The statements of President Hoover and Secretary Mellon as to next year's income-tax reductions show plainly which one is a candidate for re-election.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

On Reckless Driving

We have noticed lately that there are a good many cars in the student body. While a car is a good thing to have handy, it may be used in a dangerous manner. We mean fast and reckless driving. One of the most dangerous driveways is the one running behind South building. People are constantly going in and out of South and changing classes from other buildings. Another bad street for reckless speeding is the street behind Manly and Mangum dormitories. The other night we saw a fellow go speeding down it. Some boys were just crossing the street, but this car did not even slow down or blow. It was making over 50 miles per hour and couldn't have stopped within a hundred feet if it had been necessary. Multiply this situation by about five hundred and you have a slight idea of the situation. There should be some way to curb the killing instincts of some of the local motorists.—F. W. A.

It Seems To Me, Too

Two negroes have been lynched in Georgia during the past week by mobs composed of men with the average mentality of idiots. In each instance the negroes were taken out of the county jail where they were being held for trial and hanged by the infuriated mobs.

A crime has been committed against the State of Georgia. A few dozen men have openly defied and ridiculed the state by murdering these two prisoners. And the state of Georgia humbly bows its back in submission, while two more unpunished lynchings are marked down against it.

Meanwhile a committee of six prominent men of the South has been appointed to investigate the recent lynchings. After several months the committee will submit a report stating that the killings were outrageous, inhuman, and so on. Southern editors will become indignant and write vitriolic editorials. And then the flame of resentment against the lynchings will flicker and die out, until revived again by another lynching.

Bitter disillusion has suddenly gripped many Northern freshmen this week. The far-famed Sunny South has unexpectedly turned out to be a frigid land swept by frost-tipped winds. The mercury has taken a sudden plunge into the nether region of the barometer and seems perfectly at home there, as it has shown no signs of rising from the depths.

One compensation of this cold spell, however, is that we can now study free from the company of the multi-colored insects that are so prevalent here. The Chapel Hill variety of insect is very unique in one respect. It seems to derive its greatest joy in life from flying into a room where a student is studying, hitting the electric bulb in the desk lamp, and then dropping dead before the student's eyes. In a half hour, the top of his desk looks like a graveyard for insects. And no man can study while surrounded by corpses.

Yesterday morning a friend of mine walked up to me and said:

"Brothers and sisters have I none, but this man's father is my father's son. Who is this man?"

And without another word, he left. During that entire day I wandered about in a state bordering on nervous collapse trying to figure out who "this man" was. In the evening my friend dropped into my room. It was but the work of an instant to throw him to the floor, and sit on his chest.

"Tell me the answer, quick!" I gasped.

Evidently he saw mayhem in my eyes, for he became frightened and said:

"Why, it's easy. 'This man' is my son!"

I am still trying to figure it out.

An Associated Press report informs us that the volcano Vesuvius once more burst into unexpected eruption recently, throwing molten rock hundreds of feet into the air and scaring the inhabitants for miles around.

Well, I am glad to see that something at least has not been slowed down by the business depression.

TAR HEEL COACH BROADCASTS DOPE ON STATE TEAMS

Collins Compares Strength of Big Five Teams Over Station WPTF.

Radio station WPTF, of Raleigh, N. C., has added a new feature to its weekly program. This program, the B C Sport-light, is put on the air each Wednesday evening between seven-thirty and eight o'clock. Chuck Collins, head coach of the University of North Carolina football team, is the chief speaker on this new program. Coach Collins is a graduate of Notre Dame University, where, under the tutelage of the famous Knute Rockne, he played varsity football during the years 1922, '23, '24. He was a left end on the team at Notre Dame during the years that the marvel team of Rockne's threw dread into its opponents. This team boasted of the great backfield known as the Four Horsemen and a strong aggressive forward wall.

