Laurels To "Screaming Eagle"

Goerch Relates Bizarre History of Carolina's Faithful Rooter, Leather-Lung Morris

The crown denoting the most famous Carolina rooter rests, unchallenged, upon the slightly bald pate of Lath Morris, "The Screaming Eagle," whose prolonged and strident cries have become an institution of Carolina athletic contests.

The bizarre history of this unique individual is reviewed in the article headed, "Waw! Waw!" "Yupee-ee-ee," in the current issue of Carl Goerch's magazine, "The State."

Very few athletic contests escape the wary eye of "The Eagle." Weaving from place to place in the crowded bleachers, Lath pauses intermittently to rare back and emit bellows that would shame Tarzan.

Above the roar of the crowd at a football game, above the music of the bands, above, even the organized cheering of the students floats the war-cry of "The Eagle," urging "his team, Carolina" on to victory.

When Lath feels that the spirit of the cheering section is lagging, he swoops down to the sidelines and helps the cheerleaders. Basketball or football, boxing or wrestling, Lath is usually on hand.

In his story of Morris in "The State," Carl Goerch explains "The Eagle's" interest in football. Morris was born in Brenham, Texas, and played fullback while he attended high school there. Later, he became quarterback at a junior college in Brenham.

He happened to come to North Carolina when the Texas construction company for which he was working accepted the job of building the highway between Farmville, N. C. and Wilson.

After the road was finished, he liked the surroundings so well that he stayed in the state.

Lath is now working with the A. C. Monk Tobacco Company of Farmville. He is 31 years old, married, and has a five-year-old daughter.

"I reckon you might call a voice like mine somewhat unusual," admits Lath, in Goerch's article, "but I believe it has its good points." Lath says that he knows "a good many" boys on the Carolina and State teams, and that he gets cards from them right along.

"They seem to appreciate my yelling," he says, "and the crowds do too, and I get a kick out of it myself, so I hope everybody's satisfied."

All Y. M. C. A. cabinet officers will meet at the assembly hour tomorrow in the office of Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the University "Y."

BRUNO CONSIDERS VICTORY CERTAIN

German Relies on Bavarian Woman-Artist's Story to Clear Him; Case May End Soon.

Flemington, N. J. Feb. 2—(UP)—Richard Bruno Hauptmann smiled today as he told his guards that he believed his case already won. He slept easily, ate heartily, and appeared unconcerned over the lack of progress the defense lawyers had made.

He is relying, it was learned, upon the testimony that Mrs. Hilda Braunlichzaenglein, a Bavarian artist, is expected to give testimony to clear him from the charge of having written extortion letters.

Offers Aid

Mrs. Braunlichzaenglein has been in America for four years. A portrait painter by profession, she offered, voluntarily, to testify in behalf of Hauptmann.

The State is checking the defense witnesses to be offered this week. The end of the most dramatic trial that New Jersey has ever seen may end next week, official observers pointed out today.

The defense, under the direction of Attorney Reilly, said today that they expect to complete their case Thursday.

LABOR CHIEFTAIN FLAYS NRA HEAD FOR 'BETRAYAL'

Lewis Brands Richberg Traitor Before Senate Committee; Green Warns of Strife.

LEWIS: "NRA FAILURE"

Washington, Jan. 2—(UP)—The minions of organized labor worked themselves into a fighting mood today as they came into the open with violent attacks on the NRA and Donald R. Richberg.

Labor leaders struck with their characteristic stormy denunciations at the president's coordinator of New Deal units.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, casting aside polite phrases, declared before a Senate committee that he considered Richberg a "traitor to organized labor."

"Too Much Pressure"

The fiery head of the U.M.W. A. claimed that the NRA had yielded to the pressure of "big business" and had failed in its original purpose, to put workers back on payrolls.

William Green, American Federation of Labor head, came to the front to back up his co-workers. He stated that Lewis "largely reflected the feeling of officers of the federation." He didn't say what the members thought.

Green said there were signs of restiveness in automobile, textile, steel and other unions.

Phi Delt Pledge

Newton Whitfield of Courtland, Va., has pledged Phi Delta Theta, the dean of students announced recently.

Room Rent Due

The second installment of all room rent is due and payable at the cashier's office in Old South February 5. Any changes and transfers must be made through the business office.

Charges have been made to the accounts of all students leasing dormitory rooms. In order to save time and trouble, students are advised to pay their bills by mail.

With a convocation of the entire University in Memorial hall at 10 a. m., the celebration will begin. President Frank Porter Graham will address the group on behalf of the faculty and Virgil Weathers, president of the student body, will represent the Carolina students.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Kemp D. Battle of Rocky Mount, member of the class in which President Graham graduated from the University, outstanding among the barristers of North Carolina, and grandson of President Battle whose active service in behalf of the University held it together during the trying reconstruction years. Battle will represent the alumni, telling of some of the University's achievements and traditions.

Symphony Orchestra

The convocation program, which will last about an hour, will feature the University Symphony Orchestra in connection with the outstanding speakers.

Until the lunch hour, the "holiday" will be allowed to visit the various exhibits presented by the campus organizations. Many of these exhibits will be located in Graham Memorial and the remainder in the various department buildings on the campus.

The exhibits will remain open for the entire day or possibly longer in order that all Carolinians, alumni, students, and professors, may become acquainted with the numerous phases of the University work.

During the lunch period, each member of the faculty will be guest of a Carolina student for dinner.

Game to Feature

The afternoon spotlight will occur at 2:30 when Coach Carl Snavely will display the results of the winter quarter training, presenting his football warriors in an intra-squad battle. Special exercises are being planned for the occasion to stimulate autumn color for the affair.

Until 6:30 p. m., all Carolina fraternities will keep open house and it is intended that all students and teachers will join in a period of "happy family" visiting, regardless of fraternal or non-fraternal affiliations.

At 8 p. m. the evening stunt night will begin and will last until 9:30, concluding the day's
