SPRING

That's All That Counts

When you saw Chapel Hill again on Monday afternoon, faint patches of dirty snow still cringed quietly under the thick shrub by the dormitory. Instinctively you knew there would be no more cold weather, that in one great avalanche of cold and bitterness winter had exhausted its ebbing strength.

When you flung open the windows of the dormitory, a veil of dust rose from the window sill. There was a new smell in the air, undefinable, pleasantly fleeting and elusive. The dank chill of the cement floor lost itself in a flood of warmth and brightness.

You pulled off the heavy sweater and tossed it over a chair. You stood there for a minute watching the wind dance through swelling buds on the trees outside. Unconsciously you listened to a bird singing somewhere. Just standing still there you suddenly felt strong and mighty. You breathed deeper, and somewhere back in the depth of your being there was a thrilling tingle of sensuousness and vivid awareness of existence. In your mind you knew you would do great things this quarter. In your mind you knew this was the happiest of worlds, this world reawakening. In your mind you made some resolutions.

And then in a moment you began to whistle. You pushed the soft brown sleeveless sweater over your head and stalked firmly from the room slamming the door and flying down the steps—two, three at a time. At the bottom you saw Jim. He had just arrived. In his hands was a suitcase. He wore a light overcoat. You grasped his extended hand. "Hi, Jim; how are you?" "Swell, Bill; how are you?" "Did you have a nice vacation?" By this time you were zigging toward the door. "Wonderful, couldn't be better. It looks like spring, doesn't it?" "It certainly does," you said. "It looks like spring is here."

And you were leaping down the steps again and your eyes scanned the brilliant grass and the pale, blue, windswept sky.

You did not see the patch of dirty snow by the doorsteps. You did not see the shrinking icicle on the low green shrub. You were youth and spring was all you knew.

CHASE DAY

Price Of Clubs Is Going Up

Today is not an ordinary spring day.

It probably won't snow, it may rain. But surely, yea, surely, some proud hibernating males will be ferreted out and dragged away with the rope of some pretty damsel participating in Terrell Everett's Sadie Hawkins' day.

This event, which has become a popular collegiate feature since L'il Abner first began running away from Daisy Mae in the morning comic strip, should be successful here if enough gals can be enticed into paying the dollar entrance fee.

Leap Year and Sadie Hawkins' day! What is the world coming to!

Again, the price of sticks is going up.

(Note: Any lass not fleet enough to catch her man is sure to find a capable group of substitutes in the office of the DAILY TAR HEEL.)

today

- 10:30—You guessed it, Sadie Hawkins' day marathon begins. Registration in Institute of Government building for convention of North Carolina student federation.
- 1:00—Luncheon for State student federation convention.
- 3:00—Meeting of State student federation.
- 3:30—Dr. James C. Andrews speaks on "Nutrition" in Parish house of the Chapel of the Cross.
- 4:30—Frosh fencing meet—UNC vs. Wardlaw, Woollen gym.
- 6:00—Town boys interested in intramural athletics meet at Gerard hall.
- 7:15—Hillel orthodox services in banquet hall, Graham Memorial.
- 7:30—Hillel reform services.

Creighton university medical students and faculty members last year treated free of charge 30,000 patients.

Under No Censor

By DON BISHOP

Back in the dark days of the fall quarter the managers and assistant managers of dormitories were heard in a unanimous chorus of disapproval of their lot as compared with the previous year. A reduction in compensation, dealt them by the administration, had been too drastic, they said.

This column put the howl of disapproval down in writing. Meanwhile the dormitory operators continued to let it be known that they did not think the revised system wholesome. The revision had, briefly put, increased the work of all concerned and slashed their payment considerably.

In short time the administration agreed that perhaps a mistake had been made and agreed to make amends if this were the case. Thus, name-calling and breast-beating were discontinued, and an investigating committee began digging up statistics, conferring with managers, assistant managers, and various persons in the administration.

The managers and assistant managers accepted the delay patiently. Everyone agreed that a final solution, not one which would stand up the remainder of this year only, must be discovered.

Patience has at last received its reward. A new plan in effect this quarter is a compromise between the system of last year and the one of last fall and winter. Furthermore, in recognition of their plight under the drastic changes, the assistant managers have been given refunds for their winter quarter room rents.

From beginning to end all the turmoil has been occasioned by misunderstanding. The self-help committee felt the managers and assistants in recent years had been receiving too much compensation. When reductions were made, they were carried too far.

The managers and assistants misunderstood the situation. They felt they were being oppressed because, as self-help students, they had to accept their lot, whatever it be. This column took up their cry with more or less the same idea in mind. It too misunderstood.

So the cessation of all talk and no action was accompanied by an agreement among all concerned to seek a full understanding of the situation and a permanent solution for it. This column believes a full understanding has finally been reached. And everyone seems happy. So are we.

themes of speeches and discussion for the entire weekend will be based on this subject. The convention will feature two speakers—one at a banquet tonight by Dean R. B. House, and the other to be given at a luncheon tomorrow by Bill Aycock, past president of the federation and now divisional director of the NYA with offices in Raleigh.

Besides the discussions and speeches the convention representatives will be honored tonight at a dance and theater party tomorrow night. At a banquet tomorrow night officers for next year will be elected and installed. They will succeed, in addition to Dees and Martin, Ernest Durham of State college, vice-president; Dorothy Green, Meredith, secretary; and Elizabeth Hendrick, Salem college, treasurer.

