

Graham Speaks This Morning In Memorial Hall

First Pep Rally To Be Held Tonight At 7 O'clock

Football Players Will Speak At Yell Rehearsal

Dormitory lights will blink and the South Building bell will ring at 6:45 and again at 7 o'clock tonight to remind all students of the first pep rally of the year to be held in Memorial Hall at 7 o'clock. Then tonsils will be warmed and yells rehearsed in preparation for the Wake Forest game tomorrow.

President Ferebee Taylor of the University Club, which sponsors all of the pep meetings said that the rally would be short so that those going to the Coed dance would have time to dress.

Cheerleaders in Charge

Charlie Nelson and Jane Rumsey, co-head cheerleaders, will have charge of the program and will be assisted on the yells by their white sweated pepper-uppers.

The entire Tar Heel football squad will be seated on the stage and will be individually introduced by Coach Ray Wolf, who will say a few words as will co-captains Paul Severin and Gates Kimball. Freshman grid coach, Jim Tatum, who has scouted Wake Forest this fall, will comment on the probable strength of the highly rated Deacon team.

Printed Song Sheets

An innovation this year will be the song and yell sheets printed in Carolina colors. These will be given to all who attend and it is hoped that they will be kept by the students and used at the games.

Taylor Comments

The University band will be on hand to lend color to the occasion and to assist in rehearsing the four University songs.

Ferebee Taylor, in announcing the plans for the big rally, stated, "It is the purpose of the University Club and the desire of its members to maintain the fine school spirit which has existed on this campus for many years. We would like to see a large turnout for the rally."

Cheerleaders present at the whoop-it-up session will be, besides Rumsey and Nelson, Jeanne Connell, Tom Avera, Hershell Snuggs, and George Coxhead.

Picture Taking Causes Mrs. Wootten Trouble

Mrs. Bayard Wootten, Chapel Hill's well known photographer, admits that from time to time, in her meanderings over the country, she has been suspected of being almost everything under the sun.

But it was not until the other day, she relates, that she was suspected of being a fifth columnist.

She and her assistant were setting up apparatus to shoot some scenes of the highway approaching the new bridge over the Yadkin River near Salisbury.

Suddenly a couple of guards from the nearby North Carolina Finishing company, which has a plant on the west side of the river, appeared on the scene and wanted to know what she was up to.

Mrs. Wootten explained that she was merely adding to her collection of beautiful scenic spots in North Carolina and told the guards who she was.

"But, how do we know you are Mrs. Wootten?" the leader asked. "We hear a lot these days about spies taking pictures of our bridges."

She wasn't able to convince them of her identity, and so they insisted that she accompany them to the mill where she was confronted by Mr. J. Robertson, the manager.

Yes, he had heard of Mrs. Wootten, Mr. J. Robertson confessed, but he had never seen her and he had to make

IRC Executive Group Meets Today at 3:30

There will be an executive meeting of the International Relations club today at 3:30 o'clock in the IRC room in Graham Memorial. The following people are requested to be present: Bill Collins, Tom Hallett, Bill Ward, Wimpy Lewis, John Appledorn, Thelma Brammer, and Vivian Gillespie.

Student-Faculty Leaders Discuss Buc Fate Today

Another crisis in the turbulent history of the Carolina Buccaneer comes up today as a committee of student and faculty leaders meet today to discuss the situation brought about by the imprisonment of Editor Mack Hobson for attempted murder of his sweetheart July 21.

The suggestion has been made that now would be an opportune time to abolish the problem publication since there would be no editor to oust.

If the magazine is to continue, a new editor will have to be chosen immediately in order that he might get his staff organized to put out the first issue in October.

Who would take Hobson's place is hard to say. He had no opposition in the general campus election last year, indicating that the senior staff may have no-one who could take over the job. Bill Seeman and St. Clair Pugh have been mentioned most frequently in campus speculation on the problem.

There have been several movements to do away with the campus number one publication problem child in recent years. Last year one issue was ordered destroyed and republished at a cost of $500 to the students.

Bill Stauber of Rural Hall, was editor at the time. He was brought before the student council and warned against putting out any more "dirty issues."

After this incident the magazine ran along smoothly until Hobson was elected editor. Then discussion against the magazine started again. The

President To Defend UNC Defense Work

By Bucky Harward

Speaking on "The University and National Defense" Dr. Frank Porter Graham will officially open the 147th session of the University before the student body at a convocation in Memorial Hall this morning at 10:30.

The address will be more formal and significant than usual because the president is expected to speak both for the University and himself in defense against criticism of Carolina's active part in the country's national defense program.

Favors Aid to Allies

Dr. Graham, an outstanding member of the William Allen White committee on Aid to the Allies, has played an extremely active part in the establishment and promotion of the naval ROTC, the enlarged CAA course and airport and compulsory physical education for all male undergraduates.

His address will probably bring out the University's general philosophy about aiding in preparedness and the way in which it has been reflected in the recent development of preparedness units.

The program will be opened with the singing of "America" led by Clyde Keutzer, new head of the voice department in the University school of music. An invocation by YMCA secretary Harry Comer will follow.

Administrative Dean R. B. House, who will preside, will introduce Dr. Graham.

The program this morning is one of the few during the year where Dr. Graham addresses the entire student body. It is also one of the most important programs of the year insofar that it does officially open the University.

All students are excused from their 11 o'clock classes to attend the program.

Art Exhibitions Will Feature Many Original Works

Exhibitions of original masterpieces in world art will feature the year's program of the art department, John V. Allcott, new head of the art department, announced yesterday.

The first group to be shown will be a collection of Old Masters. A group of Van Gogh originals will follow, and then a collection of prize-winning American paintings will be shown.

