

Juniors To Vote Thursday In Regard To Spring Dance

Class Members Will Cast Ballots On Issue of $2 Assessment Fee

By Bettie Washburn

The Junior Class will vote Thursday, March 14, on whether each member of the class will pay a class fee of two dollars which will be used to give a Junior-Senior dance this spring. Voting is in charge of the elections committee and polls will be set up in the Y, Lenoir Hall and Kenan dormitory. Military men will vote in the basement of Lenoir.

Alex Veasey, president of the Junior Class, said today that inasmuch as a large number of Juniors have already registered and paid their fees the university administration will not be able to collect the fees through the cashier's office. Because of this unfortunate circumstance, if the class desires a Junior-Senior and votes in favor of the assessment of $2, it will necessitate the cooperation of every Junior on campus in collecting the fee in order to put over a successful Junior-Senior prom.

Louis Cotton, chairman of the dance committee, has already been working on plans for the dance and said that Dean Hudson could be contracted to play for the prom held in May. Other name bands are under consideration however. Since it is necessary for an organization to pay at least half of the orchestra's fee when the contract for the engagement is made, Cotton can make no headway with engaging a band until the class fees have been collected from everyone.

Every junior on campus is urged to vote in favor of the proposed plan this Thursday in order to reinstate the Junior-Senior prom at Carolina.

IRC ELECTS

Morris explained that the purpose of the IRC is to stimulate interest and understanding of world affairs by means of study and discussion and by presenting to the campus speakers of importance and authority. He extended an invitation to all interested students to visit and participate in the future meetings of the IRC.

It was also announced that the IRC-sponsored radio program heard weekly on Tuesday evenings, 8:30 p. m. over WDNC in Durham will be continued.

The first alumnus to be governor was William Miller, a student in 1802, and since that time 26 of the 44 governors of North Carolina have been University alumni. Alumni have served as United States senators, representatives, cabinet members, ambassadors, ministers and North Carolina judges. Seven former Carolina men have been president of the University, including the present head, Dr. Frank P. Graham.

The Alumni Office also acts as a clearing house for local alumni associations and class organizations and arranges class reunions which occur every five years for each class. It is the home of the Alumni Review, a magazine mailed to all dues-paying alumni. Ten issues are published a year, including a weekly football supplement in the fall, and the magazine is made up of news and pictures of the campus and notes and features on the alumni and the Association.
