Woman Doctor Tells How She Killed More Than 3,000 Infants

The little lady, Doctor Gizella Pearl, told United Press correspondent Joan Younger that she strangled some of the babies, and poisoned others. But Doctor Pearl is not a Nazi murderer. Indeed, she was a victim of the Nazis herself—forced to conduct the woman's hospital at a concentration camp after her entire Hungarian family was killed. She explains that she was forced to kill all babies born in the camp the moment they were delivered—to keep them from falling into Nazi hands alive—to be used for horrible experiments and torture.

Phi Opposes Peace Draft

One-Sided Voting Follows Hot Debate

The Phi Assembly Tuesday night voted almost unanimously to approve a bill introduced by Charlie Britt that the United States work for an international agreement to abolish compulsory peacetime military training. Debate, centered on a corollary measure introduced by Charlie Borton that the United States adopt a temporary system of post-war military conscription. The debate, one of the hottest in recent weeks in the Phi, ended in the passage of the bill by a vote of eleven to three.

Contention of the opposition was that the passage of the conscription bill would be a deterrent to world peace because it would end in a race of armament by the world powers. The supporters of the bill maintained that conscription is a necessity at the present time due to the fact that world conditions are too unstable to sacrifice national security.

Charlie Britt, who lead the attack against the conscription bill, said that it would be a grave error if we adopted the measure as a national policy, because it would inevitably result in another war.
