Frank Graham

... owed it to truth ...

Jim Lalanne

... it is kind of hard ...

Jack Fairley

... they were justified ...

Statements Given By Fairley, Lalanne, President Graham

Fast-moving developments yesterday in the case of Jim Lalanne's suspension from the University during the winter quarter for violation of the honor system indicated that the action taken by the administration in disclosing the student council's decision was generally approved by all persons concerned.

President Frank P. Graham revealed that neither the administration nor the student council had revealed any names in the case. Lalanne's name had leaked out through various unknown sources, and a story had been published in several newspapers stating that the sole reason for the suspension was the fact that Lalanne had been unable to meet the scholastic requirements of the University.

GRAHAM'S STATEMENT

"This incomplete report distorted facts and did not tell what had actually happened," Dr. Graham said. "Dean House and myself felt that we owed it to truth and to ourselves to straighten out the matter and release the real facts. Otherwise, it would have appeared that the University had sanctioned a lie."

Lalanne stated yesterday that he thoroughly understood the action taken by the administration authorities and respected them for it. "I am glad that the matter has been cleared up," he said. "Naturally, it is kind of hard, but I guess I can take it."

FAIRLEY APPROVES

Jack Fairley, acting head of the student council in the absence of Jim Davis, last night said that he felt that the course taken by the administration in presenting the truth in the case was thoroughly justified, since the traditional council rule of never revealing names had not been broken, and said that the move was probably the best that could be made under the circumstances.

President Graham and Professor James L. Godfrey pointed out that they and others felt that Lalanne's action was not in the least way indicative of his character, but was the unfortunate result of being overburdened with too many emotional problems which had been causing a great strain.

Lalanne left Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon for Greensboro where he has a job and will work until he returns to apply for readmission to the University next quarter.

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES OCCUPY OLD DINING HALL

Move Enables School To Reduce Overhead, Centralize Devices

Following the opening of the new University cafeteria the Administration has moved certain offices from South building into the abandoned Swain hall, former dining hall-cafeteria in order to centralize all business activities of the University in one building.

This enables the University to reduce overhead by the consolidation of general services including stenographic, clerical, and inter-office communication.

The new offices which have moved into Swain are: duplicating department, under the supervision of M. E. Woodard, who is also secretary to L. B. Rogerson, Assistant controller and business manager; accounting department, under the supervision of R. C. Smith, C. P. A.; purchasing and stores, under the supervision of J. A. Branch; J. S. Bennett, supervisor of all commercial and self-supporting enterprises; P. L. Burch, supervisor of physical plant; and A. R. Hollett, University engineer.

SMITH IN CHARGE

Mr. Smith of the accounting department is in charge of the entire personnel of this department and the functional control of records and accounting of the various service agencies.

Mr. Branch, in the purchasing and stores department, does all buying for the University. Buying is done by requisition after certification by the budget clerk that funds are available. He is in charge of the personnel of his department and has functional control of the several store rooms on the campus.

J. S. Bennett is in charge of such enterprises as the public utilities including the electric plant, the heating plant, and water plant, and telephone plant; and other organizations such as the laundry, Book Exchange, and dining and residence halls.

PHYSICAL PLANT HEAD

The supervisor of the physical plant is in charge of planning and general supervision of buildings, grounds, general services, the several repair and construction shops, policing, and transportation.

A. R. Hollett, engineer, is in charge of personnel, both line and staff, and is responsible for the performance of buildings, grounds, repair and construction shops, policing, and transportation.

All foremen, managers, and supervisors will have desk space in the section of Swain formerly used as the kitchen. The basement of the building is to be used for the various repair shops.

L. B. Rogerson announced that no remodeling has been done, but after the offices become more settled and the needs of each department are known, some remodeling will probably be done.

Fritz Kreisler Has Violin Collection Valued At $300,000

Fritz Kreisler, world violinist, who will appear in a concert here in Memorial Hall January 16, at 8:30 in the evening, and who possesses a fortune in talent, also possesses a collection of violins worth approximately $300,000. A Stradivarius, a Gagliano and two violins of Joseph Guarnerius del Gesu are his most famous and most treasured instruments. These represent a difference in kind, but hardly in quality, each being a masterpiece of its kind.

For recitals in smaller halls, Kreisler uses the Stradivarius, a small, beautifully delicate instrument with the best silvery tone characteristic of the best Stradivari. The Gagliano is the work of one of the earliest Florentine violinmakers, and Kreisler alternates it frequently with the Stradivarius. The Guarnerius violins he uses for recitals in large halls and for appearances with orchestras. Both of them have the rich golden tone so distinctly identified with the masterpieces of the great Joseph, superlative craftsman of the Guarnerius family and nephew of the man who founded the house. One of these violins formerly belonged to Wilhelmj and is dated 1737. The other, made in 1742, was long held a fabulous figure by the house of Hill of London, and Kreisler realized the fulfillment of a life-long desire in finally acquiring it. It is recognized as one of the finest examples of the maker's art.

FAVORITE FIDDLES

Concerning his favorites among fiddles the violinist has said, "The ones I love best are those made by Guarnerius and Stradivarius. But if anyone asks me which I love better of the two, I can only say—just as it's hard for a man to tell whether he prefers brunettes or blondes, or vice versa, even (Continued on page 2, column 5)

$94,000 RENOVATED ALUMNI BUILDING OPENED THIS YEAR

Construction Work Began Last March, Completed Recently

With a total of $94,000 being spent on its renovation, the Alumni building opened its doors for classes at the beginning of the winter quarter. Construction work began last March with a PWA grant, and the job was completed during the Christmas holidays.

Three connected departments have moved into the remodeled building and will have full command over the building which they formerly shared with the journalism department and the University press. The three departments are the sociology, social work departments and the institute of research of social science.

FIREPROOF STRUCTURE

The Alumni building, modelled after the Boston Public Library and built in 1898, was made completely fireproof when it was remodeled. All the interior doors and walls were replaced with fireproof materials, and the roof was redesigned, made fireproof and covered with slate. Architectural defects which marked the building as an eyesore were eliminated, and an attempt was made to make the building comply as nearly as possible with other campus buildings. Changes to the exterior were made in order to accommodate the third floor windows and to change the design of the third floor. The two side entrances to the first floor were also eliminated with entrances made to the ground floor at the same places.

Finances for the changes made in the building were obtained as a part of a building program carried on by (Continued on page 2, column 6)

Gray's First Organization Was "Spike's Jazz Band"

Casa Loma Band Leader Graduated From High School In Illinois Coal-Mining Town

His full name is Glen Gray and he is of German and Scotch descent. After he was graduated from high school in the coal-mining town of Roanoke, Illinois, he organized a small orchestra which was known as "Spike's Jazz Band," a nomenclature derived from the red letters emblazoned on the drum. That was ten years ago.

His parents snuffed while he learned to play the piano, saxophone, clarinet and flute but they never scolded little "Spike" for his choice of professions.

"Casa Loma" was a flash of an idea from a hotel in Toronto, Canada, in 1929, when Gray and his newly formed orchestra got a job in the dining room. They adopted the name because they liked the sound of it; they incorporated and elected Gray president.

During the year, various groups associated with pharmacy were entertained, the women's lounge in Howell hall was decorated, women pharmacists of the state were guest speakers, an orientation program for new women students was executed, exhibits relative to pharmacy were displayed in the school library and the group aided in giving a picnic for the pharmacy school.
