Critical Co-eds Claim Carolina Males Minus Masterful Manner

Social Lights Have Poor "Lines," Are Naive, Jealous of Co-eds, And Not Particularly Intellectual, Say Co-eds; Admit Men Are Good Sports.

Scorched are the Carolina men who think something of themselves and nothing of the co-eds; beloved are those who feign humbleness and haunt telephone booths in search of shack numbers.

Co-ed opinions on university men range from sizzling indignation to tender admiration. At last female minds have pondered the Carolina man, paraded his virtues, emphasized his deficiencies, and defined the ideal Carolina gentleman. In general, all of them, from the blase Miss Northern to the impulsive, bright-eyed freshman, burst out with, "Oh, they're o. k. but..."

Imitate Movie Romeos

And that "but" leads to many complications. "What do you think of their love-making?" One dejected lass stormed, "Oh, they think love is what they read about or see in the movies. It's hokey... they go in for what they can get and their conversation is limited to 'Your eyes are so blue; or the curls at the nape of your neck are...' Gosh, don't ask me what I think." Another looked up brightly, "Well, thank goodness, they aren't squishy." General opinion had it that University men have lines that they don't know how to manipulate. As one said, "Not a line in a carload! A girl has to do all the work. And those that have lines work so strenuously to put them across that I get worn out."

PARADE PLANNED FOR STATE GAME

The University club will meet Thursday night in order to discuss final plans for an exhibition of student spirit at Raleigh before the State game Saturday.

At Riddick field a special section will be set aside for Carolina students. The Tar Heel cheerleaders will be on hand to lead the songs and yells.

Cheering Praised

Much comment has been received on the exhibition of spirit put up by the Carolina stands at the Georgia Tech game. According to many alumni who attended the game, it was the best spirit shown by the student body that they have seen.

In commenting on the game, Ernest Hunt, chief cheerleader, said, "It was the first time in my three years at the University that I have seen the student body fight with the team for the whole game. Usually there is a let-up in the cheering as soon as the opponents get in the lead, but such was not the case Saturday in the Georgia Tech game and here's hoping the student body will follow the action already

FROSH HEAR NRA ASSEMBLY TALKS

Mrs. Carroll, Mayor Foushee, And Harper Barnes Present Short Talks.

The NRA was the topic of the program in freshman assembly yesterday. Professor Harold D. Meyer who was in charge, introduced as speaker Mrs. D. D. Carroll, Mayor J. M. Foushee, and Harper Barnes.

Mrs. Carroll, talked first on the NRA in the homes of Chapel Hill, stressing the fact that a great deal of the country's buying power is in the hands of the women, and that their cooperation is indispensable in putting across the national recovery. She explained how the women of Chapel Hill are helping by patronizing stores which are abiding by the regulations of the program.

Types of Merchants

"There is a great gulf between practical and theoretical agreement with the NRA," said Mrs. Carroll. "There are two types of merchants wearing the blue eagle—those who abide by their codes and help in the spirit of carrying on the recovery program, and those who, having secured the emblem, do all they can to escape its obligations.

"We women will detect the evasions and trade with the cooperating stores. Students can help form the formidable weapon of public opinion by exerting their influence on their mothers and friends who do not discriminate between the two types of merchants."

J. M. Foushee, mayor of Chapel Hill, was introduced
