Playwriting Lures Authoress From Work of Novel-Making

"A novel is like a good, kind, understanding man, while a play is like an undependable vagabond." Betty Smith, of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" fame, told the members of the Carolina Dames club here Tuesday night. She added, "Though I'm proud of my novel, my eyes go down the road after that vagabond."

Miss Smith explained to the audience that she considers herself primarily a playwright, and said that she is putting off publication of her second book until she has a play produced on Broadway. She spoke informally to the group of wives of students, telling some of her experiences as an author, and answering questions about herself and her work.

ater, the charming Miss Smith,

When asked about her first interest in writing and the the- (known also as Mrs. Joe Jones to residents of the University village) answered, "My love for the theatre goes back to when I was a child in Brooklyn. I thought I wanted to go on the stage, but soon learned that I was paying more attention to the 'What if's' of a play than to the actors and actresses. I would go home and wonder 'what would have happened' if the hero had not returned just when he did?" and "what if the villain had killed the child's mother?" Then I decided that I would rather write the plays than act in them."

McKinney, high scorer for the night with 21 points, played the entire game, and seemed to be that extra spurt of energy that put Carolina ahead late in the first half and kept her there all the time. Aided by lanky Bob Paxton, and scrappy Taylor Thorne, McKinney had complete control of the backboards, a factor which counted no end in last night's tussle.

Bubber Seward, was held down to a bare two points in the first half by the great defensive playing of Thorne, and later was taken on by White who held him to six points.

High scorer for the Demon Devils from Duke was Ed Koffenberger. Big Ed, who played a particularly rough game, scored 16 points for Duke.

Just out of the infirmary, John Dillon, Carolina's ace hook shot artist, scored 11 points before he was taken out of the game in the second half. Dillon missed but two hook shots during the game, and played a better than average defense.

Following is a running account of the game:

McKinney won the opening jump, but Duke secured possession of the ball and Gordon tossed in an overhead shot. Carolina returned the ball down court and Dillon made good a hook shot to tie the game at 2-2 after two minutes. Dillon fouled Whiting who missed. Cheek, in return, fouled Paxton who missed.

Whiting made a fast break for a Duke field goal. Dillon, shooting on a foul by Cheek, picked up one point. Koffenberger tossed in a set shot for two more points. After six minutes of play, Paxton was injured and taken from the game. Thorne and Anderson entered the contest for Carolina.

Seward picked up one point on a foul by White. McKinney made a field goal to put the Phantoms ahead for the first time, 9-7. Dillon replaced Anderson. Thorne fouled Cheek who made the free toss. A few plays later, Dillon's hook shot was good and Duke led, 12-11.

After 12 minutes of play, Paxton returned to the game with a bandaged jaw. Seward fouled Paxton who made a good shot and tied the score, 12-12. McKinney made two field goals in quick order. Paxton made good a foul shot. Duke came back with two field goals to make the score 16-15. Whiting, fouled by Dillon, picked up one marker.

McKinney sank an overhead shot to tie the game. Duke came back with a field goal to again lead by a two-point margin. With two minutes of the first half remaining, the Phantoms hit their potent pace. White sank a set shot, McKinney made good an See WHITE PHANTOMS, page 4.
