ADVISORY BOARD TO HEAD SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

President Graham Appoints
Committee to Act Until Dean
Is Chosen.

A temporary administrative and advisory committee to direct the school of engineering was appointed yesterday by President-elect Frank P. Graham to fill the position of Gustave M. Braune, who succumbed to an attack of pleurisy last week.

The new committee will have as its chairman Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts and a professor in the school of engineering.

The remainder of the committee is composed of heads of departments and schools in the University who are connected with the school of engineering. Professor J. M. Bell, of the department of chemical engineering and dean of the school of applied science, Professor E. G. Hoefler, mechanical engineering, Professor H. G. Baity, civil engineering, and John E. Lear, acting head of the department of electrical engineering, are members of the group.

This committee, filling the position made vacant by the death of Dean Braune and by the continued ill health of Professor George F. Bason, will have the responsibility of making a survey in the engineering school incident to its operation.

UNIVERSITY IS REPRESENTED AT ENGINEER MEET

Charles Hayes, secretary of the local chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, has recently returned from a meeting of the southern district of the student technical division of the society. This meeting was held in Louisville, Kentucky, in conjunction with the meeting of the practicing engineers of the society.

Every technical school in the South except one was represented at the convention. This is the first time North Carolina has sent a representative. Mr. Hayes was the only representative from the University.

A. S. Lee, of Charlotte, is president of the society. Outstanding engineers from all over the country presented papers on many subjects. Many students presented papers in competition for prizes. Numerous inspection trips were conducted through the various technical plants in Louisville.

Next year the meeting of the student division will meet in Gainesville, Florida, at the University of Florida.

Honor Fraternity Chooses Secretary

Beverly Moore has been chosen secretary of Phi Beta Kappa to take the place of Miss Sarah Faulkner, who failed to return to school this year, it was announced yesterday.

Three members of the faculty were also selected to serve with the three officers of the honor fraternity on the executive committee. The committee is now composed of Fred Green, R. B. House, and C. P. Spruill from the faculty and University officials, and Joe Eagles, president, T. H. Barker, Jr., vice-president, and Beverly Moore, newly-elected secretary.

Magazine Deadline

All contributions for the twelve-page Christmas number of the Carolina Magazine, appearing December 14, must be in the hands of the editor not later than Sunday night, December 7.

Copy relevant to the Christmas season is especially desired.

LOCAL Y MEN TO MEET IN DETROIT FOR CONVENTION

World Leaders To Speak To International Group of Students.

The University will send delegates to the international student-faculty conference at Detroit December 28 to January 1. This conference meets every four years, the last one being in Detroit in 1926-27. There will be around 3,000 students and 1,000 faculty at this meeting, representing every state in the United States, as well as twenty-four other countries.

The purpose of the conference is to consider through platform addresses and social groups the major social issues of the present-day world, as these issues are a challenge to educational and religious institutions. The leading educators and religiousists of this and other countries will be on the program. Among the speakers will be such well-known men as Professor Millikan, one of America's foremost scientists, Reinhold Niebuhr, Bishop McConnell, Rabbi Wise, and S. Parkes Cadman.

Railroads are giving delegates reduced rates—half price plus one dollar. Hotels of Detroit are also giving half-price rates. The Detroit Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations have planned some real entertainment for the delegates, including sight-seeing trips and trips into Canada, to Niagara Falls, and other places of interest.

This University was represented in 1927 by nine delegates.

Dormitories Warned About Undue Yelling

For the past several weeks there has been a considerable amount of unnecessary yelling among the dormitories of the University concerning the coming Duke-Carolina contest.

Red Greene, president of the Student Union, is sending out a letter to the president of every dormitory, urging them to report immediately to the student council anyone yelling from one dormitory to another at night, particularly those who insist on using indecent language. This situation was rather deplorable during the Thanksgiving holidays and the student council will take rather drastic action in any such case reported to it. However the council does not believe that the students realize the commotion which they make in the black eye they are giving the University, and they also believe that this warning will put a stop to this unfortunate situation.

