Paul Green To Talk To Writer Seminar

Paul Green, University alumnus and considered the state's outstanding playwright, will discuss "The Drama of the South" at the fifth Seminar of Southern Writers to be held by alumnae of WCUNC in Greensboro Friday and Saturday.
Winner of the Pulitzer prize for the play "In Abraham's Bosom" and author of the widely-acclaimed "Johnny Johnson," "The House of Connelly," and "The Lost Colony," Green is one of the outstanding writers to be present at the meet.
Among others who will lead discussions on southern literature are three members of the Woman's college faculty, Dr. R. B. Kendrick, historian, Caroline Gordon, novelist and short story writer, and Allen Tate, poet, biographer, and novelist.

Appeal Made Against Embargo

In North Carolina, campaigns have been held in the past several weeks. Activity on a nation-wide scale, was climaxed on February 24 by meetings called by the American Student union at which the present situation was compared to that of Washington's armies at Valley Forge.
In Boston, at Harvard, Radcliffe, Simmons, and other Boston colleges, action resulted in radio programs and in sending a sound truck throughout greater Boston urging that the embargo be lifted; at Temple in the Philadelphia area, a student led a horse through the streets in the neighborhood of the University bearing a sign saying, "Stop Horsing Around. Lift the Embargo!" Since December, weekly luncheons have been held by the students at Antioch college, Yellow Springs, Ohio, under the slogan, "bear your ribs for Spain."

Students have met with prominent speakers at the University of Texas and at the Washington Square branch of New York University where, according to student leaders, the largest indoor meeting ever held in the history of the University was had. Among other schools outstanding in mass action are Smith college, the University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore, Brooklyn college, Columbia, Vassar college, the University of Michigan, the University of Chicago, Cleveland college, Oberlin college, the University of California, and the Los Angeles City college.
