

BERLIN PROFESSOR WILL LECTURE ON GERMAN POLITICS

Dr. Bonn, Professor of Economics at Handelshochschule To Speak Thursday.

The state of affairs in German politics today will be discussed in a lecture Thursday at 8 P. M. in Gerrard hall by Dr. M. J. Bonn, professor of economics and director of the Institute of Finance at Handelshochschule in Berlin. Dr. Bonn will use as the title of his lecture "Economics and Politics in Modern Germany."

Dr. Bonn has been lecturing in this country since 1914. He is leader of the Round Table at Williamston Institute of Politics, and recently has lectured at the Universities of Wisconsin, California, Leland Stanford and Cornell.

He served as economic expert at Versailles in 1919, and in the same capacity at Spa, Brussels, and Genoa in 1920-21. He is a member of the International Gold Commission of the League of Nations, and a member of the Advisory board of the Commissions of American Academy of Political and Social Science.

While Dr. Bonn is in Chapel Hill he will be entertained at dinner by Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Zimmerman. The former was a student of Dr. Bonn's at one time. After the lecture Thursday evening the Department of Economics and Commerce will tender a smoker for Dr. Bonn. At this time any members of the faculty who desire to meet him may have the opportunity.

Of interest to political students will be the fact that the date of Dr. Bonn's lecture coincides with that of the meeting of the Reichstag in Germany. The new communist leader, Harry Hitler, will be expected to feature strongly at this time.

WATER SITUATION NOT SO BAD NOW

Consumption Decreases with Cooler Weather; Clouds Cheer J. S. Bennett

The clouds that gathered yesterday gave a sombre aspect to the village, but they cheered J. S. Bennett. For the continued drought had put him in a state of uneasiness about the community's water supply.

When this paper went to press yesterday afternoon the weather outlook was still uncertain, and the forecast for Friday, as published in the newspapers, was "fair and warmer." Still the situation as to water is better than it was a week ago.

"Until we notify them, the people of Chapel Hill may feel free to go ahead with their normal consumption of water," says Mr. Bennett. "The weather turned cooler toward the end of last week, when our supply seemed to be running low, and this decreased the consumption by about 75,000 gallons a day. And then we have built a weir which creates a pond out at the pumping station on Morgan's creek. Here at the intake at the junction of two creeks, Morgan's and Price's, the level has been raised 11 inches, and so we have a reserve of around 600,000 gallons. This gives us a margin of about one day's consumption. "As long as enough water is coming down the two creeks there is no reason for people not to use it in the customary quantities, since the excess goes to waste anyhow. If we are threatened with a shortage we will have plenty of time to give notice to everybody, and in that case measures of economy can be taken."

University Press Doubles Output Of Previous Year

By R. W. Madry

The University of North Carolina Press which, at the age of seven, is wide and favorably known at home and abroad, announced today the publication of more than 25 new books to be issued during the fall and winter. This is twice as many as were issued during the corresponding period last year.

When these new volumes have been brought out the total number issued by the Press since its establishment in 1922 will have passed the 100 mark.

The most remarkable thing in connection with the announcement, however, it appears, is that not one cent of the state's money is being spent in putting out these new books. Heretofore, Assistant Director W. T. Couch pointed out, the University has appropriated a substantial sum to help cover the cost of maintaining the Press. But when the state called upon the University last spring to make big slashes in its budget, the Press was one of the many departments that suffered a heavy cut—in fact the support of the Press was dropped entirely except for a sum that was set up to take care of certain University periodicals published under the imprint of the Press. The Press is yet far from being self-supporting, but with the aid of interested foundations and wise business management it is not only getting along but is increasing its production month by month.

Purposes of the Press

The major purpose of the Press is to give the University standing in the field of publishing commensurate with its standing in the fields of teaching, research, and extension. To enter the publishing field here in the South, to develop a great scholarly publishing business similar to the organization built up by Harvard and Yale and

Chicago in America, and Cambridge and Oxford in England, can and will bring the University distinction of the same high character as that brought it by the development of its various schools, with the additional advantage that its scholarly output can be even more widely disseminated throughout the scholarly world than the graduates of its schools.

Six of the new volumes tie in with the Governor's live-at-home program. These are books about North Carolina, written with the view to acquainting its citizens with the social and economic status of the state.

Makes Study of State

The introductory volume for the study of the state suggested by the Press is North Carolina: Economic and Social, by Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., who as a member of the department of rural social-economics of the University has devoted 15 years of study to the social and economic aspects of the state.

