John L. Lewis Wins Pay Row As Strike Ends

Union Compromises On Retirement Fund

Washington, May 29.—The soft coal strike has been settled. The White House announces that Secretary of Interior Krug and John L. Lewis have signed a soft coal labor contract in President Truman's office. They affixed their signatures to the contract shortly after 4 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time. Krug said Lewis indicated he would order his miners back to work "immediately." Tomorrow will be a holiday, however, and volume production is not expected to start before Monday. The terms provide a basic hourly wage of 18 and one-half cents an hour or a dollar and 85 cents a day. It also provides for a welfare and retirement fund financed by five cents a ton levy on coal production and administered by three trustees, one appointed by the union, one by the Coal Administrator and the third by the other two. It also provides for a medical and hospital fund financed from deductions already made from miners pay and for a mine safety program. The mines are to be operated nine hours a day with overtime after seven hours.

New York, May 29.—The AF of L United Mine Workers have rejected an anthracite operators' request to continue their working contract for 30 days. The refusal means that miners will leave the pits at midnight tonight.

House Passes Case Anti-Strike Measure

Washington, May 29.—The House of Representatives has approved the final version of the Case Anti-Strike Bill. The bill now goes to the White House, where President Truman faces a major decision on whether to sign it or veto it. The Case Bill is the most stringent anti-strike bill ever passed by Congress. It differs from President Truman's emergency legislation for government seized industries in that it is a permanent measure, and applies to all industries.

Surveys Begun By Architects Of Planetarium

Material Shortage Delays Construction

Preliminary architectural surveys for the Morehead Planetarium and Art Gallery, the gift of John Motley Morehead and his late wife, were begun yesterday under the direction of O. R. Eggers, of Eggers and Higgins, New York, architect, and Arthur C. Nash, consulting architect.

According to present plans the planetarium will face Hill Hall and will almost completely fill the space between the Arboretum and the upper campus. Entrance to the building will be set back so that it is on a line with the back of Graham Memorial and the Alumni Building. Senior Walk will be forced to curve around the building since the present walk will be covered.

Mr. Nash and Dr. Frank Graham, who was watching the survey, both declined to say when actual construction would begin. Shortage of materials and labor was blamed for the delay.

Floor Plans

Plans for the planetarium include a pillared entrance into the main gallery. The first floor will have another gallery. Also located in the building will be offices, a reception room, a luncheon room, class rooms and a museum.

The architectural firm in charge of the planetarium also designed Jefferson Memorial, the National Archives Building, and the National Gallery of Art.

Giduz Appointed Managing Editor

Roland Giduz, rising senior from Chapel Hill, has been appointed new managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel by editor Bill Woestendiek subject to the approval of the Publications Board. Giduz succeeds Westy Fenhagen who graduates this term.

Giduz has been a member of the Tar Heel staff since 1942, serving during that time as a night editor, and as a member of the news, sports and editorial staffs. He is a journalism major. A veteran, Giduz served overseas with the 100th Infantry division during the war.

Fenhagen has served as managing editor since his return to the University at the start of the fall term.

Clothing for Europe Collected on Weekend

In response to the desperate need for clothing in the stricken areas of Europe during the coming winter, the YM-YWCA is sponsoring a clothing drive on the campus this week-end.

Women's wear, warm outer-garments, and shoes are especially needed. If possible, clothing should be clean and in usable condition (mending materials are scarce).

Collection boxes will be placed in the dormitories and in the "Y" building. All students are urged to share what clothing they can with those whose need is so great.

The retiring board recommended to the incoming group that it appoint a committee to investigate possibilities for obtaining a soda fountain for Graham Memorial. It is hoped that the present grill will be modernized into a recreation room much more suited to student needs than the present one.

The committee appointed by the chairman to find surplus space in Graham Memorial reported that all available space is being used with the exception of a downstairs kitchen now filled with equipment owned by the University. The University was requested to move this equipment so that the space may be utilized.
