

Tar Heel Club To Cross Bats With Camp Lee

Not To Mince Matters

By Harry Hollingsworth

Tired and a little rusty at the edges after a long train trip, Coach Dick Jamerson and five members of the Carolina swimming team—Co-captains Jim Barclay and George Coxhead, Captain-elect Bob Ousley, Truman Hobbs and Denny Hammond—returned to Chapel Hill and classes Monday morning after a 10-day invasion of the northern states during which they participated in the Eastern and National intercollegiate swimming contests.

Jamerson reviewed both contests for us yesterday afternoon in his office in Woollen gymnasium, and he said exactly what we expected him to say. And he said it with enthusiasm—enthusiasm of a coach who knows that his team has accomplished a lot.

"The boys, Harry," he said sincerely, "did an excellent job. They were a little disappointed at times, but I'm sure that they did well. I had too many coaches and officials at both meets to tell me that they never expected such swimming from the North Carolina team even to think for one minute that they were not a credit to the University. In my own mind, I know they were."

"Those five boys really put Carolina on the swimming map. Most coaches who take a team to either of the two meets is satisfied if he can get one man to qualify in either meet. We qualified in five different events in the two meets. And that's an indication of how well the team performed."

All coaches, naturally, give credit to their teams after a fine performance. But not many can make it as sincere as Jamerson did yesterday.

Few students and fans realized the calibre competition Carolina faced in either meet and criticized the efforts of the men when they first read the results of both meets in the papers. One state sports editor went so far as to say that the Tar Heel swimming team was slipping by scoring only 10 points in the Eastern meet. And those 10 points were more than any team from the South has ever scored in an Eastern intercollegiate meet!

When a team gets in competition as fast as the Blue Dolphins were meeting, most anything can happen. And it usually does. One instance of that was clearly shown in the Eastern meet. A sprinter of one of the Northern schools came within a tenth of a second of tying the world's record in the 100-yard dash in the preliminaries. That same sprinter got third in the finals.

Two of the backstrokers who licked Denny Hammond in that close blanket finish in the Easterns had never done under 1:42 in a meet. But with the pressure on they came up with performances of a few tenths of a second below 1:40. Hammond did 1:39.6. They were tenths of seconds ahead of him.

The University of Minnesota's swimming coach told Jamerson before the Eastern meet that if the Blue Dolphins qualified even one man he could consider the trip worthwhile. Carolina qualified two relay teams and Hammond in the finals.

University of Michigan's coach showed Jamerson a new way for the touch-off in the relays two days before the start of the Nationals. The Blue Dolphins mastered the technique so successfully and added a touch of their own that they were the fastest team getting away in the relays. And none of the old-timers recognized the Michigan style which the Tar Heels had copied. All of the coaches asked Jamerson what was the new style touch-off Carolina was using.

On the basis of the showing the Tar Heels made in the meets they rate among the top 10 teams in the country. Jamerson said that he believed the only teams strong enough to lick Carolina in a dual meet are Michigan, Yale, Dartmouth, Ohio State, Princeton and probably Iowa State.

And Jamerson, just as we did, saved the best news until last. Authorities at the National meet inquired as to the possibilities of having the contests in Bowman Gray pool next year. Nothing definite, naturally, has been decided as yet, but when the time does come for the awarding of the meet Carolina will have a good opportunity of getting it.

Fencers Meet This Afternoon

Al Blozis' Entry Adds Color to UNC Relays

The impetus given Carolina's first annual relay carnival by the announcement of the entry of world's champion shot-putter Al Blozis has been remarkable. Almost overnight papers throughout the state have picked up the possibilities of the meet and Coach Bob Fetzer's latest brain child is receiving welcome reams of publicity.

And Blozis' entry may bring other famous figures of track and field to the Hill. Although the relay competition is that with which the committee is primarily concerned, it often falls to the lot of individuals to furnish the greatest box office attraction. Once the Old North State's first relay meet catches fire, it should spread on to future years and provide Dixie with a much-needed early spring event.

Open to Service Men

In line with recent University policy, the relays will also be open to service men. Competing against the collegians, army men may come through with valuable points and throw the meet wide open. Although the official entry list has not as yet been released at Woollen gym, it is expected that some of the great athletes stationed at the various defense points in this section may be on hand.

