

Mass Meeting Called On Dance Cut Referendum Graham Addresses Students Tomorrow At Special Convocation

President Expected To Speak On V-5 Unit

By Bob Hoke

In a special convocation, University President Frank P. Graham will address the student body tomorrow morning at 10:30 in Memorial hall for the first time since his memorable speech following the outbreak of US-Japanese hostilities in the Pacific, December 7.

The head of the Consolidated University is expected to talk on the V-5 program here and explain the Chapel Hill Institution's position in the war effort.

House to Preside

Dean of Administration R. B. House will introduce President Graham, who is here for a short period between meetings of the War Labor Board in Washington, to the assemblage. The convocation will be kept short and will not interfere with 11 o'clock classes, House indicated.

Details of the billing of the 1,870 Naval Air Cadets on the campus are expected to be revealed for the first time as well as steps to be taken by the University to alleviate confusion and crowded conditions. During the past week, President Graham attended important conferences with the Navy department in Washington concerning the Carolina unit.

War-time Speed

The president last addressed the general student body at the emergency convocation called December 8 concerning America's entrance into the war. At that time he urged collegians to "stick to their books" until they were called.

Central Records head, I. C. Griffin, stated that the registration procedure would be halted during the president's speech tomorrow, but would be set in motion immediately following the half-hour convocation.

WC Legislature To Make Report On Action Tuesday

Woman's college has voiced its wrath over the appearance of Betty Perry's "Needles Knitting" in last month's Carolina Mag by holding mass meetings and the drawing up of a petition to present to our Publications Union.

Last Wednesday night the WC Student legislature, composed of representatives of each dorm and about 12 others elected by the students, met and heard the article. Copies of the Mag were secured and the article read in each hall of all the dorms. After it was read, a petition was composed to the effect that they, the student body, disliked the article and requested that the PU Board here do something about it. In Shaw dorm, for example, 99 girls out of 99 signed the petition.

Legislature Action

These petitions are to be handed back to the Legislature and all action, if any, will be instituted through that body. Next Tuesday night, at a mass meeting, the Legislature will give its report to the students on any action it has taken or intends to take. The WC administration has not taken any steps and has not expressed any opinion upon the story or the petition.

Miss Mary F. Bell, associate editor of The Carolinian, WC newspaper, said, "When the student body read the article they were mad as could be, but looked at it as merely one person's opinion." She stated that "last month's Mag was a Greater University issue and while both State and UNC got pats on the back, WC was criticized. This condemnation was too strong, as every school has its good points as well as bad ones. "However, the students," she said, "do not like the opinion expressed, as people would read it and think of it as the opinion of the majority and not of the individual." As her own opinion, Miss Bell explained that "evidently the writer of the story didn't like WC."

DTH Received Letter

The Daily Tar Heel has received a letter from the six members of a Committee of the Student Body saying that they protest the article appearing in See MAG ARTICLE, page 4

CAA Given New Quota For Pilot Training

Ten More to Be Taken for Spring Course; Freshmen Now Eligible, Mann Announces

By Westy Fenhagen

In line with the speeded-up defense program and Carolina's selection as a training base for Naval Air Cadets was the announcement yesterday by W. R. Mann, airport manager and local coordinator for Civilian Pilot Training, that Carolina's quota of student trainees in the CAA program has been increased by 10.

Any students who desire to enroll for the spring course which is already under way should get in touch immediately with Mann. Government requirements state that student trainees must be accepted in units of 10 or 20 so all those interested should act without delay, Mann said.

Dr. P. W. Bridgman

Harvard Scientist Lectures Tomorrow

The problems and techniques of high pressure as developed in the laboratory eventually to a pressure of 400,000 atmospheres, and some of the effects of high pressure, will be discussed by Dr. P. W. Bridgman, Hollis professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Harvard University, in a lecture tomorrow night.

Dr. Bridgman will speak in Phillips hall at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Society of Sigma Xi, national fraternity for the promotion of scientific research. The lecture will be open to the public.

The most recent developments in high pressures will be revealed by Dr. Bridgman, whose lecture will be based on recent work he has done in this field in which his research has won much distinction.

Dr. Bridgman was educated at Harvard and since 1926 has been Hollis professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Harvard.

Requirements for acceptance have been considerably lowered, Mann stated. Students must have passed their 18th birthday on or after January 1 and must have completed at least 15 semester credit hours. All information concerning entrance requirements has been posted on the bulletin board in South building and interested students are urged to consult these requirements immediately.

