

Studio Presents Exhibit To Start Picture Contest

By Larry Dale
 "Saboteur" is a picture of an obnoxious-looking individual or rather an individual looking obnoxious in a designated role. The individual is Ted Croner, who is now serving in a new role as one of the judges in the current campus photographic contest being conducted under the auspices of the Carolina Workshop council.

The contest was opened last Wednesday to all students and pictures must be turned in at Foister's by noon December 1.

The picture "Saboteur" is one of the 50-odd photographs on display at Foister's which might serve as inspiration to students competing for the $5 first prize, $3 second prize, and the $2 third prizes.

Contestants need not, however, take pictures of saboteurs, obnoxious individuals, or even of contest judges in order to qualify. The field, according to the rules released this week, is "wide open," i.e., no limitation as to subjects is imposed.

Ted Croner, aside from being the subject of the fearsome photo, was also his own photographer. It was his work in this role that earned him his job as judge.

Pictures by former campus "greats" in the photographic world as well as the best taken by present publications photographers are included in the Foister display.

"Way Up" and two pictures entitled "Modern Dance" by Jack Field feature spit-second timing that catches the subject in mid-air poses. All three shots appeared in the Carolina Magazine last year. Field is now in the Navy taking a special camouflage course in Washington.

"Dam Leaks" by Hugh Morton is a close-up shot of the structure of an old dam. It's the type of picture that creates that thirsty sensation enjoyed on a hot summer day. Morton is now in an Air Corps technical school.

Karl Bishopric, Yackety-Yack picture editor and one of the contest judges, has contributed shots of Coach Jim Tatum and cheerleader Doris Clark to the exhibit. The picture of Tatum appeared in the first issue of Carolina Magazine published this quarter.

"Nikko" by Sam Wallace, publications photographer and another of the contest judges, is first on the right of the door. Nikko is a luxurious-looking cruiser which Wallace caught lounging at its pier in front of the Ocean Plaza Hotel in Miami last Christmas. Arthur Levine's picture of Graham Memorial is a shot with an unusual black and white contrast giving a moonlight scene appearance.

Coeds Elect Epps To Honor Council

In a short meeting of the Town girls held yesterday, Aida Epps was overwhelmingly elected representative to the Honor Council of the Woman's government. Other candidates for the office were Margaret Pickard, who received six votes, and Marion Watters, who received one vote. Sarah Umstead was also nominated, but her nomination was withdrawn.

Ditzi Buice, speaker of the woman's senate, requested that a senior be elected. Miss Buice also said that the girl elected would be required to attend all Honor council meetings which are held Tuesday nights in the Woman's government room at 10:30.

"Plans are under way to install a hot plate on the second floor of the YMCA for town girls to prepare their lunches on rainy days in order to avoid a long trip home," Hilda Weaver, president of the Town girls' association, announced.

Latin American Tells Countrymen of UNC

South Americans have learned of Carolina recently from articles written by a student who attended one of the summer sessions. He is José Pareja Paz Soldán, who has also written of universities of this country in general as contrasted to those of Peru.

According to Miss Elizabeth Adkins, a specialist in Latin American studies at the Library, clippings of these men's work appear from time to time in Chapel Hill. The most recent of these clippings is by Carlos Raygada, class of 1941. It is an account of a lecture delivered to students of a South American university by a North American.

ODT Director Opens Campaign To Curtail Traffic

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(UP)—Director of Defense Transportation Joseph B. Eastman today began a nation-wide program to keep the American public at home.

The "don't travel" appeal is being worked out by the ODT in collaboration with the Association of American Railroads and the National Association of Motor Bus Operators in an effort to call attention "to the gravity of the passenger transportation problem and to show what must be done to solve it."

"The time is here," Eastman said, "when all American people must understand, what many of them now realize, that unnecessary travel can do real and serious harm to the war effort. Conditions will become much worse unless the American public comes to the rescue."

Eastman explained that "it is not easy" to ask the public to refrain from travelling at Thanksgiving or Christmas time.

"Many families look forward through the year to these annual reunions, but I must ask that these family gatherings be foregone this year if they involve travel," Eastman said.

Prospective Grads Must Fill Out Cards
