FIRST OFFERINGS IN THEATRE SET STAGED TONIGHT

Production of Two of Plays Tonight in Playmakers Theatre Begins Three-Day Series.

Together with several new Playmakers, 3.2 beer will make its debut on the Playmaker theatre stage with the production of three bills of eight new plays tonight, tomorrow and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock. The beverage appears in Ellen Stewart's The Queen Was In The Kitchen.

The plays, directed by students in Professor Samuel Selden's course of play direction, are not experimental plays but constitute a regular offering on the Playmaker season-ticket schedule. Season tickets, not transferable, will secure admission to the set of three programs. Other tickets are 25 cents for each evening.

The first bill tonight opens with a professionally written drama, The Stronger, by Johann August Strindberg, directed by Martha Hatton. The play is a monologue with two characters, one of whom acts in pantomime, and is in the nature of a character study, with a woman addressing her husband's former mistress.

Judgement Comes To Daniel, by Bernice Kelly Harris and directed by Mrs. H. R. Totten, is second. The play was a prize winner among community original plays in the drama festival here early in the spring.

Jo Orendorff directs Foster Fitz-Simons' A Little Boat To India, which climaxes the evening with light comedy. An intricate plot deals with a young socialite, Leonard Stuart, who discovers early in the play that his wife doesn't love him. Mrs. Stuart is entertaining a poet, who is eloping with someone's wife. Both couples have quarrels and in the end Stuart runs away with the errant wife.

Plays to be presented tomorrow night are Martha Hatton's Comedy At Five, Eternal Spring by Robert Barnett, and Blow Me Down by Bill Bonyun, with Martha Hatton, Betty Barnett and Ed Martin directing.

In the final trio are The Queen Was In The Kitchen by Ellen Stewart and directed by James Thompson, Etowah Plantation written and directed by Eugenia Rawls, and a second production of Comedy At Five.

Enviably Hurling Record Made By Hearn While Playing For Toronto

Carolina Coach Pitched Twenty Scoreless Innings Against Jersey City in 1913, Holding Skeeters Hitless Over Regulation Distance and Yielding Only Six in Extra Frames.

By Jack Bessen

"Game called on account of darkness." That cry by the umpire isn't any too significant; it has happened numbers of times, but that Tuesday evening of August 12, 1913, this hoarse shout ended one of the most remarkable exhibitions of hurling that the grand old game has ever known.

Toronto and Jersey City, both near the bottom of the heap in the International League race, met in the latter's stadium, the West Side Park. On the mound for the Skeeters was the reliable Thompson, ace hurler of the Jersey City club. Opposing him was a young burly left-hander, Bunny Hearn, up from the Springfield club of the Three I League, where he made the enviable record of winning 27 games while dropping five.

Hearn in Rare Form

Both Thompson and Hearn were in rare form, and the present Carolina mentor didn't allow the Skeeters a hit over the regulation nine innings. But the Maple Leafs were unable to cross the plate and the game went into extra innings. In the thirteenth frame, Thompson was removed in favor of pinch-hitter Manser, and Brandon continued where Thompson left off.

With the score tied at 0-0, the umpire called the game on account of darkness in the twentieth inning, after three hours and twenty minutes of play. In all, Hearn allowed Jersey City six hits, three of them being garnered by Arthur Bues, a Giant player of 1911.

Jersey City fans, ranking with Brooklyn addicts for rabidness, paid Hearn great tribute for his masterful pitching exhibition, for after Thompson's removal in the thirteenth, they were with the Toronto hurler.

Papers Praise Hurling

The Toronto papers were loud in their praise of their young pitching hero, the Toronto Mail and Empire saying this of the contest:

"Hearn, the Toronto hurler, pitched one of the most remarkable games in the history of baseball. Not only did he last throughout the whole game, but finished in as good condition as when he started. With a baffling assortment of curves at his command, he held the Skeeters hitless throughout nine full innings, and allowed only a half dozen in all."

Nor was the Toronto World less profuse in its praise:

"Only once before have two

DELEGATES TAKE FURTHER ACTION REGARDING LAWN

Treasurers of Campus Organizations Meet Again Today to Discuss Forward Project.

Treasurers of all campus organizations, including fraternities, clubs, and dormitories, will meet in Graham Memorial this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock to take further action in the campaign begun yesterday to better the condition of the University campus.

Representatives from eight fraternities met yesterday afternoon at St. Anthony Hall to discuss the situation and several definite steps were taken.

Work Begins Today

Work will be begun this morning by the building department with a power-cutter belonging to the town of Chapel Hill. Scythes and sickles will also be employed on the denser parts of the campus.

The project was initiated by members of St. Anthony Hall through a letter of the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday in which it was stated that, in order to come to the aid of the University with the sliced budget, some action should be taken by campus organizations.

$200 Is Needed

A statement by P. L. Burch of the buildings department revealed that the department is without adequate funds to cover the costs of repairing the University's two power-cutters and consequently work has been abandoned on the lawns. A sum of $200 is needed to cover the expense.

Burch also asserted that the

HOUSE APPROVES SCHOOL MEASURE

Defeats Action Providing for Extra School Month With Voters' Agreement.

After refusing to reconsider its action providing for the operation of schools for nine months if the voters agree, the state house yesterday passed the biennial school machinery bill on second reading by the vote of 72 to 20.

An amendment prohibiting any local division which is in default in interest and principal on its indebtedness from operating schools for nine months was also adopted in spite of opposition from Representatives Turner and Sullivan.

The senate passed the conference report on the biennial revenue bill on second reading by a vote of 27 to 16. Senate leaders predicted its final passage this morning without amendments.

The report was accepted, however, only after the defeat of two amendments to revenue compromise.

The house reopened the school fight by reconsidering and defeating an amendment it put to the senate bill Tuesday night under which any local school unit could have supplemented state funds if the voters agree.

Barefoot to Lead Devotional
