

Just Like Snow, Coeds Dispersed All Over Country In Vacation

By PHYLLIS GALLUMBECK

The countryside was well covered with snow during this current spring vacation as well as various and sundry Carolina coeds who went places and did things.

"It seemed much more like Christmas than spring," was the usual comment from most of the girls who came back sporting frozen corsages and unworn Easter outfits. However, the consensus of opinion was that a good time was had by all.

Among the most fortunate — especially in a climatic way — were Frances Gibson and Marjorie Johnston who spent their time basking in the Florida sunshine. Marjorie met her parents in Hollywood, Florida, and Frances visited her home in Tallahassee where her father owns a recently purchased farm. Once during her vacation Frances had an invitation to fly to Atlanta, but turned down the chance by telling the young man that she was sorry but her father wanted her to plant corn.

TREES, COWS, HORSES, ETC.

"And it was true," Frances said. "Daddy has a place with trees, cows, horses, dogs, running water, and a field."

Spencer Watkins spent the holidays at her home in Greensboro, and did nothing much but sleep and eat and wait for the golf tournament, she says. Unfortunately, when the fatal hour for the tournament arrived the ground was so covered with snow that instead of golf the course was used for sledding.

Jane Moody, who hails from Alabama, went to Grundy, Virginia, with her roommate, Billie Sutherland, and returned with a bad case of iced tonsils from gaping at the "perfectly gorgeous mountains."

"THEY CAN'T DO THIS . . ."

Jane Rumsey visited her sister in Washington, D. C., and "just partied." She had a wonderful time taking all the sugar out of the Pall Mall room in the Raleigh hotel, but also had two unfortunate experiences: a waiter spilled soda water all over her Easter suit, and the bartender refused to sell her drinks, insisting that she was under 21.

Probably one of the best times of all was had by Louise Stiefelmeyer who visited New York for the first time and "made the rounds." In Louis Zuccas' restaurant "Stieffie" sat next to alumnus Kay Kyser and Ginie Sims. Kay was very reticent at first and insisted that he was Pinky Tomlin. But when he found out that "Stieffie" was from Carolina he broke down and autographed a wine bottle for her.

EDUCATIONAL, TOO

"I didn't get in the Easter parade," she said, "but I learned how to do the Conga and the 'Booms-a-Daisy.'" Betty Dixon and Ann Thornburgh went to Atlanta on the bus "just for fun," and Virginia MacDonald visited Genie Loaring-Clark in Huntsville, Alabama, before going home to Paducah, Ky.

And all the girls, returning the Tuesday after Easter, remarked with Confucius: "vacation much fun; now necessary to get some work done."

Beale Receives Leave To Work On Biography Of Teddy Roosevelt

Dr. Howard K. Beale of the history department, has just received a leave of absence for the spring quarter and summer session at Chapel Hill to do research for a book he is writing on the life of Theodore Roosevelt.

The volume, to be edited by Allan Nevins of Columbia university, will be one of a series of biographies of American political leaders being published by Dodd, Mead, and company.

Dr. Beale will go to Kansas where he will inspect papers left by contemporaries of TR and will also interview William Allen White, the editor, and former Governor Allen of Kansas. He will go from there to California where he will spend sometime studying in the Huntington Library at Leland Stanford university and will read the Lincoln Steffens manuscripts at Carmel.

Other points which he will visit include Seattle, Iowa City, Madison, Wis., Lincoln, Nebraska; Des Moines, and Indianapolis. On the return trip he will interview Judge Ben Lindsey, Frank Knox, Chicago publisher; Frank B. Loomis, former assistant secretary of state under Theodore Roosevelt; James R. Garfield, former member of the Cabinet; Justice Brandeis, Chief Justice Hughes, Justice Frankfurter, and Amos and Gifford Pinchot. In Washington during the summer, Dr. Beale will study the Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft manuscripts in the Library of Congress.

This was in answer to a part of Roof's platform, published in yesterday's edition of the DAILY TAR HEEL, in which Roof was quoted as saying, in opposition to staff nominations, "When a candidate loses a close race at nominations, despite the fact that his ability is equal to that of his opponent, he is hurt irreparably by the publicity his opponent gets for being a straw-vote winner. Staff nominations are unfair also because an editor de-

Student Poll Shows Collegians Against Lowering Voting Age

Although less than one-third of college students are eligible to vote in state or national elections, nearly nine out of every ten believe they should not be allowed to go to the polls before they are 21.