Of particular interest to North Carolina will be an exposition of North Carolina textiles, to be shown in the early winter. Handicraft and mass-production products will be displayed. Weavers from the mountains will demonstrate at the exhibition. A "side-show" will be a display of mannikins, from the late 18th century to the present.

The department plans to publish a bulletin of art news during the year. Miss Adams Arrives

Miss Harriet Dyer Adams has arrived to become the new curator of Person art gallery. She comes from the Museum of Modern Art, where she was acting curator of prints. Before that she was with the Brooklyn Museum. A graduate of Radcliff College in Cambridge, Mass., Miss Dyer did graduate work at New York University, and studied in Europe.

Other members of the art department are Dr. Clemens Sommer, visiting professor; William Meade Prince, illustrator; Arnold Borden, sculptor; and Dr. Frank Low of the medical school, who teaches anatomy to the art students.

Magazine Staff Meets Today

The first official meeting of the Carolina Magazine staff will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock. All students interested in both the editorial and business departments are urged to attend, as staff assignments will be made.

British Hint At Unremitting Air Raids On Berlin Soon

London Bombed For 20th Straight Night

By United Press

Authoritative British quarters, encouraged by the success of the royal air force counter-offensive against Germany, hinted Thursday that Berlin soon may expect the same unremitting night-time siege as London is experiencing at the present.

The air ministry reported that British planes had blasted Berlin for the fourth consecutive night and dropped heavy bombs on the Kiel Navy Base.

Meanwhile German bombers clashed at the capitol's protective wall of anti-aircraft defense for the 20th straight night after the mass assault on the Southampton Naval Base in which six of 70 raiders were reported shot down.

Germany boasted meanwhile, on the fifth anniversary of her formidable submarine fleet that Nazi U boats have sunk 3,120,000 tons of enemy war ships and merchant vessels and now "stand in a perfect position" to crush Britain's resistance.

In London General DeGaulle, leader of the free French, accepted responsibility for abandonment of the siege of Dakar, while members of Parliament demanded punishment for those responsible for the fiasco at France's West African port.

LONDON, Sept. 27—(Friday)—The RAF early today spread a trail of

If You're In Trouble Don't Worry-- Read Dick And Dell's Experience

Carolina-Appalachian Game Proved Big Headache For University Students

Dick Knight and Dell Bush are now going about the campus softly singing, "Long live our President!"

At the football game last Saturday afternoon between Carolina and Appalachian young Knight, of Great Neck, Long Island, lost a wallet which, among other sundry things, contained over $200 in checks.

Naturally, he was worried, and who wouldn't be. His chance of recovery was very slim indeed. Twenty-five thousand people were present at the game.

By this time Knight was feeling worse than the Appalachian team following the trouncing handed them by the Tar Heels. However, his date for the game, Miss Dell Bush, a freshman from Chapel Hill, hit upon a bright idea. She called up President Graham that same afternoon to find the best procedure for trying to locate the wallet.

When the situation was explained to the University head, he almost completely bowed over the coed by saying he had found the wallet himself.

Band Gets New Drum Majorette To Decorate Gridiron Shows

Boots Thompson Majorettes For Love of It

By Philip Carden

The Carolina football team is going to have to be pretty good this year to retain the center of the stage at games. First came feminine cheerleaders and now comes a drum majorette for the band.

For a long time Earle Slocum has been trying to get the University or somebody to award a scholarship in order to get a drum majorette for the University band. Now along comes Miss Boots Thompson to furnish color on the gridiron without a scholarship or anything.

She majorettes for the fun of majoretting.

Asked why she gave up that free tuition and books job at Southwestern Louisiana Institute, that she had last year, to come to Carolina, she said, "Wouldn't you?"

It seems the "atmosphere, the—the—people" are so wonderful here that any girl would be overjoyed to take such a loss.

Drum majors have to be pretty good

First Grail Dance Tomorrow Night

Lads and lassies on the Carolina campus will dance to the music of Charlie Wood and his orchestra tomorrow night when The Order of the Grail sponsor their first dance of the fall quarter in Woolen gymnasium. The dance will start at nine and last until midnight.

The first of nine informal dances, which are sponsored each year by the Grail, the dance tomorrow night will feature Jean Chandler, Durham vocalist with Charlie Wood's band, a Grail no-break, and an escort no-break. All members of the student body will be admitted with the exception of freshmen. They cannot go because of rushing restrictions.

The Grail is the only social organization on the campus which offers open script dances to the entire student body. Admission to the dance is one dollar, stag or couple.

CPU Plans Opinion Poll

Conscription To Be Subject

A proposal to hold a poll to reveal student opinion of the conscription bill and presidential campaign issues was adopted at the opening meeting of the Carolina Political union yesterday in Graham Memorial.

The poll, which marks the first official activity of the CPU this year, will be held next Thursday in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A., from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M., and in the cafeteria lobby during meal times.

William Joslin, new chairman of the CPU, said plans are now underway to get the ballots printed, which are expected to run between three and four thousand.

Willkie Possibility

Other business taken up at the meeting concerned prospective speakers. Joslin said the possibility of the appearance of Republican presidential nominee Wendell Willkie and Senator James Burns of South Carolina before the union next month as increased, but that no definite announcement could be made yet.

Other officers of the Union are Edward Kantrowitz, vice-chairman; Charles Tillett, treasurer; Arthur Dixon, secretary; and Professor E. J. Woodhouse, faculty adviser. Members are Ferebee Taylor, George Peabody, Ridley Whitaker, Louis Harris, L. P. McLendon, Jr., Bill Snider, Norman Stockton, Maury Kershaw, Lee Gravely, Kenan Williams, Norma Slatoff, Charlotte Fitz, Ike Taylor, Bill Cochrane, Lee Wiggins, and Jim Gray.
