PULP AND SAP

Tub-Thumping Syncopated

Ever since Europe became a battleground again back in September, the Raleigh News and Observer has carried a note in italic print on the front page which runs something like this: "Each reader should know that all war news is subjected to strict censorship; therefore some reports may not contain all the facts, or may contain facts which have been greatly embellished."

While those are not the exact words, the meaning is much the same. And the News and Observer's note might well be substituted on the front page of your student daily, with the possible insertion of "political" war.

Provided election date is set at April 18 (the date recommended by the Ways and Means committee), less than three weeks remain before the first test. It is quite possible that the entrance of a third political entity may put the first election day in the class of a primary.

At any rate, you students, voters, who are interested in elections only from the voter's standpoint, will be bombarded with an ever-increasing barrage of political pulp, both in the handbill form and from this newspaper.

It will be well to remember that each piece of literature is carefully prepared by a council of verbal war interested in creating the best possible impression for Joe Whosis. It will also bear remembering that subtle "barbs" at opponents are often included.

If you're a sincere voter, you'll not be deceived by the rave notices of tub-thumpers. If you can't extricate the gold from the dross, you might try to get to know the candidates.

MISUSE

Torn Papers, Torn To Scraps

Into the library of the University come hundreds of periodicals — newspapers, magazines, and other current literature. Theoretically, at least 3,700 students, as well as several hundred faculty members, must have this material available. It is theirs, put there for their enjoyment or education.

Even after these periodicals have yielded their places on the shelves of the main reading room to others of later date, many of them move to permanent abodes in the library stacks.

Frequently, however, when one goes to read a current magazine, he finds it has been removed — stolen, if you like — by some fellow-user of the library. Or he may find the publication mutilated by an earlier reader.

We are told both these practices—removing or damaging—are quite common at the library. About the only way to stop them is to appeal to the students' sense of honesty and respect for his fellows. This, it seems, should be sufficient appeal to the supposed high-type individuals enrolled in the University.

have a good time with their best friends and carry on what has started to be a jolly old American custom. It's just asking too much. After all, they're Carolina coeds! They didn't come to a school with such a large male student body to ask for dates once a year in the spirit of good fun and fellowship—they came to be asked and rushed and flattered into thinking themselves much better than what they realize they are!"

Squeaks And Squawks

By You

Dear Sir:
Last quarter, the Buccaneer was burned, for being more salacious than was acceptable by the Baptist element of our commune; this quarter, the publication of a highly blasphemous Carolina Magazine is being countenanced by the student body and the administration. Among the book reviews was a review of Sister Madeleva's book of poetry. The reviewer, a Miss Bates, as she signs herself, took offense at Sister Madeleva's profoundly religious works. She condemns it as being inane and advises a nun to go "out" and get kicked around in this unorthodox world enough to fall for somebody besides Jesus."

We can only hope that Miss Bates is not typical of young Christian-American womanhood. Obviously Miss Bates did not realize the enormity of her offense. Since no young girl could be so steeped in corruption and sunken in sin and iniquity as to involve the Prince of Peace in so sordid a liaison.

We should like to ask if Miss Bates is a member of the American Student Union? Or perhaps she is merely reflecting the un-American, Godless-Communist doctrines which pervade the so-called "young intellectuals" of our day. When I compare this thoughtless girl with the gentle sisters who quietly go about their diurnal duties of mercy and adoration, I am reminded of the words of the Holy Father when He said, "Let the scoffers beware, for the monasteries and the convents of Mother Church are the strongholds of sanctity..."

We sincerely hope that Miss Bates will see the error of her iconoclastic ways, before it is too late.

Very sincerely yours,
Mrs. E. P. Achelley.

of the floors in the building are asphalt tile and the walls of the laboratories are of cement blocks. These are two of the aids in making the structure entirely fireproof, one of the many improvements over the old quarters of the department in Davie Hall.

The building includes 69 classrooms, labs, offices, and service rooms, and in the future two wings may be added. Half of the building cannot be used at the present time because of the lack of enough money to sufficiently equip the classrooms and laboratories with microscopes. During this quarter no more students can be taken care of than in Davie.