In the course of his first talk on sports, which occurred last Wednesday night at WPTF, Coach Collins talked chiefly about football and the prospects of the teams in North Carolina which make up the "Big Five." First, Coach Collins dealt with Wake Forest and its improvement over last year's team. Next, he conversed on State's team under Van Liew. In the opinion of Collins, State has a good team, but will be slow in rounding itself into shape under the new tactics of the new coach at Raleigh. Davidson always has a bunch of fighting football demons on her roster, and will win a larger percentage of her games than any team in the state. She hasn't the stiff opposition that Carolina and Duke have to face, but she has a fighting bunch of football enthusiasts which will inspire doubt in the teams she goes up against this fall. Duke, the real mystery team of North Carolina has a team which has done a Rip Van Winkle stunt for about twenty months, and only waked up in the last week or two to come back strong with some outstanding backs and linemen to whip Virginia by an overwhelming score. Then, hearkening unto the Tar Heels, Coach Collins states that here is one team in the state which is the most over-rated of all. He says that Carolina will have to fight hard to conquer her foes in and out of the state, and the forward wall of the team will have to bolster up to come through the schedule unscathed.

The state championship, he contends, will be very close as there are so many teams in the state which have greatly improved squads over last year's teams. Carolina and Davidson will be the two to fight it out for the top of the "Big Five" (says Chuck) with Wake Forest, Duke and State coming along in the order named. Coach Collins wants everybody to understand that these statements are authentic, but he does not advise anyone to lose any money on his dope on these teams, as the dope is what HE thinks about the football situation in the "Big Five." He, also, says that all dopsters and experts on sports are ninety per cent wrong every time, and one man's opinion in a field of sports, if carefully studied by that man, is safer than taking some experts word on the situation.

Psychologists Eat, Talk, And Initiate

The Alpha Psi Delta psychology fraternity held a banquet in the Forest Hills tea room in Durham on Wednesday evening. New members were initiated into the fraternity.

President H. N. Dewick introduced Dr. L. M. Brooks, toastmaster of the evening. Dr. J. F. Dashiell welcomed the new members in four psychological languages. Mrs. E. R. Mosher, representing the women of the fraternity, made a short talk.

The history and purpose of the organization was outlined by Dr. H. W. Crane. Dr. English Bagby read a paper on "What happens at Synapses?" Dr. A. G. Bayroff's subject was "Reminiscences of a Rodentologist?" Houdini tricks were performed by Dr. G. B. Johnson. The secretary of the fraternity, G. M. Metz, talked on "Choosing a Cigarette from Advertisements." The new initiates also made short talks.

ELEANOR HUNT'S RED HAIR PROVES LUCKY

Maybe because she had red hair, maybe because she was lucky, maybe she was good, Eleanor Hunt, leading lady opposite Eddie Cantor in "Whoop-ee," the Samuel Goldwyn-Florenz Ziegfeld musical riot which comes to the Carolina theatre today, got clear to the top of the heap in show-business in a short twelve months from the time she first went on the stage.

A little more than a year ago, she was graduating from high school in New York without much idea of where she went from there. A few months ago, she was on her way to Hollywood to take her place at the head of the feminine contingent in "Whoop-ee," having been picked by Samuel Goldwyn out of the chorus of the stage "Whoop-ee" as the ideal type of girl for his leading lady.

GLEE CLUB SINGS FOR CONFERENCE

The University glee club, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, is to present a musical program tonight before the North Carolina College Conference. This conference is meeting in the Washington-Duke hotel in Durham today and tomorrow. The glee club is to be heard immediately following the dinner.

The group of selections that is scheduled to be rendered is as follows: "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee," Bach; "Ave Maria," Arcadelt; "Chorus of Camel Drivers," Franck; "Landsighting," Grieg; "Taran-telle," piano solo by Nelson O. Kennedy; "Bugle Song," Foote; and "Sea Song," Gaines.

Military Group Meets

Meeting for the first time this year, the military troop school heard a talk by Captain D. B. Floyd, of Raleigh, last night in the Davie hall annex. A large number of men interested in securing commissions in the officers reserve were present. This military class will meet every fortnight beginning with the meeting last night.

WILSON MAKES SURVEY

Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, left Wednesday for Davidson College where he will make a survey of the library at the request of that institution. From there he will go to Charlotte to address an alumni group meeting Friday evening. Dr. Wilson will return to the University Monday.