Requirements Lowered

The group accepted for the CAA course will begin training right away with ground school to be held concurrently with the actual flight instruction. The new group will complete the course at the same time as those who have already begun the spring session, Mann emphasized.

In addition to this new group for beginners, an advanced course for those who already hold private pilot's licenses will be instituted if there is sufficient demand for such a course. The group would have a minimum of five students and a maximum of 10 and would begin training by the end of this week, Mann said. Speed is essential and all those interested are asked to contact Mann today or tomorrow.

The local CAA program is one of the few in this region which have been granted additional quotas, Mann announced.

Nutrition Course To Be Offered

A course of Elementary Food and Nutrition will be offered next quarter. The class will meet at 8:30 on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings in 311 Med Building. It is open to everyone, with three hours credit being given to undergraduates.

Students Convene Tomorrow To Discuss Dance Question

By Hayden Carruth

A mass meeting of the entire University student body has been called to convene in Memorial hall 7:30 tomorrow night to air both angles of the dance expenditure clash, Truman Hobbs, president, announced yesterday afternoon.

Called to "present the question fairly to the students before the campus-wide referendum on Wednesday," the meeting will present a panel, manned by three representatives from both factions. The panel speakers were not named yesterday.

Questionnaires Seek Estimates On Enrollment

Bradshaw Gives Admission Dates For New Students

Questionnaires, seeking to uncover a more accurate and complete tabulation of curriculum and housing needs for the spring and summer quarters, will be distributed to all students early this week, Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw stated yesterday.

Simultaneously, Dean Bradshaw announced that new students, freshmen and transfers will be admitted both by examination and on the usual diplomas on March 21, June 11, and July 22.

To be circulated through the departments in their effort "to provide all necessary courses of instruction throughout the two six-week summer terms, as well as during the three regular quarters" and to prepare for housing the expected large enrollment.

The questionnaires ask the present status of the students, when they next plan to enroll in the University, and the courses that they wish to take.

South building officials estimate a drop in enrollment of around 250 for the spring quarter, which they indicated was the usual decrease.

Officials Offer Aid for Student Co-Op Houses

The University administration yesterday announced a policy of "cooperation with the co-ops" aimed at providing rooming facilities in the town for students required to vacate the upper quadrangle to the Naval Air Cadets.

Assistant business manager, P. L. Burch, will talk with students interested in establishing cooperative rooming houses and will advise and take care of the necessary details.

Burch will be in his office in 101 South building between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock and 3 and 4 o'clock daily. Groups interested in the plan were requested to elect one of their group to represent them in the talks with Burch.

Open Forum

Following the panel discussion will be an open forum for all students presided over by Bill Cochran, Graham Memorial director and member of the Institute of Government staff.

Information released by Hobbs yesterday also indicated that the wording of the referendum ballot will be changed, omitting all mention of the figure set by the recent Student legislature enactment.

The question of dance expenditure reduction, which first gathered moss a month ago and rolled through the campus leaving a direct breach in campus opinion, will culminate this quarter in the referendum Tuesday. A stormy session of the Student legislature on February 25 ended in a vote of approval for the cut to $750 for all dance sets and $400 for single dances. Although the opening guns of the meeting brought initial victory to the opposition, final victory was won by the bill's proponents.

Opposition Forces

Taking final recourse, the opposition forces, marshalled by Dick Garland, Hugh Hole, Sam Means, and Bill Alexander, sought a campus-wide referendum. Student legislature grants recourse to referendum under stipulations expressed in the constitution: a tenth of the student body must sign a petition requesting a referendum and fifty per cent or more must vote at referendum polls to make the outcome effective. Seven hundred and twenty-six students signed the petition presented to Hobbs last Tuesday.

Main points of opposition fall into three channels:

1. The legislature's dance expenditures reduction bill is unrepresentative of the student body opinion.
2. The legislature has no constitutional privilege of acting upon the ex-

Snapshots Sought For Yearbook

All photographs must be of some phase of campus social life, buildings, or persons. Tillett reiterated that there is still time to turn the pictures in, but they must be in soon.

CHAPEL HILL'S BIGGEST NEWS story of the year was heralded by this telegram. Received in South building at 9:07 Friday Feb. 27, it contains official announcement by the Navy department of Carolina's appointment as one of the four "Annapolises of the Air," where future seahawks will be pounded into physical fitness preparatory to their training and future service in the Naval Air Corps.
