LETTERS To The Editor

NO MORE POLITICS

To the Editor

Dear Sir:

The campus at present time is being treated with a very peculiar aftermath to a campus election. Since the recent elections have been held for the freshmen your paper has been filled day after day with reports of political trickery among the freshmen candidates—those elected and those defeated. To us who have been on this campus for several years this is both an amusing and serious affair. It is amusing to the upperclassmen since the affair is being carried on by freshmen who seemingly are trying to learn the art of being slick politicians. On the other hand it is serious because if such a policy is started by this group when they are freshmen in all probability it will continue for the remaining four years of their college career.

It is true that this campus of ours has all the markings of a true democracy. Anyone is open and free to express his or her opinion at any time. But the policy of throwing dirt in a political campaign even after the candidates have been chosen is certainly not a desirable addition to the campus life.

So my request is that you quit publishing statements of the opposing parties. Let them settle their disputes in a personal way and not through the columns of the daily paper which the entire campus reads. It is the tradition at the University that freshman class officers never amount to anything else during their college days. Leave this as it is.

So let's wait until spring for any more politics and clear the campus daily of the political stink.

Signed,
H. J. B.

BAD JOURNALISM

To the Editor

Dear Sir:

I have a serious protest to register against the article by Mr. McAden that you printed in the DAILY TAR HEEL for Saturday, November 5, and particularly against the head line, which read, "CPU Head Protests Action of Campus 'Reds' At Speech." Webster's Dictionary defines a "red" in this sense as "a revolutionary; an anarchist; esp., one practicing or favoring revolutionary socialism." This appellation I denounce not only as a gross example of flagrant editorializing in the news but as a false and slanderous attack on the signers of the leaflet. I am in no way a communist, "red," or advocate of revolution; and I refuse to have what I see as a growing liberal movement to rouse the campus from its political apathy lightly killed in its inception by the DAILY TAR HEEL or any vested reactionary group on the campus by classifying it as "red."

The fact that we attacked Red-baiting does not imply that we ourselves are "Reds." Anyone who cannot see the difference between advocating revolution and attacking a reactionary speaker has neither the accuracy nor the responsibility to control a public organ of expression. I hope the responsible authorities of the DAILY TAR HEEL do not stand behind this flagrant misrepresentation of the truth. Sincerely, Lee Manning Wiggins.

Editor's note: The staff of the paper regrets the substitution of the word "Reds" for the word "Liberals." It also regrets a reference to the students concerned as frequenters of a downtown bookshop. The bookshop is a popular student gathering place and has many frequenters.

DISSATISFACTION

To the Editor

Dear Sir:

From the editorial in Thursday's DAILY TAR HEEL I see that congratulations to the Athletic Association are in order. Let me congratulate them too on the profitable way they handle the students' pass books during the football season. For the compulsory athletic fee every student is given a pass book to all of the football, basketball and baseball games here. It seems that the Athletic Association is unusually strict about the provisions contained "inside the cover" of the fall quarter pass book. They are not consistent about these provisions, however, because at the basketball or baseball games almost anyone can get in on anyone else's ticket without being bothered. There is evidently much more profit to be gained from having a person pay to enter a football game than from one having to pay to enter a basketball game.

Self-help students who have to work on the day of the game or students who cannot go for one reason or another are not allowed to sell their pass books. On the other hand, if a student cannot go or does not want the whole Democratic ticket. "Both parties have come to be governed by oligarchies and both need to clean house by routing out these false leaders and officers who have so little consulted popular will and so frequently imposed their own views, opinions and guesses.

"We are making the best fight we can in this election and I wish that Democratic voters, dissatisfied with the treatment received in this provision of democratic machinery, will go to the polls and vote their preference. If the Republicans who have had the "rule of the few" too often will join with us in protesting and rebuking this undemocratic and un-American procedure, we can elect Barker as a symbol and an example of our devotion to the rule of the people as opposed to the rule of the bosses.

POLITICAL SCIENCE PROF CHARGES RING RULE

"There is a ring in each of the four counties of the district and Chapel Hill headquarters is well known locally. This is not the only headquarters in the county and the Chapel Hill ring has been fairly well tied up, though not identical with, the Orange county ring.

"Each county needs to bring its ring into the open and to fight it because such rings defeat democratic government.

"They work best in secrecy through "executive sessions" and other under cover methods."

amount contributed, the result will be obtained.

The fraternity taking first place will be the guest of E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Pick and Carolina theaters, at a moving picture show. For every dollar contributed in this contest, a member of the fraternity will be checked off. As with the dormitories, the competition will be based on percentages, the number of active members listed with the dean of schools being used.

Fifty cents out of every dollar of the funds received from the call will be forwarded to the national society at Washington, with the remainder to be dispensed at the local committee's discretion. The University Red Cross chapter sponsors life saving classes and equipment open for use to any student in the University.