Other volumes in this live-at-home series are listed as Farm Life Abroad, by Dr. E. C. Branson, head of the rural social-economics department, which tells of the things that have made Denmark a country of prosperous, happy farmers; The Country Life of America, edited by Dr. Wilson Gee, director of the institute for research in social science at the University of Virginia, who has brought together in this book the contributions made at the institute of public affairs held at the University of Virginia last summer; Town and Country, by E. E. Miller, late editor of the Southern Agriculturist, who has shown how the town and country cooperate to mutual advantage; Human Factors in Cotton Culture, by Rupert B. Vance, of the University of North Carolina, who has ana-

Carolina Patriarch Of The Drama Will Interpret "Hamlet" Tonight

To-night Professor Frederick H. Koch, who is to The Carolina Playmakers what George Washington is to our Vaterlandt, will read and interpret Mr. Shakespeare's "Hamlet" as becomes a recognized authority on that gentleman playwright who built a world within a book of plays that since has cost a world, a world of praise. You should pardon the influence that the writer has acquired from contacts with Professor Koch and his Shakespeare. But anyway "Proff" is going to read "Prince of Denmark" at eight and a half bells by The Carolina Playmakers. Theatrical alarm clock this evening by way of initiating for the year the monthly Sunday readings. And everyone is invited to hear "Proff" free of charge. It really should be worth that to even those of our erudite scholars who believe Will Shakespeare was a warrior. For only the other day, Wednesday in fact, this correspondent discovered by perusing through some California journals that our noted Professor got his first suit of clothes from Hamlet, through Hamlet, or by Hamlet—anyway Hamlet gave it to him? Fishy? Not at all. Here's the gist of that part of the life-story of Frederick H. Koch, appearing in The Daily Californian, of the University of California, Tuesday, July 31, 1928, which will explain this paradox, and just how it happened that "Proff" got a suit from Hamlet. Oh, but I told you it was his first suit. Well that's wrong. It was his first dress suit. But then you shouldn't want to know everything at once.

Well, once upon a time the father of our Playmakers was a young fellow who didn't know he had any talent. And this particular morning he woke up to find he also didn't have any money. Now he had been studying "Hamlet" but strangely enough had never seen a play of any sort. Alexander Salvini just happened to be in town (Peoria, Illinois) cast in the role of Hamlet. But being broke, and together with being of conservative Methodist parents who vigorously objected to drama of any form, leaves a fellow in a situation pretty much zero minus. After much coaxing Dad handed him a dollar bill pleading with him not to let on to Ma. That night, as he witnessed the show from the balcony that certain feeling o'ertook him. He went home, memorized the play and presented a one-man-show all by his lone-

Any students having old clothes of any kind are asked to leave them at the "Y" during the week.

FOUNDERS' DAY IS OBSERVED AGAIN

One Hundred Thirty-Seventh Anniversary Is Commemorated Yesterday.

Commemorating the 137th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the first campus building, the University held its memorial exercises under Davie Poplar yesterday. After the program had been opened by the University band, President Frank P. Graham presided, presenting Rev. Eugene Olive of Chapel Hill, who gave the invocation.

The audience sang the University hymn, which was followed by an announcement by Registrar T. J. Wilson, Jr., of the enrollments in the various schools of the University. He announced that there were 224 graduates, 104 law students, 81 medical, 70 pharmacy, 305 engineering, 725 arts, 289 applied sciences, 629 commerce, and 326 education students, making a total of 2753 students enrolled.

Mr. Graham introduced the first speaker, R. R. Williams of Asheville as a member of the "Young Turk Movement," who, when there was inadequate rooming facilities on the campus, toured the state soliciting money for the erection of new dormitories.

Mr. Williams, in his address, gave a history of the University, in which he stressed the fact that more than once the University has had to carry on through depressions.

Mr. Graham then introduced L. P. McLendon of Durham. Mr. McLendon, concentrating on conditions resulting from the World War, stated that the processes of thinking created and cherished during a war last years afterward, and predicted that the college graduates of the state would lead North Carolina out of the present economic depression.

Dean A. W. Hobbs read a list of the University students and alumni who have died since the last Founders' Day. The glee club sang "Integer Vitae," the program ending with the singing by the audience of "Hark the Sound," and the giving of the benediction by Rev. Eugene Olive.

Health Bridge

The health department of the Community Club gave benefit bridge parties on Friday at the home of Mrs. George B. Logan, chairman of the department. One party was given in the afternoon and another at night. The total amount collected for use in the work of the department was $25.50.

The ladies of the health department donated all of the refreshments.

AMERICANS SPEND MORE FOR AUTOS THAN EDUCATION

Washington, Oct. 10.—Figures which have been compiled by the research division of the National Education Association indicate that Americans spend more than five times as much for passenger automobiles each year as they do for the education of their children in the public schools.

In 1928 the country spent less than $2,500,000,000 for public education below the college grade, while it spent $12,500,000,000 for motor cars.

The survey further indicated that three times as much as was spent on education was spent on tobacco, candy, soft drinks and amusements of various sorts.
