Trustees Approve Five New Dormitories

Salaries for Faculty Raised; New Policy of Admissions Set Equivalent of 500 Additional Rooms Is Provided for in New Legislation

By Bill Rutledge

Three major issues—the policy of admitting new students, increase in housing capacity, and higher salaries for faculty members—were decided by the University Board of Trustees meeting in their annual session yesterday at Raleigh.

The board voted to approve the action of the Executive Committee in constructing five new dormitories or the equivalent of 500 extra rooms for Chapel Hill during their morning session which began at 11 o'clock in the Capitol building. Also approved were 400 rooms for State College and 130 rooms for Woman's College. The money for construction, to be begun as soon as possible, is to be borrowed from a bank in the form of a self-liquidating loan, for which bonds will be issued.

Salaries Raised

A second resolution passed unanimously adopting the report of the University Visiting committee on the subject of increased salaries for faculty members in the amount of $145,000 for the University; $125,000 for Woman's college; and $95,000 for State college. It was enthusiastically pledged to advocate appropriations to carry out an increased salary scale to meet these figures.

A priority setup governing the acceptance of new students to the University was decided at the session. Comptroller William D. Carmichael, Jr. explained classifications as follows: "A," North Carolina veterans; "B," North Carolina non-veterans; "C," out of state veterans; "D," out of state non-veterans. This classification would place any new coeds at the bottom of the list for admittance.

Carmichael said that the Greater University faces its ban-

Amendments Make Sweeping Changes In Di Procedure

The constitution committee of the Dilectic senate will report favorably tomorrow night on a series of radical amendments to the Di's constitution. The amendments were drafted by special reforms committee consisting of Nina Guard, David Pittman, Tom Lockhart, and Al Lowenstein.

Pittman, Tom Corpening, Don Shropshire, and Robert Morrison, members of the constitution committee, felt that the amendments should be seriously considered by the Senate, and Morrison, chairman of the committee, predicted that most of them would be tentatively passed and put on trial until the next executive session.

The recommended changes will completely alter the purpose of the present ways and means committee, and will cause discussion bills to originate with individual senators. A different seating arrangement and meeting time are included in the proposed changes.

ner year with all three divisions loaded beyond capacity and hundreds of prospective students turned away.

The provisions were read into the minutes of the meeting that classifications should not apply to (1) students holding scholarships duly established under university regulations, (2) local students privately housed, and (3) students who procured their own living quarters. Each of these exceptions is subject to the University's regulations and allocation of functions.

The allocation by the government of 150 housing units to be set up on the outskirts of Chapel Hill was reported to the full board.

Smith To Outline New Phi Policies At Meeting Tonight

A. B. Smith, incoming speaker of the Philanthropic Assembly, will outline the policies to be followed in the Phi during his term at the meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Committees in accordance with the new constitution will be appointed. All members of the Phi are urged to attend this very important meeting.

The Case Anti-Strike Bill will be discussed again this week. Recently passed by the House of Representatives, the Case Bill comes before congress and should be in the national spotlight this week.

Support of Loan to Britain Asked by Secretary Byrnes

Move Would Eliminate Grip of Cartels On World Commerce, Claims Statesman

New York, Feb. 11.—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes tonight urged support of the proposed loan agreement with Great Britain as a measure which would loosen the grip of cartels on world commerce and establish international trade on a business instead of a political basis.

Byrnes said that British pledges in the agreement to support U. S. trade proposals was the most significant of the benefits "which flow to us" because they would make Britain "our economic ally and not our economic enemy."

Rep. Bloom Says UNO Passed First Tests

Washington, Feb. 11.—Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee returned today from the meetings of the United Nations in London confident that UNO has passed its first major tests and is "stronger today than when the charter was written."

"Nobody has walked out," he said. "That is the test."

Clark Names Committee To Fight Delinquency

Washington, Feb. 11.—Attorney General Tom C. Clark today urged a special advisory board of educators, clergymen, and civic leaders to launch a national drive to combat juvenile delinquency. The board, which was announced last Saturday by Clark opened a closed two day meeting here. Members include representatives from cities throughout the nation.

Graham Memorial Stresses Necessity For Additional Wing to Union Building

"It costs us $6.00 to move furniture and rugs every time we sponsor a Friday night frolic," said Martha Rice, director of Graham Memorial, commenting about the drive for funds to build a new wing for the building.

According to the architects' plans the present Graham Memorial is only the center section of a large H-shaped building which will house a large ballroom with a stage, offices and lounges in addition to those rooms in the center section. Miss Rice said that the union in its present form is fully occupied and all available space is in demand. Since she became director last October over sixty organizations have used Graham Memorial facilities. Many of these organizations, such as the German Club, May Frolics Club and the Veterans Association would like permanent offices. Other groups such as the Tar Heel, Yack,

Carolina Mag and the management of Graham Memorial are now operating in cramped quarters and could use more space. Although the architect's plans call for two wings, those in charge of the drive are working to build only one wing at the present time. In the new wing would be a combined auditorium and ball room which would do away with the necessity of using the main lounge for dances and other social affairs. At the present time students are forced to sit on the floor and window sills for Sunday night concerts and other performances. Many of the tables in the lounge have been scarred and their legs have been broken from students standing on them to see shows.