Betas Theatre Guests

The members of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity will be the guests of the Carolina theatre at a free show Friday night. The fraternity is requested to be at the door of the theatre at seven o'clock with their president.

Frank Graham's Double Comes To Chapel Hill Creating Stir

Mistaken identity isn't just a movie plot formula. Paul Yelverton of Wilson will vouch for that and will offer as proof more than a handful of illustrations from actual experience. He has been mistaken time and again for President-elect Graham. Since the latter was chosen to succeed Dr. Harry W. Chase as president of this institution, Mr. Yelverton can't so much as poke his head out of his home town without being hailed as "Frank."

A premonition to the eventual situation appeared last spring when Professor Graham went to Fremont, Mr. Yelverton's native home, to address the school children. The "kids" couldn't see why Mr. Yelverton should have been secured to make a finals speech.

Soon the mistake became vice-versa. Within several weeks Mr. Yelverton was stopped on the streets of both Raleigh and Charlotte by ladies desiring to honor the new University head at luncheons. It must have been terribly embarrassing to explain why such gracious invitations must be refused. But not half as embarrassing as the next time when he was wrongly accosted. Mr. Yelverton's duties as undertaker had called him to the County Welfare Department meeting at the new Duke hospital. Hardly had he entered the door when more than a score of ladies mobbed him with requests and invitations. Before the innocent man had a chance to open his mouth, a Duke faculty member lent credence to the error by calling across the hall that he'd like to speak to "Frank Graham" a moment after the meeting. Soon the Goldsboro sheriff, a friend of Mr. Yelverton passed by with a "Hello, Paul." Imagine twenty-odd surprised ladies surrounding one blushing undertaker-victim and you have the picture.

The matter reached a climax recently when Mr. Yelverton visited Chapel Hill. Everybody nodded and spoke as he strolled down the street. He entered a barber shop. A wise barber declared, "You aren't President Graham, but which of his brothers are you?" Relieved that he had at last found someone who wasn't deceived, Mr. Yelverton ordered a collar. A bootblack returned from the errand with the news that President Graham didn't wear the size collar ordered. In Sutton's the soda jerker, from Mr. Yelverton's home town, stood with mouth agape, not knowing whether the gentleman before him was his university president or his fellow citizen. He guessed the wrong way. Our familiar looking visitor had scarcely made his way to the Friendly and found a table when a boy tapped him on the shoulder with a "I'd like to go to Durham this afternoon and—" Mr. Yelverton turned facing the student full-face. "Why you aren't him, are you?"

Hence, the Wilson man concluded that he would immediately go to meet his counterpart. After first being taken for President Graham at the latter's own office, he was informed that the sought-for one was out. He went down on the back steps of Old South building. Soon a car stopped there. President Graham sprang out and rushing up to the visitor cried: "You must be Paul Yelverton, because everybody I've seen today tells me how much we resemble each other!" The likeness of the two was remarkable, practically the only difference lying in Mr. Yelverton's long sideburns and the president's lack of them. Even their voices were somewhat similar! Passing students stared curiously at the pair. The spectacle of the two men so nearly alike in appearance talking together will probably linger long in the memories of the few who witnessed it.

LARGE CROWD AT FRESHMAN SMOKER

Approximately five hundred freshmen turned out last night at their initial smoker given in Swain hall at nine o'clock.

Due to the fact that the class has not yet organized, Pat Patterson conducted the meeting. Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the department of mathematics, spoke about the past relations between Carolina and Duke Universities. Music was furnished by "The Carolina Buccaneers." The smoker was concluded by a few football yells led by two official cheer leaders.

Sigma Chi Pledges Will Give Dance for Fraternity

A dance will be given tonight by the pledges of the Alpha Tau chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity in honor of the active members, in the house of the fraternity. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Carolina Buccaneers.