This is shown in a national study conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys of America. Asked, "Are you for or against lowering the voting age from 21 to 18?" only 11 per cent answered "yes."

That suffrage is for adults only seems to be a fairly-set tradition with the American people, voters as well as non-voting students. A sampling conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in June, pointed out that 83 per cent of the nation opposed reducing the suffrage age to 18.

CROSS SECTION

Interviewing a carefully-selected cross-section of students in all types and sizes of institutions, the Survey found:

	For	Against
All students	11%	89%
Students 21 or over	12%	88%
Students less than 21	10%	90%

The tabulation shows that opinion is heavily in the opposition and all student groups agree by almost identical percentages. It should be noted that it is the younger people themselves who are most opposed to allowing minors 18 to 21 to vote. Students 21 or over—a group of nearly half a million—are slightly less opposed to such a change and adult non-students are the least against. The usual reason given in the student poll was that voting should be restricted because young people 18 or 19 do not know enough about government. Surveys figures, however, tend to show that sometimes college students are better informed than the average voter. For example, an American Institute poll brought to light that one third of the voters were not familiar with the activities of the Dies Committee. The Surveys found only 17 per cent of the collegians had no opinion on the same subject.

Whether to give younger persons a voice in the government was brought into the headlines recently when the American Youth Commission pointed out that the constantly-increasing number of aged people, who are eligible to vote, is making possible such programs as the Social Security Act, while youth, which is not enfranchised, has no power to bring about government solution of its problems.

termines those eligible to vote at nominations and can 'stuff' his staff so as to throw the vote to his favorite. Last, a handful of staff members coaxed and bullied by staff politicians should not have the power to use personal politics to prejudice campus choice."

of Government recently established at Chapel Hill. He brought out history and problems of student government at the University, with special emphasis on the relationship between government and the different types of government in the outside world. He also brought out the fact that the governments outside are brought together in the Institute of Government. After Coates had finished, the problems of Carolina student government were discussed along with problems brought up by representatives from other schools.

At last night's dinner given in the Carolina Inn, Dean R. B. House was the main speaker, and he also brought out the relationship between government here and the outside, but dwelt longer on the student government itself and its relationship with education. He emphasized, however, the importance of the correlation between faculty and students in the smooth-running of an educational institution. Following the banquet a reception at which Dean and Mrs. House received the delegates was held. Here a bull session was the order of the hour, and then a dance in Graham Memorial.

Activities for today will start this morning with separate discussions for men and women students on the honor system in general. Bill Aycock, past president of the federation and at present Director of Resident Centers, a division of the NYA, will speak to the convention at a luncheon at 1 o'clock. The afternoon will again feature separate discussions—the women delegates will discuss social regulations in the various schools and methods of devising them, while the male element will discuss general campus problems and their solution.

A banquet tonight at 8 o'clock will close the eleventh annual federation convention. Features of the program will be committee and discussion reports and an election and installation of officers for the coming year. They will succeed Bill Dees of Carolina, president; Ernest Durham of State college, vice-president; Dorothy Green, Meredith, secretary; and Elizabeth Hendrick, Salem college, treasurer.

W. T. Martin has been in charge of arrangements for the entire convention as chairman of the convention committee. He was aided in registrafor Scranton in the Eastern league. Tom Healey, one of the best college pitchers in the East last season once you got past Hank Borowy of Fort-Ham, is back as captain. His chief mound support comes from two sophomores, Ben Ayres and Lou Clay. Ayres was a whiz as a freshman last spring, winning 10 and losing two. Bob Fulton, a regular last year, will be behind the plate.

Fred Keyes, regular shortstop two years ago but out last spring due to injuries, will be back. Lovett and Tall, regular outergardeners last time around, have been sick in bed.

The rest of the Harvard team is pretty much of a mystery. Stahl can't tell who will be in shape to take the long trip South. Maybe he will go into the infirmary at Cambridge, go to the first nine beds and recruit a team in that manner.

The rain kept the Tar Heels from playing a practice game yesterday. The pitchers and catchers worked out at Emerson. . . Bunn Hearn will probably start George Radman against the Crimson.
