Radio Studio To Follow Columbia University Model

Carolina Coed Publicized for Work
With New York Intracampus Broadcasts

By Phyllis Yates

The August issue of Mademoiselle shows pictures of a local student in a two-page spread of the Columbia University radio station. Judith Horn is the girl, here in summer school for her third year as member of the University radio and dramatic classes.

Her first two summers at Carolina Miss Horn attended the session as one of the high school group learning radio, last winter she entered Columbia as a freshman where she joined the radio club there. This summer she returned to Carolina and first session assisted Frank Brink in instructing the high school students learning radio.

Her picture is included in a group of photographs of Columbia students at work in their studio—part of an article Mademoiselle ran on CURC, the student controlled station of Columbia University.

Of particular interest to Carolina students, the station is a member of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System with which the local radio station to begin next fall will be affiliated. Miss Horn as an experienced member of a staff already associated with the system, has been assisting the Carolina group in organizing the local station.

The history of IBS began at Brown University in Providence, R. I., about five years ago when two of the students there rigged up an inter-dormitory communications system by installing their wires in pipes running between the buildings.

Later, the idea spread over the campus and a so-called broadcasting station was devised, an electric system was substituted for the pipes as communication lines. This beginning furnished the nucleus around which an entire network of universities and colleges have built their radio stations.

Harvard University, a year later, adopted the scheme to be the second student-owned, student-controlled radio station in the country. As the idea ran from school to school it was decided that a central headquarters should be established to handle the

Negro Navy Band Parades In Initial Appearance

Swinging down Franklin Street on Saturday morning to the stirring tune of "Anchors Aweigh," the Carolina Pre-Flight school's All-Negro band made an impressive debut before the students and townspeople of Chapel Hill. Meeting a large group of Pre-Flight cadets who had been on a long hike, the band marched in from around Carrboro with them and made an impressive showing in their white uniforms and shiny musical instruments.

The first all colored band ever in the Navy, the forty members of the band were all recruited from different sections of North Carolina and have been stationed at the Norfolk Naval Station the past several months receiving their indoctrination program.

Director of the band is Charles E. Dudrow of Baltimore who until called up again by the Navy last fall had been in retirement since 1936 after 30 years service in the Navy.

The forty members of the band have ratings of musicians second class and are quartered in Chapel Hill's Negro Community Center. They will play at various functions of the Navy and be a permanent addition to the Pre-Flight school here.

Home Defense School Opens Here Today

Civilian Defense Instruction Given

Over fifty people from all over the state will convene here today for a three day course of instruction in Civilian Defense sponsored by the State Defense Council and conducted by the local Institute of Government.

Appointed by their own town councils, these people are here primarily to learn how to organize civilian defense. They will have only a little overall instruction in reconnaissance of incendiaries and unexploded bombs, in dealing with poison gases, and in protection from aerial bombardment. The entire staff of the state office of Civilian Defense will be here to confer with men who are here from various districts and to assist in the instruction.

The school started this afternoon with a general discussion led by Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government, who organized the school. Tonight there will be a round table discussion in which the officers of the State Defense Council and the instructors will answer questions. This will be followed by a showing of a number of official Civilian Defense films to which the general public is invited. It is not yet known where the films will be held.

Tomorrow the program will consist of lectures and discussions about bombs, incendiaries, gases, air raid warnings, and control center operations. Among the speakers will be Major Oscar Tigner, the regional signal officer of the air raid warning system, Major Dewey Herren, who has been assigned by the Army to the State Defense Council, and Mr. Samray Smith, a staff member of the Institute.

E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, is holding a free showing of "Mrs. Miniver" at the Pick Theatre for those connected with the program that night.

After a discussion on civilian mobilization in the morning, the certificates of graduation will be presented Thursday afternoon at the final meeting by Mr. Ben E. Douglas, state director of the Civilian Defense program.

Royall, UNC Alumnus, Assigned to Defend Saboteurs in Trial

Colonel Kenneth C. Royall, who was assigned by the Army to defend the Nazi saboteurs at their trial in Washington, is an alumnus of the University.

Prior to entering service last June, Colonel Royall practiced law in Goldsboro and Raleigh.

He was graduated here in 1914, later studied law at Harvard where he was a student of Justice Felix Frankfurter, now of the Supreme Court. A son, Kenneth C. Royall, Jr., a lieutenant of the Marines, is also a Carolina graduate.

Webb Named New Safety Chairman; Move Initiated by Student Group

Carolina took another step in helping the war effort today when the Safety Council was authorized yesterday to serve as a student gas and car rationing board next fall.

The Safety Council will be headed by H. D. Webb, Jr., rising senior from Selma, Alabama, and recently appointed by student body president Bert Bennett working in conjunction with Legislature head W. J. Smith.

Seventh Navy Group Arrives

Complement Here Reaches 1,285

A new cadet group of 187 will arrive at the Pre-Flight school on Thursday, it was learned yesterday. The group will swell the present complement of Naval cadets here to 1285.

