AUTHOR REVIEWS BOOK ON NORMAN

Phillips Russell Gives Review of "William the Conqueror" at Bull's Head Program.

Phillips Russell, well-known biographer and instructor of creative writing in the University yesterday gave a short, informal review of his new biography, "William the Conqueror," at the regular Tuesday afternoon program in the Bull's Head bookshop.

Russell's reasons for writing this book were that there had been no adequate biography of William the Conqueror written for a number of years, and that there was no biography in existence that had appeal for the average American reader.

Interesting Presentation

In Russell's book the material is presented in a most interesting manner, and presents an exact account of events during the ninth century. The book tells of William's preparations to conquer England, his reasons, and happenings after the battle of Hastings. It also gives an insight into the life of William, and tells of many heretofore unpublished incidents about him. The book required approximately three years to complete, including the time Russell spent in England. Russell will be glad to autograph copies for any persons owning his book.

GROVES HAS NEW FAMILY TREATISE FOR PUBLICATION

Sociology Professor Emphasizes Various Efforts Going On To Conserve Family.

Professor Ernest R. Groves of the sociological department has a book ready for publication entitled "The American Family." It replaces his "Social Problems of the Family," a college text available dealing with the family other than from an historical point of view. In so brief a time the interest in the family has developed rapidly, and in nearly every college and university courses are offered either by the department of sociology or home economics, or in some universities, as at Cornell, in both.

There are also several texts that treat the family as a contemporary social problem. "The American Family" emphasizes the development of the family life in the United States. Our characteristic family life is regarded as a product of the influences of several European cultures and the American frontier. It is distinguished by its democratic character and the trend toward equality of women.

Family Adaptation

The forthcoming text sees in the present difficulties of the American family the process of adaptation to modern conditions of living rather than any tendency toward disorganization.

The feature of the book is the attention given to the various efforts now going on to conserve the family. There are chapters treating the legal, eugenic, educational, mental hygiene, and economic approaches to the improvement of family experience. The text is expected to appear about the first of January and, like "The Social Problems of the Family," will be published by Lippincott.

SHURE PRESENTS RECITAL TONIGHT

Noted Organist Offers Program Including Own Compositions In Music Hall at 8:30.

Ralph Deane Shure will present a program of organ selections, including his own religious compositions, in Hill Music hall at 8:30 o'clock tonight. The proceeds will go to the benefit of the University Glee club, which is jointly sponsoring the program with Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity.

The Glee club has in years past represented the University on tours in various parts of the country, appearing in Kansas City, Cincinnati, Washington, and New York.

Glee Club Successful

After a period of successful appearances two years ago, the Glee club was winner of the contest for southern college glee clubs, and consequently made the trip to New York to represent the University in the national contest.

As obligations incurred for the expenses of the trips have not yet been met entirely, the proceeds of the concert tonight will be used to pay the deficit.

It is hoped that, since the Glee club does not charge for its appearances on the campus, a surplus may be raised by presentations of outstanding artists so that the organization may represent the University on a tour this year.
