Bart Lewis to Pitch For Tar Babies Today In Greensboro Contest

By Bill Woestendiek

Hoping that most of last Saturday's mistakes have been permanently eradicated, the Carolina freshman nine plays host to a strong Greensboro high school baseball club on Emerson field today at 4 o'clock. Bart Lewis will pitch for the Tar Babies.

The Gate City lads boast a strong outfit and should prove a tough nut for the home club to crack this afternoon. The Whirlwind squad almost upset the Duke frosh Saturday, blowing up in the last frame to lose a close game by an 8-7 score.

Today's contest will be the second of the season for the Tar Babies. Coach Tatum's club won its opener from State, 11-9, but played erratic ball in doing so. The coaches have worked hard to eliminate the errors made against the State frosh and this afternoon's battle will show just how much progress has been made. The same line-up that opened against the Baby Terrors Saturday will play for the Carolina yearlings today, with the exception of starting twirler Lewis.

Outfield is Set
Wait Pupa, Frank Wideman and Rivers Johnson will take care of the three outfield spots. All three men were impressive at the plate in Saturday's contest. They accounted for five hits. Gresham, Colones, Hayworth or Hackney and Myers will line up "around the horn." Bill Lee will don the catching equipment. The infield was extremely erratic afield Saturday, but should be vastly improved this afternoon. Lee proved himself well-capable of handling his position by his work in the opening game.

Sparger and Webb Will Pitch
Jim Tatum stated yesterday that George Sparger and George Webb, two right-handers who worked against State, will also see some work this afternoon. Lewis, who is scheduled to start, has a blazing fast ball and has looked impressive in early season workouts.

The Greensboro club is one of the leading contenders for the class A high school crown this year. The Gate City club is led by shortstop Skinny Brown who got four hits in four trips to the plate against the Duke frosh, including a long triple. Other leading hitters on the Whirlwind team are outfielders Aydelette and McFarland and third-

Yearling Netters Score 9-0 Win Over State Frosh

RALEIGH, April 14.—Carolina's strongest frosh tennis team in years, minus three of the first five players, handed State's freshman netters a 9-0 licking here yesterday.

The Tar Heel yearlings today had just a semblance of the power attributed them but that was too much for the State first-year-men. Scott Stickle, Grant Small and Bob Spurrier, the second, third and fourth-ranking performers, missed action today, but their places were ably filled by Larry Cahall, Oscar Lubow and Al Stern.

Vic Seixas won 12 straight games from State's Knee in the No. 1 singles tilt taking the leadoff match, 6-0, 6-0. Cahall tagged Messick with a 6-1, 6-3 defeat, Lubow beat McDermott, State's No. 3 player, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, and Stern topped Temple, 6-4, 8-6. In the other singles matches, Al Bluethenthal bested Barton, 6-2, 8-6, and Howell defeated Frazier, 6-8, 8-6, 6-1.

Seixas and Cahall teamed to whip Knee and Messick, 6-1, 6-1, Lubow and Stern took the measure of McDermott and Temple, 6-3, 8-6, and Bluethenthal and Howell dealt Hord and Bristol a 6-2, 7-5 setback in the doubles.

baseman Phipps. The Greensboro infield fell apart in the ninth inning against the Blue Imps when the high school lads held a 7-3 lead, with the result that the Duke yearlings overcame the deficit and went on to win in the tenth inning.

Nine Seeks Sixth Loop Win In Tilt With Wake Forest

MISS MARY HARDWICK, shown above making a shot at the net, is one of the net stars who will appear here Saturday in a match for the benefit of the British and American Ambulance Corps. Al Schacht, the clown prince of baseball, will appear on the same bill with Miss Hardwick and Dorothy Round Little.

Hardwick Rose From Novice To Pro Star in Ten Years

English Woman Ace To Play Exhibition Here Saturday

By Mark Garner

From a novice at the game to one of the top-ranking women professional athletes in a brief span of 10 years is the short yet complete story of Mary Ruth Hardwick, one of England's most patriotic daughters and a favorite among tennis fans from commoners to monarchs, who plays Dorothy Round Little here Saturday in an exhibition match.

A little over 10 years ago, in 1930 to be exact, a small reddish-haired girl, still in her teens, sat in the stands at the focal point of tennis in Britain, the main court at Wimbledon. Bill Tilden and Helen Wills Moody reigned supreme, having just won the singles crowns, and the little spectator was so enthused by the exhibition she had seen that she became determined to someday play the game, not merely mediocre tennis, but that of championship calibre.

