On Supervising Elections

Elections are over, and now the students can study the electoral process dispassionately, seek out its weaknesses, and strive for improvements between now and next April. The need for improvements is obvious, a need brought on by the complicated (but nonetheless more satisfactory) precinct system.

When the Student legislature passed the precinct bill several months ago, it dumped upon the Student council the problem of administration. Officiating at the polls, decision on putting a ballot box in the medical dormitory, and the question of absentee voting were all left to be acted upon and carried out by the Student council of 10 members.

The Student council called in members of class honor councils and other students to aid them in supervising the precinct voting stations. This is of course necessary, but the volunteer pollholders should be strongly reminded of the importance of care in exercising their duties. (One person reported he was handed two class ballots in one of the polling places. At another precinct at least two persons went up to vote, only to discover that someone else had used their names and obtained ballots).

Final decision on the medical dormitory matter was to require the residents to come in to the YMCA. Establishment of voting boxes in Dorm L would have complicated the problem of supervision, but it seems that the Student council would have been justified in making the necessary provisions. The near-M.D.'s keep busy in the classrooms, laboratories and dormitory rooms, and many did not bother to come in to vote. Under these circumstances it is better to carry democracy to them than to permit them to do without.

Not until the run-off election did the question of absentee voting become serious. Then it almost caused a revolution. The first count on the candidates for Junior class president, Pinky Elliot and Bill McKinnon, showed Elliot leading by four votes. The four-vote lead, we understand, was provided by four absentee votes from the Infirmary, which instead of being marked on official ballots were simply written out "Straight UP Ticket" and were signed. There were other reports of the candidates and their supporters (not members of the Student council) securing absentee votes from members of the baseball team. If these incidents are true, it is apparent that some change must be made in absentee voting provisions. The only sensible arrangement, it seems, would be to have members of athletic teams apply for absentee ballots and to have the athlete mark the ballot in the presence of the council member and return it. As for Infirmary absentees, regular printed ballots should be carried to the inmates on the day of election by a member of the Student council, marked in full, and immediately returned. Fortunately for the Student council, the Elliot-McKinnon race was decided without considering the four "straight ticket" votes. But in future years an important election might hinge on such votes.

The DAILY TAR HEEL probably has not pointed out all the bad features of the voting system. Most certainly it has not mentioned the innumerable advantages. The precinct system, which made it possible for 2,451 students to vote in the first election, is far better than the old, cumbersome one-precinct arrangement.

The purpose of this discussion is to offer constructive criticism. Essentially the precinct system is an excellent innovation in the process of student-government. It only needs to be ironed out and made more workable. The time for improvement is now, when the faults are freshest in the minds of those who must undertake the task of supervision.

David Clark was born too late. He should have been living back at the turn of the 19th century when the University of North Carolina had two infidels, a French ex-monk, a strolling actor and an anarchist on its faculty!—Winston-Salem Journal.

This Being About People Who Belong to Minorities

Last column an egg was thrown at the Dies committee. I have another egg, but don't know where to toss it. There's a difficulty here. You want to respect the fact that minorities shouldn't be persecuted. Proof. In the beginning the lions ate the Christians, now the Christians, etc. I am uncertain whether the Diesians or the anti-Diesians are the minority. There's a doubt as to who not to persecute.

Premise. Some people prefer to belong to minorities (even though they won't admit it). Some people are born with big necks. They have an inspiration, and there they are, with their necks out. And for every neck there's someone to swing at it. Result. You get the boosters and the booters.

Are you a booster or a booter? Now for the Dies committee. It has its boosters and its booters. An egg was thrown because of a disapproval of Peeping Toms (while admitting they must have fun). Civil liberties . . . rights of the people . . . freedom of opinion . . . The Dies Committee thrashes the bushes for birds, the birds fly, and where are you?

It's been suggested a group be formed to investigate the Diesians. This suggestion has wholesome implications. As long as small groups are being examined you may as well examine the Committee. The catch is you can't get anybody interested in this sort of thing. Everybody is too busy outside yelling for more Americanism.

While the Dies Committee makes nervous wrecks out of everyone in a community, what happens? The people do nothing about it. Instead they listen while Kate Smith gets God to bless America.

With The Churches

Sunday worship services at the Chapel Hill churches this week will be as follows: following the communion, at the Episcopal church, Rt. Rev. Edwin A. Penick, bishop of the diocese of North Carolina, will officiate at confirmation and the 11 o'clock services. At 7 p.m. Dr. S. T. Emory will speak at Student Forum. Prayers and organ recital will be held at 8 o'clock.

