

Spring Fashion Show Scheduled Tonight

Coeds Appear In Benefit Show Tonight

With a score of attractive coeds and matrons for models, 75 costumes, a lavish setting in five scenes, and a narrator and orchestra, the stage is set for a brilliant display at the Junior Service League's annual Fashion Show in Hill hall at 8:30 tonight.

Final plans and preparations were completed and announced yesterday by Mrs. Herman Schnell, who is general chairman of the event.

The public is invited, Mrs. Schnell said, and a large crowd is expected. All the proceeds, she explained, will go to the support of the League's baby clinic for white and colored children and mothers in Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

New Spring Styles

Tonight's show will feature new spring styles. While the 75 costumes have all been furnished through the courtesy of Ellis-Stone in Durham, they represent the creations of many of the nation's leading designers.

The annual fashion parade this year will be presented in five scenes, play clothes, sports wear, date dresses, dressy coats and suits, and formals.

Mrs. Marguerite Garber Lewis, who is well known to radio audiences in this state, has been secured as commentator, and one of the campus orchestras will furnish music for the occasion.

A new feature will be a display of matrons' clothing, modeled by Mrs. Harry Comer and Mrs. Sedalia Gold.

PRISONER

ried in Emporia, Virginia last December.

Although Jarboe claimed he had stolen only one coat, police found three other coats in the car. Acting immediately in order to catch other thieves, if any, Chief Sloan dispatched his men to Oxford, Henderson, South Hill, Va., and Richmond, Va. While they met with no success in Henderson and Richmond officers found that Jarboe had sold coats in both Oxford and South Hill, Va.

As yet no professional fences have been uncovered, but Jarboe's method of the disposal of the coats has been found. Approaching a prospective buyer, Jarboe would tell a story of needing some ready cash. Declaring himself to be a poor hitch-hiker he would offer one of the stolen coats for collateral and as soon as the deal was over he would go on to some other town.

When questioned about his past record, Jarboe implied that he had served some time before, maintaining throughout that past offenses had nothing to do with the present charge. After constant questioning the police gathered that their prisoner "had been around," and knew what he was doing by continued silence.

No coat thefts have been reported since Jarboe's capture but students are warned that there are perhaps still thieves on the campus to be accounted for.

Daily Tar Heel officials have worked in close cooperation with the police department since Jarboe's capture in order that no information would be released to aid any accomplices.