Five years later, the same little girl, now quite a young lady, held her ideal, Helen Wills Moody, to match point, the first time the great court star had lost a set since 1927. In the interim she had, with careful coaching, developed her own game and had met and beaten some of the best racket-wielders in the sport.

Following her match with Mrs.

Moody, Mary Hardwick toured South Africa with the British net team and the next year represented her country against the United States in the Wightman cup matches.

In 1938 she traveled the continent participating in and winning many tournaments. She captured the doubles and mixed doubles crowns at Copenhagen in the Scandinavian championship. She won the South of France singles title at Nice, added two more titles in the British covered court championship and the Scottish championship, and for the second year represented Great Britain in the Wightman cup matches against the United States.

Defeated Helen Moody
A year later Miss Hardwick reached what might be called the peak of her career when she defeated the great Helen Wills Moody in Weybridge, England. It was the first defeat Mrs. Moody had suffered in 11 years and marked the end of an era in Miss Hardwick's life—she had beaten the queen of them all.

From that year until she turned professional in 1941, she played tournament tennis in many countries and cities throughout the world and has been, since 1935, what King Gustav of Sweden calls, "My favorite partner."
Touring the United States last year as a pro with Tilden, Don Budge and Alice Marble, Miss Hardwick played in over 60 cities. During this time she

Varsity Tennis Team Seeks 60th Win In Row Against State Netters Today

This afternoon at Raleigh Carolina's varsity netmen will win their 60th consecutive match when the team battles State's Red Terrors. The Tar Heels dropped the State netmen without the loss of a match in Chapel Hill a week ago and the Kenfieldmen are due for a repeat performance today in the capital city. The matches start at 3 o'clock. Yesterday the varsity squadmen took advantage of the day of rest and many challenge matches, hanging fire during the days of competition, were played. As a whole the men seem much improved over early-season exhibitions and are already pointing for the northern tour the first week in May when the Tar Heels invade the home grounds of Maryland, Yale, Princeton and George Washington over a period of five days.

Tickets to the tennis matches and fashion show Saturday may be obtained all this week at the Carolina Sports Shop, the News Bureau, and the Daily Tar Heel. The admission is $.50.

From all indications Yale will be the team to beat on the tour. Coach Kenfield is not at all optimistic about his men's chances against the Eli's who this year are strengthened by the addition of a crew of top-notch sophomore netters. If the win string is to be snapped, Yale seems the team to wield the scissors with Princeton given an outside chance of upsetting the Carolinians.

For the first time this year, Co-captain Ham Anthony will be filling the first slot when the squad tangles with State today. Harris Everett, regular No. 1 man, will not participate in the match today. Anthony will meet State's Captain Frank Owens in the top match.

Harold Maass crosses rackets with Arnold Katterman in the second match, Jack Markham meets Elliott Winston, Moyer Hendrix clashes with Emmett Shoffner, Tom Wadden takes on George Barbee, and Hal Berk squares off against Austin Pruitt in the final singles match.

The doubles combinations are not known yet but Hunt Hobbs and Cliff Tuttle will probably see action in the paired competition.

Whiteheart's Loss Seriously Cramps Carolina's Play

Shocked and badly shaken by the loss of Monk Whiteheart for the remainder of the season, Carolina invades Wake Forest today in quest of its sixth Southern conference victory and its second Big Five triumph of the still rather young season.

Losing Whiteheart, who had installed himself as the Tar Heels' second duty pitcher, left Carolina with only two starting pitchers—veteran Red Benton and Charlie Moore, junior hurler who has turned in two victories this season.

Benton Will Hurl
Benton will be on the firing line for Carolina this afternoon in Wake Forest. The Deacs licked him in his sophomore year, 6-3. Wake Forest scored all its runs in that game by driving its scoring hits against a short left field wall.

Bunn Hearn faces a difficult problem in rationing the starting roles between Moore and Benton. He would like to pitch Benton as much as possible, but should he use the red-head in too many games he would probably get to the point where he couldn't win. When a team's No. 1 hurler has trouble winning, the rest of the pitchers on the team also have trouble. And in Carolina's case the only tried moundsman remaining would be Moore.

Lou Hayworth with his timely hitting in the past three games has practically taken a place in the starting infield. He can play either second, short or third. And it's going to be a hard job for either Bill Honan, Johnny Hearn