Between 50 and 60 delegates are expected to attend the convention representing 18 to 20 North Carolina schools.

Happenings for the entire convention start with registration at 10:30 today at the Institute building, luncheon at 1 o'clock, discussion at the Institute at 3 o'clock, banquet and dance tonight. Tomorrow there will be a discussion at the Institute in the morning, a luncheon, an afternoon discussion, a banquet tomorrow night followed by a theater party.

versity he has made a scholastic average of 94.

In addition to his recent appointment, he was elected to treasurer of the Sound and Fury Club which was organized on the campus last quarter.

Because it has been impossible to interview one of the candidates for business manager this position will not be announced by the committee until a later date.

als and varsity letter. He was a member of his class executive committee as a sophomore and is on the junior class dance committee this year. He is a member of the Monogram club and the Education club. He made the honor roll last quarter.

FORREST'S RECORD

Steve Forrest, candidate for treasurer, is secretary of the junior class this year. He was a member of his freshman and sophomore executive committees and is an active member of the Interdormitory council, the University club and the Monogram club. He won numerals as a freshman in football, baseball and wrestling and has won letters in varsity wrestling. He has been outstanding in intramural athletics.

Louis Gaylord is chairman of the junior class executive committee, a member of the executive committee of the University club and is a member of the Young Democrats club. He is an NYA self-help student and made the honor roll last quarter. He received numerals as a member of his freshman baseball team and has been outstanding in intramural athletics.

largest such collection in existence, with the possible exception of the Vollbeh Collection in the Library of Congress," Mr. Winship said. "Your collection here has an additional advantage in that the books are in almost the same condition as they were when published in the 15th century. This means they have not been rebound and thus antiquity, which means so much to the student, has not been destroyed."

Mr. Winship's address was a feature of the University of North Carolina's celebration of the 500th anniversary of the invention of printing. His appearance here was sponsored by the Humanities Division of the University.

opposition to staff nominations. He explained: "When a candidate loses a close race at nominations, despite the fact that his ability is equal to that of his opponent, he is hurt irreparably by the publicity his opponent gets for being a straw-vote winner. Staff nominations are unfair also because an editor determines those eligible to vote at nominations and can 'stuff' his staff so as to throw the vote to his favorite. Last, a handful of staff members coaxed and bullied by staff politicians should not have the power to use personal politics to prejudice campus choice."

The other three points in his platform are Magazine themes of campus and student interests, coed representation on the staff and regular staff meetings. The last factor would insure a well-integrated publication, Roof believes.

at 9:30 is entirely girlbreak and is guaranteed to change several boys' opinions of their popularity with the women. No boy will be admitted unless he is wearing a tag, but coeds may tag if they so desire. Chaperones for the dance are Mrs. J. G. Beard, Mrs. Irene Lee, Mrs. Marvin Stacy, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Mackie, Coach and Mrs. Richard Jamerson, Coach and Mrs. Floyd Siewert, Coach and Mrs. Bo Sheperd, Mrs. Effie Harde-eman, and Mrs. Ten o'clock Cobb.

Among those definitely known to be chasing today are Vivien Gillespie, the Army Girl, after the Confederate Soldier; Doris Goerch after Chief Sloan, whom she thinks is "so cute"; Hedy Lamarr after Fred Weaver; and Miss Gold after her favorite dean.

CAROLINA COMMENTARY

BY JOHN ANDERSON

CONGRATULATIONS IN ORDER
Scene: New York NBC Studio.
Time: Kay Kyser's program last week.

The Ole Maestro tells one of the girls to come up to the mike. "What's your name, honey?" "Elaine Von Olsen" "Southerner, aren't you?" "Yes sir, from the University of North Carolina," Miss Von Olsen said proudly. Kay was overcome. "Best school in the world!" he shouted. "And Miss Von Olsen proved it wasn't so bad by winning second prize money of $20.00. Said she'd done better if she hadn't been vacationing. "Sister, not bad, not bad..."

LET THERE BE LIGHT...
"Who in the devil cut off the lights?" a voice rang out from the third floor of Steele dorm, after a fuse had blown. "How can we get any studying done when all is dark," he continued. "Hurry up, somebody, and do something!"

At first we weren't surprised, but we thought it odd that someone didn't appreciate an excuse to stop cramming. We were dumbfounded when we learned that the boy doing all the yelling for lights was blind Alonzo Squires...

JUST A PAINTER'S ILLUSION...
Apropos of the Library's colorful collection of Civil War scenes: Head janitor Adolphus Clark: "Them soldiers certainly did dress up when they fought, didn't they?" Senior Coed: "Oh look!—pictures from "Gone with the Wind."

WIRES CROSSED...

Recently we received a letter from Prof. E. E. Ericson condemning us for indirectly condemning the ASU. He said that we said the organization was Communist. But Professor Ericson ended thus:

"Pardon the length of this letter, but anyhow it shows your column is R-E-(A)-D." We're confused as to who's calling who what...

LOCAL GALS MAKE GOOD...

On the March 30, cover of the State mag appears the picture of the famed-couple Goerch and Coble at the age three—according to rumors. It's a good picture even if their backs are turned...