At the Baptist church, Rev. Gaylord P. Albaugh will talk on "The Mission of Change" at the morning service. K. W. Taylor, president of the student body of the Duke university school of religion, will lead discussion on "Jesus' Religion and Our Christianity" and the Fred Smith BYPU will convene at 7 o'clock.

At the Methodist church, Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth will speak on "Public Enemy No. 1" at 11 o'clock. Student forum will meet at 7 o'clock.

At the Presbyterian church, Dr. Donald H. Stewart will talk on "The Imperative of Discipline" at the morning services. Vespers will be held from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

At the United church, Dr. W. J. McKee will discuss "The Church and Rural Needs" at 11 o'clock. The congregation will participate in the university service at 8 o'clock in Hill music hall.

At Gerrard hall, Father Morrissey will conduct Mass at 10 o'clock. At Graham Memorial, a Friends' meeting will be held in the Grail room at 11 o'clock.

this was not aimed at any large student group in general." "We were trying to take a positive and not a negative action," he concluded.

THE APRIL CAROLINA MAGAZINE

By RICHARD GOLDSMITH

In this last issue of Mr. Green's magazine the question of the coed is brought forcibly to our attention. Of the three articles dealing with this problem Miss Betty Harward's seems to us the most interesting and pertinent. Miss Harward's thesis is that the coed should be thought of purely as an individual and not as a group phenomena. As is true of most problems it seems that this also can only be solved by a gradual educational process. For until the Carolina gentleman alters his conception of women in general, there is little that can be done for the coed. Also as it is possible to conclude from Grady Reagan's survey "The Coed in the Classroom," there is really not much of a problem after all. The professorial consensus of opinion is that, the coed, or woman-student, the term preferred by Dr. Odum, makes for a healthier and more natural campus life. In other words they are wholly welcome, and Dr. Caldwell even takes off the mortar-board to say that he likes a spot of color in the classroom.

In a well developed article Miss Teoah Harner and Virginia Gullege offer their solution for some of the difficulties that the much discussed coed may encounter. In their joint endeavor, "The YWCA and the Coed" they explain the function of the "Y" as a coordinating factor for the women, through which they may come to a better understanding of their total situation. This exposition of the ideas and ideals of the YWCA is of a real interest, and ought to prove a spur to some more commendable effort.

Undoubtedly the best piece of fiction in the Magazine is a short story by James Clark. "But Tomorrow Wasn't There" shows acquaintance with life, and also valuable interpretation. In a sense, Elizabeth Bowles takes over where Mr. Clark leaves off, and in her review of "Women in Southern Industry" there are a few trenchant statements concerning some of the things which might be done to put some meaning into the tomorrow of Mr. Clark's mill workers.

In the writing of his liquorous yarn John Roeder, fortunately for the reviewer, provided his own succinct comment. "But obviously you need the assistance of one to introduce you to the facts of life a little more thoroughly." This is out of the mouth of one of Mr. Roeder's characters in "Empty Glasses" who are wise beyond their years.

Although the plot of Simon Crim's "Love Story" needs a bit of dusting off, there are a number of good touches. We would like to call attention, though, to Mr. Crim's allusion to non-union painters, which seems to be a one-line purple patch of social significance included for no very good reason.

In "Mr. Crumple's Sunday Afternoon," a poem by Richard Nickson dealing with the banalities of the middle class existence there is an interesting treatment of the theme, and there are some very amusing bits, but we seem to have heard before about the harassed little businessman who wants to get away from it all.

Raymond Staple's "Lost April" displays the best prose style in the magazine. We are a little unsteady about Mr. Staple's symbolism, but we feel that he has taken upon himself in these stormy days to go to bat for the little things in life. The story is well done and we hope that our interpretation, which may easily be wrong, does not scare anybody away.

Unfortunately placed towards the end of the Magazine, Stanley Diamond's poem "Concept Cosmological" deserves better treatment. It has what we would call a nice thought, and the rhythm is good. You'll like it.

As we are reviewing the magazine we had to find out what the boxed "30" on the very last page meant, and we are glad to pass our information on to you. It is newspaperman's lingo for saying "end of story," and is Mr. Green's very ingenious way of bowing out. Good luck, Mr. Green.

Collegiates Favor

graphically, it is found that New England, East Central, South, and Far West place Roosevelt on top. Middle Atlantic and West Central states select Dewey. Students who say they have no party choice name Dewey first, F. D. R. second.

A significant fact revealed by this poll is the small support that John N. Garner has among students, while he is one of the leaders among rank and file voters, other surveys show. Paul V. McNutt, who led in a Survey last May, is now ninth, below even socialist Norman Thomas.
