Continuing the series of meetings called by President Frank Porter Graham to consider educational policies, the University faculty met yesterday in Bingham hall to discuss recommendations submitted by the faculty committee on educational integration.

The committee on integration submitted to the faculty last week nine proposals to make teaching more effective at the University which included the following recommendations for discussion: the making of a sharper distinction between the first two years of undergraduate work and the last two; a revision of the school of applied science; the examination of the "course offering" of the various departments; the unification of the various University departments; and a consideration of altering the semester and quarter system for a common freshman year.

Student Discussion

These proposals are not only for faculty discussion but are also for student consideration, and the proposals will be submitted to the Student Advisory board for suggestions. President Graham stated yesterday that he would welcome any student discussion on the matter. The University inaugurated the policy a few years ago of not taking de-

MERCHANTS WILL DECORATE SHOPS

Local Businessmen Back Homecoming Day Plans; Prizes for Best Store-Windows.

The merchants of Chapel Hill are giving wholehearted cooperation to the plans for decorating the town for Homecoming day. Each merchant has contracted to display his windows and store front with attractive trimmings, which will be judged for prizes by three men.

E. Carrington Smith, chairman of the committee for decorations, announced yesterday that the store winning the judgment as having the best decorations would be awarded tickets to the game Saturday. The merchant winning second place will receive one pass. These are awarded through the cooperation of the Athletic council.

Judging Set for Friday

The judging of the windows will be made Friday night and it is imperative that every merchant have his window and front trimmed by then. The judges will be Bob House, Dean Bradshaw and one other faculty member.

The merchants are aiding the student body in their drive for bigger and better Homecoming day for the alumni of the University. Every merchant who aids in the living of the spirit of the week will be aiding the attempt toward the building up of a greater University spirit while at the same time helping his own trade.

This eight-tube Atwater Kent table model radio will be donated by the University club to the dormitory building which is most attractively decorated for Homecoming day. The radio is on display at Sutton's.

According to the rules of the contest, decorating may be begun immediately and competing groups may employ any plan of decoration. It is suggested that football or harvest-time schemes be used.

The contest will close at 10:00 o'clock Saturday morning, when judges will visit the dorms and fraternities and decide the most originally and cleverly decorated. Competing groups may get suggestions for decoration motifs from Mr. Timmons, of the U. C. S. P.

A similar contest for the two most colorfully decorated automobiles is being conducted, with the winners to be decided at the pep rally Friday night. Students interested may communicate with Jim Cordon at Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

SONG REHEARSAL LED BY MILLER

Group Also Sings Victory Song Which Was Made Famous By Kay Kyser.

Students gathered in Memorial hall yesterday morning to practice the University battle songs under the direction of H. Grady Miller of the music faculty.

A song which has not been used as yet this year, but which was very popular in the time of Kay Kyser, was taught to the new students. This number was "On to Victory," sung to the tune of the "Song of the Vagabonds." Instead of using individual cards as was done with the new songs, there was a large placard on the stage on which were printed the words of the song. Cheerleader Ernest Hunt demonstrated the gestures that are to be used with the song.

The students were then led in several rehearsals of the two new battle songs written for the University by Kay Kyser, "Tar Heels on Hand" and "Split It For the Team." These will be used at the Georgia Tech-Carolina football game on Homecoming day.

Tentative Casts of Forty Characters for Experimental Plays to Be Selected.

Try-outs for the first bill of experimental plays to be produced by the Playmakers November 7 will be conducted this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre.

Eight plays, using some forty characters, will be cast at this time, and they will offer a wide variety of types for those interested in acting. With the exception of Robert Barnett, former editor of the Carolina Magazine, it will be the first time any of the present writers have written for the Playmakers.

Eight Plays

Barnett has written a drama of indecision with a setting in Chapel Hill among University students entitled "No Dawning." Carl Thompson has written "O Woman!", a modern comedy of an ancient tragedy with its setting in paradise amidst the domestic life of Adam and Eve. "Sing Your Own Song," a sophisticated comedy by Nat Farnworth, is a story of contemporary college life laid in a sorority house.

