainly on the statements made at the recent convention of the North Carolina Newspaper Institute, wherein several prominent journalists of the state commended publicly the news service rendered by the University.

These newspapermen spoke highly in favor of the policy of the news bureau in supplying the papers with real news and not press-agent publicity. This policy they attribute to the adroit handling of Director Madry. Prominent among those praising the University news service were W. Carey Dowd, publisher of the Charlotte News and president of the North Carolina Press Association, and Frank Smethurst, managing editor of the News and Observer.

"There was never a time," said Mr. Smethurst, "when the University was closer to the people of the state than now, and the people of North Carolina had more interest in it, when its activities on and off the campus met with such fine encouragement. I would not in any way detract from the fine administrative and professional achievements that have merited this appreciation, but I do believe that in a large measure it is due to the fact that there is here a serviceable and efficient news bureau through the operation of which the University has been as an open book to the

ENGINEER DANCE FRIDAY NIGHT TO BE COLORFUL

Lighting and Decorations of Ball Room to Be Elaborate; Buccaneers To Play.

"Forget your technical worries" is the advice given the engineers by the committee in charge of the annual engineers' dance to be held Friday evening, and if advance reports of the affair are correct, every opportunity to do just that thing will be given.

The campus sometimes thinks of the engineers as a gang of roughnecks, smoking pipes and wearing boots, but Friday they are staging a comeback, in giving what they say will be the best dance of the quarter. Already plans have been made for some of the most unique lighting effects in the history of Carolina dances; the decorations will be different; the music will be good; the girls will be there in quantity and quality; and everything points to a grand and glorious time for the technicians Friday evening.

The Buccaneers, regarded as one of the best music-making groups, will outdo themselves in furnishing the necessary syncopation.

The engineers' dance, an annual affair of the school of engineering, is sponsored by the three engineering societies, and, as it is practically the only social activity of the engineers, they are planning to put it across in big style.

Engineers may secure tickets for the dance at the senior room of the department in which they are registered: civils at room 320; electricals, room 217; and mechanicals, room 216. Students other than engineers will be admitted only if they are bringing a girl. Those desiring to attend with girls should see Johnson Alexander in room 217 Phillips hall for tickets.

Additional Donations Increase Tar Heel Relief Fund For Poor

Chapel Hill, N. C., February 25, 1930

Dr. L. M. Brooks, Chapel Hill, N. C., Dear Doctor Brooks—

I am sending you a check to be applied to the Orange County Relief Fund being raised on the campus by you and your assistants. It gives me great pleasure to send you this small check. I have been waiting on an opportunity to do my bit and thank you and your helpers for providing the channel.

Henry Speaks Ex-Cathedra

Dr. G. K. G. Henry has notified the Tar Heel office that his interview with the newspaper's special correspondent, Frank J. Raskob, was one that was unauthorized for publication.

Accounting Course May Be Given Soon

If a sufficient number of students can be interested, Robert H. Sherrill, assistant professor in the school of commerce, will offer an extension course in accounting, beginning here next week. There will be 15 lectures of two hours each once every week. The meeting time has been set at 7:30 o'clock, but the day of the week on which the classes will be given will be announced later.

Although this will be a non-credit course, it affords an excellent opportunity for townspeople and law students, among others, to learn accounting. Professor Sherrill has been successfully conducting a similar series of classes in the Rocky Mount Y. M. C. A. with an enrollment of 29 pupils.

Persons interested in taking this course should see R. M. Grumman, head of the extension division, in 312 South, or Professor Sherrill in 313 Bingham. The tuition fee for the course is $10.

N. C. C. W. Sophs Elect Second Term Officers

Greensboro, Feb. 26.—Miss Sue Mae Hendren, of Mount the sophomore class of North Carolina college at a recent election held by the second-year group in which officers were selected to carry on the work of the organization during the second semester.

The sophomores chose Miss Pansy McConnell, of Gastonia, critic; Miss Marion Holoman, of Rich Square, secretary, and Miss Mabel Shepherd, of Columbus, Ga., cheer-leader.

Miss Helen Shuford, of Greensboro, is the new president of the class, and Miss Mary Henri Robinson, also of this city, treasurer.

Miss Leslie Rothrock, of Mount Airy, was president of the organization for the first semester. Custom gives the sophomores a set of officers for each semester at the state institution for women.

Infirmiry List

There was a total of seven students confined in the infirmiry yesterday. They are as follows: W. B. Huger, who has not yet recovered from a case of bronchitis; J. E. Dillard and Cheek Macum, confined with colds; J. E. Dunn with an infected gland; C. C. Cornwall with the measles; George Sheram with pneumonia; and Will Yarborough with tonsillitis.

Greensboro, Feb. 26.—The latest count of students at North Carolina college shows 1,888 resident collegians enrolled for the work at the state institution for women.

Students of Two Universities Unanimously Endorse Seven Constructive Resolutions Favoring Future Amity.

(By E. C. Daniel, Jr.)

A speech by Joe Savage, president of the student body of Duke University, was by popular acclaim the most potent factor of the meeting held in Gerrard hall last night in an effort to promote more amicable relationships between the students of Duke and Carolina. Under the sponsorship of the Di and Phi societies of the University and the Columbian and Hesperian societies of Duke University, a small but enthusiastic group of students and faculty members from both institutions were present for the discussions. Speaker John Lang of the Phi was presiding officer.

President Ray Farris of the University student body was the welcoming speaker of the evening. Following his introductory remarks he stated that the main objective of his talk was to introduce a movement for the organization of a state federation of college students, to be organized among the students of Duke, Carolina, Davidson, State and Wake Forest. President Farris stated that, due to their geographical situation and to the influence of other factors, these, the five largest schools in the state, should be interested in fostering this movement, to be extended later to include all the colleges in the state.

When asked for a vote on the proposition stated by President Farris the audience responded unanimously in favor of the motion.

Following Farris, Speaker Lang spoke eloquently on the necessity of cooperation in making efforts at intercollegiate amiability successful. He was followed by the President of the Duke students.

Mr. Savage, whose jovial remarks received the hearty approval of his audience, apologized in beginning for the small attendance of Duke students, but assured the representatives from the University that they were equally as interested in the move as were local students. First deploring the false pride that existed at both Duke and Carolina, Mr. Savage urged that the efforts of student leaders be directed to encouraging wholesome rivalry between the institutions in the proper way, as well as encouraging the exchange of facilities and mutually beneficial athletic privileges.

Speaking of the relative advantages of the two schools, Mr. Savage was responsible for stating the prize quip of the evening when he said, "You have a good library. So do we, but we have the best-looking co-eds." Later speakers took up this statement, making quite a joke of it before the meeting was concluded. Editor Holder of the Daily Tar Heel gallantly defended local pulchritude, however. He declared that some time he would take Joe Savage and Ray Farris down to the "co-ed shack" and show them our good-looking girls—"all three of them," in fact.

One of the primary objects in calling this joint meeting was to present to the assembled students a group of seven resolutions relating to the subject under discussion. They were