The board of directors of Graham Memorial have allotted $500 to secure professional entertainment but at the present time only singers and pianists can be used because of the lack of a stage and dressing rooms. When Mary Hutchinson, dramatist, comes here March 6 she will perform in the Playmakers Theatre, although it is the policy of Graham Memorial to hold all activities within the building itself. The Playmakers have given up a rehearsal in order to accommodate Miss Hutchinson and Graham Memorial.

Also in the new wing there will be an informal student recreation room with a juke box, ping pong tables, bridge tables and other recreational facilities. This room will be open from early morning until late night. Construction will begin on the new dream wing as soon as sufficient funds are raised. Hillel Foundation has already given $25.00 to the fund and other contributions, either personal or group, will be accepted. Profits from the Valentine Dance Friday night will also be added to the building fund.

Veteran Hop Set Saturday

Tickets Will Go On Sale Thursday

The University Veterans Association will inaugurate its spring social program Saturday, February 16, with a Valentine Dance in the Naval Armory. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Carolinians. The Carolinians, newest of campus dance bands, have some of the finest talent of the student body in their band.

Ken Willis, chairman of the social committee, announced that the hours of the dance have been fixed at 8:30 until 12:00 o'clock, according to Carolina custom. The dress will be semi-formal. Due to a severe lack of space, and due to the load limit of the Armory floor, it has been necessary to open the dance only to current members of the UVA.

Bids for the dance will be available in the YMCA lobby Thursday, Friday and Saturday, unless otherwise announced. A fee of one dollar will be collected for each bid.

Captain Loomis said in loaning the Armory for the occasion, that he was delighted to be of service to the campus veterans. He asked only that people be requested not to handle or touch the Navy equipment in the Armory.

The Veterans Club will be open after the dance for those who wish a late snack. The club is located on Raleigh Road just beyond Woollen Gym.

Morehead Art Collection Is Included in Bequest

Gift Set Up As Memorial For Wife; Negotiations Opened For Telescope

The University is to have the famous Morehead Art Collection, valued at approximately $250,000, and a new $1,000,000 Art Gallery and Planetarium, the last of which will be similar to those located in five metropolitan centers in the United States, and the only one owned by a university or college anywhere in the world.

JOHN MOTLEY MOREHEAD

The distinctive gift of the "Theater of the heavens," which was made by John Motley Morehead of Rye, N. Y., scion of North Carolina's famous family of builders, former Minister to Sweden, and ex-president of the University Alumni Association, was presented personally by Mr. Morehead at a meeting of the board of trustees in Raleigh yesterday. He was presented by President Frank P. Graham.

Internationally Famed

Mr. Morehead, who is internationally known as a consulting engineer, industrialist, scientist, and philanthropist, also told the trustees that he had already set up "The Morehead Foundation" to administer the trust and to devote any unused money to scholarships for outstanding young men in such amounts and in such manner as the trustees of the foundation shall determine.

The million-dollar edifice, which will be located on the old campus some yards back of the front line of Graham Memorial and Alumni Building, will be known as The Morehead Building. The main gallery will be called the Genevieve B. Morehead Gallery, in memory of his late wife, and will house her famous private collection of paintings, rare glass, china, lace, and other objects d'art.

Kreuger Collection

This includes a large part of the collection of Ivar Kreuger, the late "Swedish match king," and two rare portraits of George and Martha Washington, painted from life by the celebrated artist, Rembrandt Peale, and known as the Port Hole pictures.

The plans for the building are now being prepared by Eggers and Higgins, of New York, and construction will begin as soon

Radcliffe Offers New Scholarships In Personnel Work

Radcliffe College is offering a number of fellowships of $500 and $300 each for the year 1946-47, according to T. North Whitehead, director of the management training program at Radcliffe.

The training program, which will start on July 29, 1946 and end June 6, 1947, provides basic training for young women intending to work in personnel departments, as well as for those who seek positions in other branches of administration.

Enrollment is open to a limited number of college graduates. The tuition for the term is $450. Anyone wishing further information may apply to T. North Whitehead, Director of Management Training Program, Radcliffe College, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts.

Donor Given Luncheon By Gov. Cherry

By Sarah Spratt

The University trustees were greeting each other.

"Hello, Major!" someone said. An elderly, rather stout man shook hands with the trustee.

The ordinary Tar Heel native was the giver of the Art Gallery and Planetarium, which stupendous value caused immediate excitement among the trustees.

"We congratulate you on your contribution to the education of the youth of America, and to world peace."

All the group was shaking hands with the Major, who was the second of the Moreheads to attend the University since the first John Motley Morehead came here when the school was 21 years of age. Each of the four generations has played a major role in the unfolding industrial, business and social development of the Old North State. The first Morehead was twice Governor of North Carolina (1840 and 1842), made his extensive and lasting contributions to railroad building and internal improvements. John Motley, a sophomore here now, is studying radio.

"I wanted to share something of what I have to the students who will pursue science as I have tried to do," Major Morehead commented on the Planetarium, the telescope of which will cost $75,000.

The Memorial Gallery will have supporting reception rooms, offices, classrooms, and service rooms.