The new cadets will arrive from the northeastern cities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia and will arrive in Durham by train Thursday morning and be transported to Chapel Hill in special busses.

This will be the seventh group to arrive here in two-week intervals. The full complement is expected to be completed sometime in the early fall.

On their arrival here, the cadets will be registered and be assigned to rooms in the lower quadrangle which have been renovated for the Pre-Flight school.

Former Students Complete Course At USNR School

Nine more young graduates have just completed courses at Northwestern University in the US Naval Reserve Midshipman's School located there, the Alumni Office here has been informed.

All were given commissions as ensigns. From records available here the total number of University alumni to be commissioned at the Chicago school now totals 74. The men enrolled in the Navy's V-7 program.

A total of 136 University graduates and students were enlisted for V-7 training at the Raleigh recruiting office along between December 20, 1941 and July 14, 1942, Alumni Secretary J. Marvon Saunders says he has been informed.

Among the latest Carolinians to be commissioned as ensigns at Northwestern was David J. Morrison, Plainfield, N. J., '41 graduate and President of the University student body in 1940-41.

Others were Artemus R. Auman, Jr. '39, Seagrove; James S. Brawley '41, Salisbury; Philip W. Haigh, Jr. '41, Fayetteville; Wallace Vann Hall '41, Yanceyville; Logan D. Howell '39, Raleigh; Thomas Edwin Hyatt '39, Canton; James B. McMillan '41, McDonalds; and Simon C. Sitterson, Jr. '39, Kinston.

approached Bennett to ask a plan whereby students could also do their part. Since then discussions and plans toward wiser and non-wasteful use of gas for next year have been in process and have led to the formation of the new Safety Council. Members of the council will be, as has been the custom, picked by chairmen of other campus organizations.

Legitimate and Necessary Needs
To achieve this aim of eliminating wasteful expenditure of tires and gas, the most important problem facing the Council will be that of regulating use of student-owned cars for legitimate and necessary needs alone, student leaders indicated.

The new rules, which will be announced in the near future, are expected to be similar to those of last year's except for several new restrictions brought about by gasoline and tire rationing.

Students will not be prohibited from having cars at school, but the Safety Council will regulate the unnecessary use of them. In the past the Safety Council has merely required registration of student automobiles but will this year judge whether or not cars are necessary.

As a step in helping students and parents to decide whether a student should have his car at school, the Safety Council intends to send letters to parents setting forth the regulations and rules governing the campus use of automobiles during the duration. The plan is to permit the student and parent freedom to decide as to whether or not a car is necessary while away at school.

Not to Abolish Cars
"We have no thought of abolishing student-owned automobiles," said Bennett, "but we and the student group feel our responsibility to emphasize the need for regulations during the war. The colleges want to do their part too."

The automobile issue was discussed at a meeting recently, attended by Dean Parker and representative members of the council at large, and all were in agreement that new regulations would have to be imposed, backed by the Student Council.

Dowling Commissioned In Army Air Forces

Navigation Cadet William Anderson Dowling, former Carolina student, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Dowling of New Canaan, Conn., was recently commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Army Air Forces at Turner Field, Albany, Georgia, by Colonel John B. Patrick, Commanding Officer.

Campus Talent Presented for Popular Survey In Student Amateur Show Tomorrow Night

An Amateur Show, highlighting the week's activities, will be presented tomorrow night at 8:30 in the lounge of Graham Memorial.

Campus talent is being recruited for the performance, and all interested in participating are asked to get in touch with Miss Helen Dugan at the Summer School Activities Office in the Y building.

Dr. William H. Kilpatrick, eminent Professor of Education who is conducting courses in the University School of Education during the second session of summer school, will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in the lounge of Graham Memorial on "Building Morale on the Home Front and the War Front." Following the lecture, an informal reception will be held. All interested are invited.

A double attraction is featured Friday night. A watermelon slicing, the second of the summer session, will get under way at 8 o'clock on the lawn behind Graham Memorial, and will be followed by square dancing in the Y court at eight-thirty. Popularity of both the melon feasts and the square dances has been proved by the number of melons consumed and the crowds that turn out to "dol si do" to the hill music.

Saturday night informal dancing in the Y court will begin at 8:30, and simultaneously a Jam Session will get under way in the Graham Memorial Lounge. Sunday night Alderman Dormitory takes the spotlight when they entertain their dates at a Supper Party at 6:30.

Other events that have become classic summer session attractions will take place as usual. Tonight at nine o'clock blanket parties are invited to take advantage of the cool breezes on the north lawn of Graham Memorial and the popular music that will be presented via recordings.

For those who prefer their music a little less light, Classical recordings will be played Thursday night from eight-thirty till ten-thirty on the North Lawn.

An organ recital by Mary F. Schinhan is scheduled Sunday afternoon at 4:30 at the Methodist Church.

Sunday night at 8:30 "Music Under the Stars" in Kenan Stadium brings the week's activities to a close.