Vermont C. Royster has written "Shadows of Industry," a drama of the modern financial world drawn from the tense atmosphere in the spring of 1933. Another play dealing with life in a big city is Fredricka Fredrick's "Hell's Dreams," a tragedy of modern youth.

"Showing at Eight" is a dramatic story of the moving picture theatre in a small town by Leonard Rappart, involving the fight between the owner and the "big men" of the town. Margaret McCauley wrote "November Night," a play of a Pennsylvania mining town, dealing with a riot and the Ku Klux Klan. "Little Things" by Margaret Sicheloff will round off the first bill.

Students are urged to be on time in order to facilitate the casting.

After a period of suspension it was reorganized by its present dean, Father J. Schnitt, in 1924. During its 400 years, many names since famous were connected with its existence. In 1801, Franz Schubert won a place in the choir by competitive examination.

The average age of the young gentlemen who compose the Wiener Saengerknaben is 12 years. In addition to their dean, there is a music director and accompanist, Dr. George Gruben.

Eight Hundred and Four Students Receive Warnings; English Has 183.

Eight hundred and four students yesterday received marks warning them of mid-term deficiencies, according to an unofficial tabulation.

This is 656 lower than the total number of University students receiving warning marks last year in the fall quarter.

Two hundred and one warning marks were given out in mathematics, the largest number of deficiencies in any one subject. This number is 20 lower than the total number of math deficiencies in the mid-term report last fall.

English Deficiencies

The greatest increase in deficiencies was in English, with 14 more than the 169 given out last fall. Only 125 cases of deficiencies in French were reported, as compared with the 164 last fall. One hundred and sixty failing or barely passing marks were given out in 1932, but this year the number of such grades in history and government together total 155.

In German only 40 deficiencies were posted. Botany, chemistry, geology, physics, and zoology combined had 138 failing and barely passing grades given out. Eighty-three deficient grades were announced in commerce and economics, and 49 in the school of engineering. Sociology, philosophy, and psychology together netted only 17 warnings.

VOTE PERSONAL SUPPORT

Union Forum Recommends That Council Be Lenient in Punishing First Offense.

Two representative campus bodies decided last night to uphold the honor system at the University, and voted to carry out personally the principles of the code.

A representative group of the senior class voted its unanimous support of the honor system in principle, favoring the system in its entirety. The body commended and approved the action of those sophomores and freshmen who had taken definite steps towards redeeming and preserving the honor code.

Motions to uphold the honor system in its present conception and to report all violations to the student council were carried by a large majority of the Union Forum in its first meeting of the year. The Forum also voted to recommend to the student council that a student shall not necessarily be expelled for a first offense, but may be given a suspended sentence.

Heated Discussion

In the midst of a heated discussion concerning proposed changes to mitigate the harshness of the present punishment for violations, Mayne Albright, speaking as a former member of three student councils, stated his belief that conviction of violating the honor code should bring certain expulsion. Albright pointed out that the tra-

ADVISORY BOARD TO HAVE SURVEY

Committees to Be Appointed to Study Curricula in Six Schools of University.

Harper Barnes announced yesterday that the Student Advisory board had decided to undertake the supervision of a study and survey of the curricula in six schools of the University.

The study, although conducted at the same time that the faculty is working upon a similar project will be in no way connected with the faculty research, but will be a survey from the point of view of the students.

Committees from Schools

To conduct the research there will be appointed a committee of six from each of the schools, liberal arts, commerce, applied science, public administration, graduate and engineering. These committees will be composed of three seniors, two juniors and one sophomore from the respective schools. The students will be recommended by the deans of the schools and will be appointed by Harper Barnes, with the assistance of the advisory board.

The Student Advisory board is composed of students appointed by the dean of students with recommendations from the president of the student body. The members this year are Hayward Weeks, Harper Barnes, Ed Lanier, Joe Sugarman, John Acee, Vergil Weathers, Irvin Boyle, Jack Pool, and Janie Jolly.
