UNC Overcomes Early Maryland Lead To Fight Way into Semi-Finals Today

Raleigh, Feb. 28—(UP)—The University of North Carolina's White Phantoms—the acknowledged giant killers of Dixie—scored an easy 54 to 27 victory over the University of Maryland tonight to advance to the semi-final round in the Southern Conference basketball tournament.

A capacity crowd of 4,000 saw Carolina overcome an early Maryland lead and then go on to win handily.

The victory was the 27th of the season for the Tar Heels as against three losses.

Maryland was badly handicapped by the absence of three players who were sidelined by illness.

Johnny Dillon was the leading point-maker for Carolina, scoring 13 points on five field goals and three free throws. But it was the floor work of Bones McKinney, Carolina's lanky center,

Students Announce Plans To Begin UNC Workshop

Will Meet Today to Discuss Plans For Promoting Creative Campus Work

All students and majors in the fields of music, fine arts, drama, creative writing, dance and radio are asked to attend a meeting in the Playmakers Theatre this afternoon at 5 o'clock to discuss plans for the Carolina Workshop Festival to be held in the spring.

Representatives from the Grail, Student Government, the Legislature and the Tar Heel will be present to back this student organization which promotes and encourages creative work among the students on campus.

The Carolina Workshop was founded in 1942 by a group of students headed by Richard Adler, under the auspices of the Grail, as an official integrating and sponsoring agency for the various creative art departments and fields at the University.

Since that time the Workshop has held a festival each spring to bring about a closer contact between these departments and the public. In 1942 and 1943 Richard Adler was chairman of the organization, and the spring festival consisted of a three-day program when creative arts students visited each other's classes and presented their original work to the public as entertainment in the evening. In 1944 Kat Hill was chairman of the Workshop and continued this program.

Today's meeting is to familiarize new students with the purposes and activities of the organization. During part of the war, young instructors in the arts departments carried on the work of this student organization in order that it might be preserved and handed back to the students now.

Carolínians Top Graham Memorial Frolics Tonight

Led by Marshal Stine, the campus's latest dance sensation, the Carolínians will spotlight the weekly Friday Night Frolic in the student union from 9 until 12 o'clock tonight.

Feature of the evening, director Martha Rice disclosed, will be the release of an original song with lyrics written by a Carolina student. Refreshments will be available at a student concession in the Grill.

"We welcome all students to these affairs, single or with dates, and if past attendance holds true tonight, the lounge will be overflowing," Miss Rice commented.

The eight student musicians composing The Carolínians have been organized only slightly over a month. In previous engagements this group have been extremely well received. Featuring novelty and vocal numbers, the band puts main emphasis on sweet dance music.

Critics Praise Versatility Of Hutchinson

"Mary Hutchinson has pep, personality, looks and everything that it takes" "Dainty Mary Hutchinson dances and frolics about the stage with an abandon that surprises renewed admiration from her spectators." Those are the comments of the New York Times and the Los Angeles Examiner concerning tomorrow night's Graham Memorial entertainer who will star in a program of "Dramatic Portraits" in the Playmakers Theatre at 8:30.

Martha Rice, student union director and sponsor of the program, stressed that the affair is free, and strongly urged students to be prompt for the performance due to the limited seating facilities of the Playmakers theatre.

All-Around Actress
 One of the acting profession's best all-around troupers, Miss Hutchinson has appeared in Broadway productions, summer stock shows, theatrical tours, and radio and television shows, besides presenting her own distinctively different show herself during the past four years.

She is a graduate of the New York School of the Theatre and the John Anderson-Robert Milton School. At the age of 15 she was admitted to Barnard College for Women and during her freshman year conducted classes in ballet during week-end visits to her home in Eastern Pennsylvania.

New Type Show
 The audience at tomorrow night's show will see a fascinatingly different type of entertainment in the dramatic monologue field. By means of a small portable translucent plastic dressing room, which is placed right on the stage, Miss Hutchinson eliminates waiting between interpretations, and prepares the audience for her next take-off while she is changing costumes.

This program is but one of a bill of five entertainers which the student union plans to bring to the University by the end of the spring quarter.

Australian War Bride Gives Impressions of Chapel Hill

By Sarah Spratt

"Before coming to America, I had received instructions about acclimating myself to American ways of living, but I feel just like any other veteran's wife here at Carolina," said Mrs. Thomas P. Field, one of the three Australian brides here.

Mrs. Field is a native of Perth, Western Australia. Her husband is from Johnson City, Tenn., and is doing graduate work in geography. She came to America in September, 1945. Speaking of the voyage to the "exciting country," on board the Lurline, she said:

Crowded Conditions
 "Living with 500 other Australian women for 15 days was an experience within itself. About 250 brides had babies with them. Only about 12 had their husbands with them. How I used to envy those lucky few, since my husband was then stationed in Sanford, Florida."

After the ship docked at San Francisco, Mrs. Field was greeted by some of her husband's friends, who helped her get to Los Angeles, where she took a plane for Sanford.

"Tom was discharged from the Navy a fortnight later. We were one happy couple."

Since September, Mr. and Mrs. Field have traveled to Tennessee, Washington, Baltimore, Lancaster and Richmond.

Band to Play Concert Here

Slocum Will Lead Sunday's Program

The University Concert Band, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will present its first concert of the year Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in Hill Music Hall.

The band, which began with six members in 1903 under the direction of Charles T. Woollen, has become one of the most outstanding musical organizations on the campus and at present is composed of 62 pieces. Mr. Slocum, the present director, came from Greensboro to Carolina in 1933. He is a member of the American Bandmasters Association and is well known for his leadership in musical circles throughout the country.

Sunday, a varied program will feature the serious music of Ernest Williams' "Symphony in C Minor" contrasted by the modern "Mexican Hat Dance", styled by Les Brown. Hubert Henderson, former president of the University Band and Warrent officer with the 773rd AAF Band in Italy, will be the soloist.

Drawl Fascinates

"My husband considered attending the University of Wisconsin, Johns Hopkins, and Clark. We happened to be passing through the state and got off our route, and somehow found ourselves in Chapel Hill. I think I would have been homesick in any other place. The southerners are so very nice. And their speech is so fascinating."

Mrs. Field is a fair brownette with a marked British accent and enthusiastic spirit. She is working diligently as film librarian for the extension division of the University.

"The work I'm doing now is quite different from what I did in Australia. I taught Physics for three years in Perth. I also taught in Sydney while I was waiting for my ship, from last January to September."

Her father, Ray Davis, is president of Perth Technical College.

"The free university is in Perth—the only one in Australia. One has only to buy his books. It is state-supported."

"Of course the examinations are very severe in order to enter the Western University. We have more public school examinations than you do."