Refreshments are to be served during the intermission.

Abernethy Returns

Dr. E. A. Abernethy, infirmary physician, who has been ill for quite a while, returned from New York Thursday where he underwent an operation. Mrs. Abernethy, who had remained with him in New York while he was convalescing, returned with the doctor.

MADRY ADDRESSES ROTARY MEETING

R. B. Madry of the University news bureau talked to the Chapel Hill Rotarians at their regular weekly meeting in the Carolina Inn Wednesday evening. Mr. Madry explained the work of the bureau in keeping the activities of the University community before the public.

The club has decided to have ladies night on second Thursday in January. The entertainment will take place in the Carolina Inn. The Chapel Hill club is planning to invite the clubs of Durham, Sanford, Raleigh and Burlington to attend. There will be twelve vaudeville actors to entertain the guests, and following the dinner there will be a dance with Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels playing.

Pikas To Entertain At Supper Saturday

The local chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity will be hosts at a buffet supper given for the members of Duke, Davidson, and State chapters who attend the Duke-Carolina game Saturday. The supper will last from five-thirty to seven o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

This is the first time that the fraternity has done anything of this kind, and if it is a success, it will probably be made an annual affair.

Grail Tickets

Tickets for the Grail dance Saturday night will be on sale in Pritchard-Lloyd's drug store and in the Book Exchange Friday morning. If they are not all sold out they will be on sale in Bynum gymnasium Saturday night at eight-thirty o'clock. The price of the tickets will be one dollar.

FOOTBALL STORY LEADING ARTICLE IN ALUMNI REVIEW

Rare Silhouettes of Famous Alumni Are Reproduced in Latest Issue.

The December issue of the Alumni Review has just been printed and contains many interesting facts about the University. In this issue appear several good articles on the organ dedication, football, and the alumni book club.

The cover is made up of an excellent picture of Smith hall built in 1850 as a library and ball room, later to house the law school, and now the Carolina Playmakers theatre.

Three silhouettes presented to the University by Dr. Archibald Henderson are printed in replica in this issue. They are those of Joseph Caldwell, first president of the University; James Hogg, who is given the most credit for selecting the site for the University; and General William Lenoir, one of the heroes of King's Mountain and first chairman of the University Board of Trustees.

One of the articles in this issue covered the dedication of the new $34,000 Reuter Organ in the music building. The total cost of the renovating the old building, the organ and furnishings was $170,000, of which the State paid only $44,000.

The most interesting feature of the review was perhaps the account of the Carolina-Virginia game on Thanksgiving day. Several exceptionally clear photographs of exciting plays were included. Chuck Collin's father came down for the first time from his home in Oak Park, Illinois, and he was well pleased with the performance of his son's team.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR HANDLING OF CROWD SATURDAY

University of North Carolina authorities are organizing a record force of assistants and making a multitude of preparations to handle with dispatch and convenience the large crowd expected for the Carolina-Duke state titular game here Saturday.

A corps of twelve State Highway Patrolmen, under the command of Lieutenant Goodwin, will have charge of directing the traffic. The patrolmen will be assisted by fifty uniformed officers generously lent by neighboring towns, and by a large number of students who will serve as directors on the different parking lots.

Tickets will be sold from booths at the stadium by twenty students. There will be thirty-six more students keeping the gates by which approach is had from every direction. A corps of two hundred ushers will care for the seating problem.

All parking lots and approaches have been put in tip-top shape, and the dirt stretch of road between the campus and the Raleigh Road and by the Freshman Field parking lot, has been newly paved. Likewise, all incoming roads have been reported as clear and in good shape, the detours having been lifted on Route ten from Greensboro to Burlington and on the Route fifty-four shortcut from Burlington to Chapel Hill.

The seats are going at a lively clip, according to announcement today from Graduate Manager Charles T. Woollen, but many good tickets are still available at the Book Exchange and Students' Supply Store in Chapel Hill and at out of town ticket offices.