GROUND FLOOR

On the ground floor, in addition to the auditorium and museum lobby, there are four laboratories with service rooms for the use of beginning and advanced students. The second floor includes a large library and the administrative offices of the zoology department. This floor also boasts a seminar room, two large labs, and two staff laboratories. The entire third floor is a research floor for graduate students and staff members. The floor is made up entirely of staff laboratories and individual cubicals for graduate students.

One of the outstanding features of the building is a vivarium in the basement. It is a room which extends out beyond the building proper and in which live material is kept. It is equipped with a glass roof, giving light and warmth to the land animals and marine life kept there.

SMALL FRY

This project was only part of an immense building program being carried on in the Greater University. Of the total expense of $6,200,000 the Chapel Hill unit received more than $3,500,000. The program here included Woolen Gym, the new medical building, the not yet completed power plant, the addition to Carolina Inn, the graduate student apartments, six dormitories, and the Zoology building along with the renovating of the Alumni building, Gerrard hall, Bynum Gym, and Caldwell hall.

The University could not have carried through such a project with the help from the State and PWA alone. On the construction at Chapel Hill the State put up 18 cents out of every dollar and PWA gave 45 cents on the dollar. The remaining amount needed was provided by the University.

ROUND FIGURES

In round figures the State of North Carolina has spent only $746,000 to secure the construction which is near completion at the University.

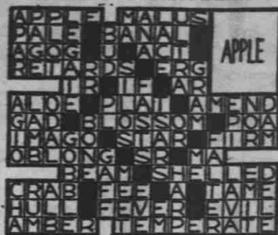

"This year it has already been shown greatly needed, but in this early stage they have been used to almost full capacity," stated G. M. Hill, assistant business manager of the University, who is in charge of the PWA work at

Sunday Radio Class

Roeder, Betty Smith, Bob Finch, Weider Sievers, Sanford Reece, Mrs. Robert J. Wherry, Eleanor Jones, Zora Neal Hurston (the Negro novelist and author of "Moses, Man of the Mountain"), Carolina Crum, Walter Spearman, and Jimmy Clark.

After the plays have been read by the authors and criticized by the class, the better ones are selected for experimental production and, if good enough, for presentation over the Saturday afternoon coast-to-coast broadcast.

PRODUCTION CLASS

The production class, directed by Wynn, is concerned chiefly with the less literary side of radio—announcing, acting, sound effects, music transition, etc. The members of this group get their practical experience by broadcasting the Playmakers of the Air plays, in addition to other programs originating in the University studio.

Originally, there was a special continuity-writing class, directed by Phillips Russell and Walter Spearman, but because of a lack of interest it was discontinued. However, Wynn said, if enough interest in this phase of radio is shown, the class will be revived.

In a brief interview yesterday, Wynn deplored the lack of time which can be devoted to the classes, saying that until a regular course in radio work is placed on the curriculum the aims of the University Extension Division, which set up the studio and organized the class, can not be fulfilled.

The department has already begun making plans for next year's work. According to Wynn, the fall and winter quarters will be devoted to the writing and experimental production of plays by members of the class, and during the spring term twelve of the best will be broadcast, one a week as this year, over the Mutual's national hookup.

Wynn stressed the fact that these weekly classes are not temporary, but will be a lasting project, leading to bigger and better things for the University in the field of radio broadcasting.

Board Will Examine Prospective Pilots

The Flying Cadet examining board for the Fourth Corps area of the United States army, which visited the University last fall, will make another visit during the week of April 22 to the 27 to give information and make appointments with students interested who were not able to appear before the board in the fall.

The purpose of the board is to select candidates from the University for flying training in the United States army air corps.

So many students applied for information or appointments last fall that in the short time available the board was unable to handle all of the applicants.

Among Those Ailing

Sixteen ailing students were housed in the infirmary yesterday: Walter Wagner, Harry Ballard, Joe Hilton, Courtland Dawson, Clifford Tuttle, Fred Berdan, Benjamin Koonce, Alton Hamrick, Zennie Riggs, Stanley Fuchs, Hora Crowe, F. L. Johnson, James Sims, Junius Hardin, James Kirkpatrick, Raymond Fox and Sherman Hubbard.