Japan Justified, Says Professor

exploiting China for her national resources.

HOSTILITY TO RUSSIA

Japan is also hostile toward Russia, it was pointed out, because she is afraid of the appeal of the communistic plan of the Chinese people. A "share-the-wealth" program has definite appeal to the poverty-stricken Chinese. If Russia should gain control of China, it would mean that Japan will be cut off from her source of raw materials and that the two greatly populated countries on the west, Russia and China, will be her enemies. So Japan must do everything in her power to keep Russia out of China.

Japan's economic situation is also serious, it was stated. The population increases about 1,000,000 a year, and China would mean an outlet for this excess. Japan also believes that she can do as much for China as any of the European nations and through her aggression she is trying to carry out this theory.

New Telephone Directory Issued

A new telephone directory has just been published and is being delivered to all telephone subscribers in Chapel Hill.

The first six pages of the new directory give explicit directions on the operation of the dial phone and the local exchange requests every user of the phone to read and study the proper method of using the phone.

To Tell The Truth---

By ADRIAN SPIES

(A Senatorial investigation has disclosed that candidates for the United States Senate from three states have already spent more money upon their campaigns than they would gain in salary for six years of service "to the voting public." The following fantasy is the writer's idea of what they might have said.)

Last night a Senatorial candidate prepared himself for sleep. He was weary from the rigors of his campaign, and he fell gratefully into the softness of his bed. The man tossed—and murmured forth this soulful prayer to whatever power there be.

PLEASE LISTEN TO ME!

"Dear Power that watches over elections—listen to my plea. Listen to all of the wonderful things that I have done for the people of my state. A few short days ago I was a business man, and a rich one. I minded my own business and made friends with all the politicians. When I wanted favors done I went to see them. And I got my favors done—because I was rich. I even went to lobby for high tariffs in Washington—taking time off from my business to do it. You see, dear Power that watches over elections, I have been serving the voters of this state.

"Some time ago, the man that runs things in this state—the Big Boy who thinks that he is as great as You, came to see me in my office. He said that the voters of my state needed me—and that he was having a little trouble with his present boy—I mean Senator, dear Power. He said—this Big Boy in my state who makes more money than the President—that he to go to the Student Entertainment, he can stand out in front of Memorial Hall and sell his pass book for what he paid for it. The University has to pay hundreds of dollars every year for the Student Entertainment Series but is evidently very indifferent about whether the students go to it.

Yet in the case of football, where the players are not SUPPOSED to be paid, the pass books have to be used by the person "whose name appears on the cover" or it is not to be used at all. If a student sells his pass book anyway and it is taken up, he is violating the Honor System and is called upon to explain the "fraudulent use" of the book. There is not much respect for that particular phase of the Honor System, however, as seen by the fact that a very large number of students, especially co-eds, sell their books before every game. Apparently these students too are dissatisfied with the Athletic Association's policies.

Sincerely,
Robert Brawley.

needed a few bills proposed, and that I was the man to do it. I really didn't want to go, dear Power, I was making plenty in my business and Washington gets too hot. But he said that the voters needed me—and that I was my party's man. So I said that I would run, dear Power, just to serve the voters of my state.

HE SAID I WAS GREAT

"Oh, by the way dear Power, did you hear what the Big Boy said about me when he announced my candidacy? He stood up and put his hand on my shoulder, and he called me a great American. A great American, dear Power, and a servant to the voters of my state.

"Well, I guess you know the troubles we had during this campaign. The voters wouldn't listen to me until we spent a million dollars. It's getting so that you don't count in politics unless you can spend a million dollars on your campaign. I don't think that's right, dear Power, it's undemocratic or something. I know some hundred thousand dollar boys who have had their career killed just because they were poor. . . . Say, we had plenty of trouble in our districts until we started putting warnings into the pay envelopes of our factory workers. That helped a little, but the voters in my state are getting hard to please.

I DID EVERYTHING

"I kissed a million babies and shook a million hands. And I always took my hat off to the flag when the Big Boy called me a great American. I told the business men I was their man, and I told the workers that my father was a boiler-maker. I had tea at the DAR and lunch with the Brotherhood of All Men.

"Dear Power, these campaigns are expensive things. I spent a lot on the voters of my state. In fact, I've spent more than I would get in six years at the Senate. So you see dear Power, I just have to get into office. Because I really love my people—and the Big Boy says that I'm his man.

"I guess that I can go to sleep now—and leave everything up to the Big Boy and you. No more babies to kiss. No more promises to worry about. Nothing to think about very much—except that the Big Boy called me A GREAT AMERICAN WHO OFFERED HIS LIFE TO THE VOTERS OF HIS STATE.

"Goodnight now."

Kelling To Speak

Miss Lucile Kelling, assistant professor of library science of the University, will talk to the Sanford Woman's club this afternoon following a luncheon. She will discuss "Contemporary Poetry and the Poetic Mind."
