Represent Carolinas District in Nationals

Carolina's ace swimmers on the men's and women's teams, Snooky Proctor from Rocky Mount and Frances Kenney from Raleigh, are swimming on the Carolinas district team in the first Southern Women's AAU and National Junior Championships, being held at Fulton Park Pool in Atlanta this weekend.

The two Tar Heel swimmers are among the 15 stars from the district who are competing against sectional champions from ten states for honors in the Atlanta contest. The Carolinas district champions were chosen from the participants in the recent High Point AAU and Open championships. Snooky Proctor, defending AAU champion in the 400 and 1500 meter free style events, won his place on the distance team by setting a new AAU record of 22.24 in the 1500 free style event at High Point. His outstanding record makes him one of the favorites in the meet this weekend.

Frances Kenney holds the distance title for several events in the Carolinas AAU district. She is entered in the 880-meter free style event as a member of the district team.

Willis Casey, brother of Carolina's assistant coach Ralph Casey, whose Goldsboro team won the senior women's divisional championship at High Point, will coach the Carolinas contingent.

The meet at Atlanta is the last in which Carolina swimmers will participate until August 23-24, when the Southern Regional AAU meet for men will be held here.

Checking Up on Carolina Athletes

Footballers, Baseballers, Swimmers and Cagers Just Take Life Easy During Hot Summer Months

By Tom Eller

Carolina's athletes, like the proverbial "peas in a pod", scatter themselves to the four winds during the summer sessions. Somewhat like graceful, migratory birds, they move back to old stamping grounds and out into what often proves to be more fertile and compensating fields. But, unless they have accomplished their objectives in the good old school educationally, fall generally finds them right back here and ready to write more pages into the college sports annals and into the hearts of their rabid fans.

This year, even though it is marked by the mad scramble to acquire sheepskins, is not entirely an exception. Again Jupiter Pluvius has driven numbers of them from the classrooms for a few months respite at doing the things they love most and which many of them have been looking forward to for four long, bitter years.

Swimmers

"Old Sol" looks down on Ben Ward at the "Bar-H" summer camp at Henderson, North Carolina, where he is life-guard and swimming instructor. "Sol" broadened his smile a couple of Sundays ago when another "Carolina" Ward, Bill, swept to victory in the 55-yard junior national championship free style swimming event at High Point. Or more than a mere summer vacation, Dick Twining is now in the magnetic hands of Uncle Sam's Army. Coach Jamerson, for one, will be happy if he doesn't follow in the footsteps of his renowned father, General Nathan, and decide to stay in the regular Army. Mike Morrow and Snooky Proctor can't be overlooked, even if they are still in school. They are always willing to break someone's record for the asking with the rest of the swimmers and divers chiming in just as readily.

The baseball players really scattered themselves. Up in cool Vermont three of the mainstays on this year's team, Monk Whiteheast and Harry Beason, are whetting themselves for revenge when next season comes around. Monk has won six and lost none for Brattleborough while Harry Beason helps him out with an impressive number of home runs and a .310 batting percentage. John Gregory, one of the best college first basemen in the state last spring, proved his versatility by shifting to the outfield for the same team and maintaining his consistent hitting. Bob Warren, Tom Clayton, and Johnny Colonés are playing at Red Springs, North Carolina, and are reputedly finding their pre-war form. Jim Hayworth has stepped up into the academic department to coach High Point's American Junior Legion Team. The results are proving him worthy of handling youngsters who need guidance in more ways than assuming correct batting stances and sliding into bases.

Footballers

Most of the football team seems to have decided to "sweat out" the summer right here where a gym and swimming pool are always handy. Mike Rubbish and Danny Lounge appear to have gone into sort of seclusion, for no one seems to know of their whereabouts. Charlie Justice and Max Spurlin, after helping out at the housing project, are reportedly working out with the Miami Sea Hawks at Asheville, North Carolina. That represents a wonderful chance for the boys to get used to the feel of the pigskin while at the same time spending some time with the homefolks. Including Hosea Rogers, Bill Meseyko, and Tony Yovicsin in your prayers for not one of the three has yet registered—all have indicated their eagerness to play ball here, but none of the big boys are breathing easy about them yet. Chan Highsmith is very much here and is very much ready for practice to begin on August 16.