As Saturday approaches the first Duke-Carolina bout of four scheduled meetings this season, takes on added interest. Transferring their early season competition from Gainesville, Fla., where it has been for the past few years, the Devils and the Tar Heels should be even better matched in their own back yard. There's no long trip to undo the advantages of early training this year and several outstanding performances may be expected. The mile and the two mile relays, the mile team race and the medley foursome will be among those events most hotly contested between the home team and the visiting Methodists and it is almost certain that one of the two contesting rivals will race home with the meet diadem.

The other collegiate team entries are uncertain in both quantity and quality. N. C. State should send a few

Tar Heel Linksmen Prep for Quakers; Show Improvement

With the season's initial match less than a week away, Coach Chuck Ericson is slowly taking the wraps off his 1942 edition of Carolina's golf team. The linksmen are showing signs of great improvement after only eight days of practice and will be ready to tee off against anything Penn's Quakers might have to offer this Saturday in Pinehurst.

Several berths on the team are wide open with over two dozen golfsters burning up the fairways in an effort to fill the vacant slots. "Shooky" Neese, Dick Doeschler, George Case, and Grayden Lyles look to be sure things for the starting six, with Lyles turning in better scores with each succeeding day. This quartet has been leading golf hopefuls in their daily practice stints at the Hillandale course in Durham. The Tar Heel pill-pounders have become a steady fixture on the Hillandale course and will play several of their home games there.

Coach Ericson will pit the putter-pushers against each other in Wednesday's practice session, after which he will make his selection for the starting team. The intra-squad tourney will enable all of the linksmen to exhibit their prowess with the irons and matched woods before final selections for the team are made.

Carolina Netmen Will Meet St. Johns Here April 6

Making the final addition to an already full slate, Coach John Kenfield yesterday announced that Carolina's varsity netters will meet St. Johns college of Brooklyn here on Monday, April 6. The Tar Heel netmen inaugurate the current season Thursday

In an effort to clear up a misunderstanding concerning the clay courts, Coach Kenfield yesterday cautioned that courts numbered 1, 2, 7 and 8 are reserved for the use of the freshman team and are not to be used by other players.

against Cornell on the new teniko courts.

In a pessimistic mood before opening match, Coach Kenfield yesterday bemoaned the loss of potential stars Ken Evensen and Marshall Chambers.

Both men were counted on to fill vacancies in the lineup caused by graduation. "If Evensen and Chambers were available, we would have five strong men, but now nothing of definite except the two top positions."

The coach was full of praise for sophomore Harold Maass who has "been coming along fine." Maass was the second-ranking yearling netter last year and in the fall tourney went to the finals of the upperclassman division where he lost a hard-fought match to Evensen. He will probably occupy the No. 3 slot.

Looking ahead, Kenfield intimated that any defeat the Tar Heels might suffer this year would come on the Northern tour when the team clashes with such tennis powers as Princeton and Yale. The coach was especially wary of the Yale squad, strengthened this year by the addition of a strong freshman team. Yale's frosh last year administered a 9-0 licking to Scarborough prominent New York prep school from which comes Carolina frosh Scott Stickle.

more in the second and seven in the third. They finished the game by tallying 10 runs in the fifth before the tilt was called according to mural rules. Doug West and Haywood Bland were the batting stars each getting five hits. One of West's blows was a homer. Stedman and King collected four hits for the Phi Kappa Sigs also.

Kappa Sigs Win

Frat champs, Kappa Sigma No. 1, went up against a stubborn opponent in Alpha Chi Sigma and barely edged out a 3-2 victory over the Chemists.

The Kappa Sigs won with a two run scoring party in the fourth frame on hits by Leblanc, Faircloth, Sigler, and an error. Bill Sigler was the top hitter with two singles for the winners. First baseman Frye homered for the losers in the second.

Dill Hurls One-Hitter

Tommy Dill, the Deke ace hurler, picked up where he left off last year by hurling a one hit game against St. Anthony hall as his mates pounded out an 8-4 decision over the St. Anthony club. Last year Dill hit the headlines several times with no-hit games and he showed that he was in fine early season form yesterday although wild at times. Dill walked seven, but struck out seven. Lewis spoiled Dill's no-hit game with a single in the seventh.

BVP Triumphs

BVP made only three hits, but took advantage of the wildness of Med School pitchers to chalk up a 6-2 victory over the medics. The BVP team pushed across five runs in the fourth on six walks, one hit, and an error. Lester collected two of the winners hits.

Army Outfit Has Several Major Stars

Still uncertain about how the Carolina baseball team will perform in a regular game, Coach Bunn Hearn sends his 1942 Tar Heels against the Camp Lee Army team here tomorrow afternoon in the opening game of the season. The tilt starts at 4 o'clock on Emerson field.

The Camp Lee team is composed of men who have been drafted into the Army and who are stationed at Camp Lee, Va., close-by Richmond. Several former outstanding collegiate stars and professional players make up the team.

Vaughn Heads List

Heading the list is Porter Vaughn, who performed for Connie Mack's Athletics in 1940. Mack, who praised Vaughn as "one of the likeliest looking players to come up since Lefty Grove," farmed him out to Toronto of the International league for the 1941 season and he won 13 games for a last place club. He hurled for the University of Richmond until the A's shoved $8,000 under his nose to sign a contract.

Another player well known in this section who is on the squad is Jack Sanford, pace-setter in the Southern conference batting parade for two years while attending the University of Richmond. He was farmed out to Chattanooga of the Southern Association by the Washington Senators last year and hit .326 for 164 games.

James Perenchio, Chicago White Sox property, and Tom Gorman, New York Giant property, are also on the squad. Both are pitchers and have good records. Perenchio won eight and

Duke Nine Displays Power On South Carolina Trip

By Earle Hellen

Duke's high powered baseball team has just returned from a devastating invasion of South Carolina during which they ran rough-shod over three Palmetto schools for five victories, all of which serves to indicate in a big way that Coach Jack Coombs has developed another diamond powerhouse over on the Methodist flats.

The Blue Devils marched through the teams of South Carolina, Clemson, and Furman like Sherman marched through Georgia back yonder in the days we don't like to think about. To Clemson goes the distinction of nearly beating the Blue Devils... they lost 5-2 in one game. In the other four contests the big guns of the Dukes blasted opposing pitchers all over the lot, hitting the high spot by walloping Furman 19-13 Saturday.

McCahan Heads Pitchers

Before the season opened Duke was of unknown quality, having only four lettermen back from last year's club. Bill McCahan, the basketball star heads the pitching staff, with long, lanky left-handed Bill Weaver, who was out last year but beat the Tar Heels in 1940, the only other experienced hurler in the camp. Coach Coombs came up with three reserves, Underwood, Hessler, and Simons and three sophomores, Palmer, Carroll, and Curtis to help McCahan and Weaver and all performed creditably last week.

The brightest spot of last week's games for Duke was the slugging of Captain George Byam, the second sack-er who hit only .288 last year. Byam blasted four home runs in the five games and hit one triple which shows that opposing pitchers had better be careful when the handsome keystone comes to the plate. Tommy Burns, the football guard, whom Coach Coombs has inserted at third base, also hit some powerful wallops. Rounding out the Duke infield are a pair of sops Bill Ingham at first and Roland Sailer at short.

Right-Fielder Back

In the outfield only right-fielder Irv Kohler is back from last year. However two Wilson boys have stepped into the other two spots and are fixtures. They are Tom Davis, the football tailback, and Grady Stott, a hefty slugger and both boys are sops.

Another of Wallace Wade's gridiron stars has won the catching post. He is Bobby Rute, a soph, who is a heavy hitter. Letterman Hap Sphuler, the basketball captain, is also on hand to share the receiving duties.

Duke's five victories make it the early favorite in the Big Five race, but the other four clubs have not started action. It must also be remembered that college baseball in South Carolina is not the best in the world either. All indications point to a close fight between Wake Forest, Carolina, State, and Duke. What the hard-hitting Dukes can do against such opposition remains to be seen, but they have a head start on all the other Big Five opponents.
